U. S. Receives Air Base Rights From Panama

Facilities Offered Throughout Nation To Defend Canal; Washington Elated

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States yesterday acquired from the Republic of Panama rights to build air bases throughout its territory for defense of the Panama Canal.

Announcement that strategically located Panama was joining the parade to hemisphere solidarity was made by President Arnulfo Arias.

His manifesto, proclaiming the solidarity of Panama with the United States in all matters pertaining to defense of the canal, followed by 24 hours disclosure here that Mexico and the United States have started joint defense talks.

President Arias said, according to dispatches from Panama, that the agreement would permit the United States to use air base, searchlight and detector sites throughout the 33,667-square-mile republic.

Protection Greatly Increased

The State Department and War Department did not conceal their joy at the announcement.

The grant of base rights, military experts said, will allow American air protection forces to spill over the boundary of the 10-mile Canal Zone strip into the nearby republic.

For several years the United States has had rights to a base at Rio Hayto, in the territory of the Panamanian Republic, and this base has been vigorously developed. But it was said yesterday that the new agreement will bring greatly increased protection to the vulnerable locks of the canal, sole link between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans for the one-ocean American Navy.

Treaty Clause Invoked

Top officials are discussing defense base rights with other Latin-American countries and have high hopes that their talks will end successfully. It was hoped yesterday that the Panama action and the start of military conferences with Mexico will influence Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela and other nations "above the bulge" of South America to grant military rights to the United States.

The negotiations with Panama which ended successfully yesterday were, however, in a different category from the talks with other Latin-American nations. The United States invoked an emergency clause of a 1936 treaty to secure the air base rights from Panama.

The 1936 treaty of friendship and cooperation, ratified by the Senate in 1939, contained an agreement that in "case of an international conflagration or the existence of any threat of aggression which would endanger the security of the Republic of Panama or the neutrality or security of the Panama Canal," the two governments would take "such measures of prevention and defense as they may consider necessary for the protection of their common interests."

Good Neighbor Gesture

The manifesto published by President Arias named the "international conflagration" as the reason for bringing this clause into action.

The treaty was criticized by observers before its ratification because it included a specific provision that the American Government renounced the right granted to it in perpetuity by the Panama government in 1903 to occupy—after just compensation—any spots outside of the Canal Zone that might be necessary for the protection of the canal.

Observers believed yesterday that President Arias had written off this

Strike Called For Today At Walter Reed

Walkout Affects One Construction Firm On $750,000 Project

Protesting hiring of an alleged nonunion company on the same project at Army Medical Center, 300 American Federation of Labor union employes of the Skinker & Garrett Construction Co. will go on strike today, union officials announced last night.

The report was confirmed by James R. Skinker, partner in the contracting firm, who said spokesmen for his employes informed him they would not report for work at 7:30 a. m. today.

The Labor Department assigned Frank Sheehan, of the conciliation service, to initiate mediation efforts today.

The $750,000 project of the Army hospital, Georgia Avenue and Butternut Street Northwest, on which both Skinker & Garrett and Sam Merando construction firms are working, includes construction of the following: Fifteen barracks for upward of 500 enlisted men; two officers' quarters with a capacity of 40; two additional patient wards for Walter Reed Hospital; a storeroom and a recreation room.

Representatives of the employes scheduled to strike declare that a large majority of the employes of the rival construction firm, the Merando Co., Inc., are nonunion.

Dies Says Nazis Plan Uprisings In South America

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, declared yesterday the House Committee on un-American Activities had information indicating that Hitler plans to "invade South America from within" and already has German businessmen and others there organized into military units.

The Texan told newsmen he had received word from "some of the most reliable sources in America" that there are more than 1,000,000 Germans in South America "upon whom the Third Reich can absolutely depend."

Senate Gets Action on Aid Bill Changes

Impasse Appears Broken, But Final Vote This Weekend Is Held Unlikely

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday in a flurry of speed adopted every committee amendment to the lend-lease bill, then drew up short behind the Ellender amendment against sending troops or warships overseas.

After 15 days of continuous talk, the impasse on the bill appeared broken. Leaders confidently predicted the Ellender amendment, probably the bill's severest test, will be defeated today.

Filibuster charges abated with the first spurt of action, but the battle of words stretched indefinitely ahead on a score of controversial amendments. Leaders said a vote this weekend is "possible," but unlikely.

Awaiting today's trial on proposed troop and naval restrictions, Senators clashed in a four-hour dispute over constitutional powers of the President as commander in chief of the Nation's armed forces.

Administration Senators contended that the President has the power to send naval vessels and men where he will in the Nation's best interest; that nothing in the bill can affect that power, and that the Ellender amendment "deceives the public."

Secretary of State Hull was reported to have taken a firm stand against the restriction as a virtual invitation to Japan to be more aggressive. This argument was reflected in debate, as leaders ruled out any compromise that might weaken the psychological force of the bill.

Ellender Often Interrupted

Proponents of the amendment retorted that use of troops would be "invited" should the amendment fail, and that England might be "deceived" into thinking the United States will send troops as well as material.

Through the lengthy discussion, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, held the floor in name only, as Senators interrupted his speech to pitch into debate. Ellender had argued that the President, Wendell Willkie and both party platforms took similar stands against use of men overseas. He argued it would "allay the fears of American mothers."

The amendment does not "ban" use of land and naval forces overseas. It merely states that the bill does not authorize such power, which most Senators agree is implicit in the Constitution. But as a policy declaration, the Administration fears it would encourage Japan, injure British morale and create a false impression here.

Vote Purse Control

The disputed amendment reads:

"Nothing contained in this act shall be deemed to confer any additional powers to authorize the employment or use of persons in the land or naval forces of the United States at any place beyond the limits of the Western Hemisphere, except in the Territories and possessions of the United States, including the Philippine Islands."

First action on amendments came after Senator White (Republican), of Maine, speaking for the bill, and Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, speaking against, concluded the two weeks and three days of general debate on the bill.

In addition to formal committee amendments, the Senate swiftly approved an important "purse string" amendment by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and clarifying changes by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina; Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and

Bucharest Puts 1,000,000 Men Under Arms to Face Red Army

By Robert B. Parker, jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Belgrade (Thursday), March 6.—A new phase of the grim Nazi-Soviet chess game with helpless Balkan nations as the pawns was in progress today, with Josef Stalin apparently moving to counter Adolf Hitler's move into Bulgaria.

Despite official secrecy and the breakdown of telephone and telegraph services throughout the Balkans, these facts emerged:

1. Rumania's premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, after an urgent flight to Vienna to confer with Reichsmarshal Goering, called an emergency meeting of the Rumanian cabinet early today on his return to Bucharest.

2. Nearly 1,000,000 Rumanian army reservists, leaving the fields untilled, massed in the vicinity of the Prut River frontier opposite the Red Army.

3. A Soviet note—its contents unknown—was acknowledged by Rumanian government quarters to have been received by Antonescu before his flight to Vienna.

Demands "Ultimative"

High diplomatic quarters here heard last night that Russia had demanded immediate cession by Rumania of Black Sea naval bases; that Russia's demands were of an "ultimative" nature, and hence Antonescu went suddenly to confer with Rumania's German "protectors."

These reports were not confirmed by any source early today, but diplomats who based their conclusions on the reports and on historical facts were ready to believe that Stalin has some sort of move under way to counter the German occupation of Bulgaria.

For centuries Imperial Russia fought bloody and costly wars to keep other great powers away from the Dardanelles, Russia's outlet to the Mediterranean; today German armies are at the Bulgarian-Turkish frontier, less than 100 miles from the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles.

Stalin's game, the diplomats say, is bound to be a sly and tortuous process of bluff and negotiation, but Soviet Russia, like the Czarist regime, is governed by the unchang-

'Absolutely Scandalous . . .'

Sofia, March 5 (AP).—The thin and tired British Minister, George W. Rendel, stiffly correct in striped trousers and morning coat, called for the last time today upon Bulgaria's Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff and read to them one of the most blunt and angry declarations in all the history of diplomacy.

RENDEL

"It is a matter of indifference to His Majesty's government what steps Bulgaria may see fit to take to protect herself against external danger, but the pressure and ever-increasing number of German troops on Bulgarian soil and the growing subservience of the Bulgarian government to German policy is incompatable with the maintenance of diplomatic relations . . ."

Thus he read his manifesto and then he added some remarks of his own, speaking man-to-man to Philoff:

". . . Absolutely scandalous . . . Bulgaria back on the level of barbaric countries. . . Our impression that Bulgaria was a Western nation was wrong . . . I tried for years to deal with Bulgarians as a civilized Western people. That now appears impossible."

German Planes Photographing Greek, Turkish Border Defenses

By the Associated Press

Sofia (Thursday), March 6.—Germany's field army in Bulgaria was concentrated today at Black Sea ports and on the Greek frontier as the Nazis deployed for the great Balkan war so long expected and seemingly all but begun.

Twelve Nazi divisions—some 150,000 men—were reported standing at Bulgaria's frontier with Greece, with more on the way. There were no reports of the number of men Germany has sent to the Black Sea ports.

As the Nazis moved across Bulgaria more came from Rumania—long lines of tanks, armored cars and heavy artillery.

While the troops were taking their stations, observers said, German planes from the Fourth Air Fleet of 1,700 aircraft based in Bulgaria already were busily photographing Greek and Turkish frontier defenses.

Bulgaria and southeastern Europe were on edge, wondering what would come next.

Clash of Arms Near

Waiting only was the actual physical clash of men in arms, and this appeared near. Only yesterday Britain snapped her thin thread of diplomatic relations with Bulgaria, newest convert to the Axis, when British Minister George Rendel served a harsh notification to Premier Philoff.

The prelude to violence—the weeks of diplomatic maneuvering—was running out.

Standing with Germany, as occupied and passive or nonepassive allies, were Bulgaria and Rumania—and Hungary as a potential highway for Nazi troops.

Holding fast to their alliance with Britain, so far as could be seen were Greece and Turkey.

Turkish diplomats in Sofia put it this way:

"We don't change our shirts every day—we remain faithful to Britain!"

Earle to Escort Britons

When the British would strike—if they do—seemed problematical. United States Minister George H. Earle, who will handle British interests in Bulgaria, said Rendel and the last of the British mission would not leave the capital until Monday.

Earle said he planned to accompany the British to the border when they depart.

With the rupture of relations there came a flurry of activity among people holding Allied passports—Polish, Dutch, Belgian, Free French and even Czarist Russians. All were hopeful of getting out of the country before the expected trouble begins.

Bulgaria was occupied by swelling columns of Nazi troops—and nearly all Bulgarians of military age marched off toward the Turkish frontier.

"A Specious Excuse"

Rendel had to walk through a line of parked German military machines to reach Philoff's office and demand passports for himself and his staff.

He ridiculed the notion that Bulgaria had ever been threatened, save by the Axis itself; said the Nazi troops had come into this country on "a specious excuse for masking an ulterior motive."

The Bulgarian government, he said later, had taken "the first step toward plunging Bulgaria into war

Admiralty Calls for More Ships and Men

Commons Warned Of 'Suicide Fleet' Of Nazi Submarines

By the Associated Press

London, March 5.—The greatest need for ships and men in the proud history of British seapower was proclaimed to the House of Commons today by the first lord of the admiralty, A. V. Alexander.

It was an extraordinary plea to Parliament for "many more ships and great numbers of men" . . . to fight "the Battle of the Atlantic" which, beginning now, may mean as much to Britain as did last summer's fateful "Battle of France."

Alexander remained silent, however, when a member asked as to whether the government had "told America that what we require even more urgently than planes and money is ships and still more ships."

From the back benches, Capt. A. S. Cunningham-Reid arose also to warn the House of a "suicide fleet" of U-boats, small, fast, stripped of all but essential gear and manned by skeleton Nazi "volunteers of death" which, he said, Hitler plans to turn loose on British sealanes.

The U-boats, he said, are not expected to return home.

Alexander told the House the 50 American destroyers obtained last year had done good work in helping to meet the U-boat menace, in

Widow Dies in Fire Believed Started By Her Cigarette

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, last night after an investigation into the fatal burning of Mrs. Jean Dee Moran, 60, of 3072 Q Street Northwest.

Mrs. Moran's body was found on a smoldering studio couch at 11 a. m., when a maid, Elizabeth Clark, of 3314 Dent Place Northwest, and two roomers broke in a door. An Emergency Hospital ambulance physician pronounced the woman dead.

Widow of a prominent District architect, William Edward Moran, Mrs. Moran, according to Detective Sergt. Dewey Guest, was a heavy cigarette smoker and it is believed she fell asleep while smoking. The studio couch was burned to the framework, firemen said, though the blaze did not spread through the room. Curtains and a mantelpiece were scorched.

Mrs. Moran, it was said, supervised the rooming house in which she lived.

Capt. Rickenbacker Reported Better

Atlanta, March 5 (U.P.).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, injured in an airliner crash, was given a third blood transfusion today, and his fractured left hip was put in a cast. A physician said tonight "slight, gradual improvement continued" in the condition of the World War ace.

The blood transfusion was given, the doctor said, for its "food value."

Army Bombs Fall Near Virginia Delegate's Home

Newport News, Va., March 5 (AP).—Two bombs fell near the home of William McL. Ferguson, member of the Virginia House of Delegates and son of President Homer L. Ferguson of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation, today as an Army plane passed over.

The bombs blasted craters—"big enough for a man to get into," Ferguson said—about 100 yards from where Ferguson's wife and children were standing.

At Langley Field, Col. Paul J. Mathis, executive officer, said defective mechanism probably was responsible for the accidental release of light "practice" bombs.

Weygand, Petain Confer in Vichy

Vichy, France, March 5 (AP).—Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the French armies of Africa, arrived in Vichy by plane tonight.

Weygand, it was stated, saw Marshal Petain, chief of the French state, almost immediately.

The situation in French Indo-China, where France faces probable territorial losses to Thailand under Japanese mediation of a border dispute, was regarded as one likely subject to be explored.

It may be that Weygand also will take up with Petain the position of French-ruled Syria, which stands in the path of a possible German thrust through southeastern Europe.

Big Nazi Army Is Reported Poised in Libya

How Troops and 1,000 Tanks Got There Is Undetermined

By Bertram D. Hulen.
Copyright by New York Times

Coincident with the occupation of Bulgaria, Germany is sending troops in force into Libya where the British expedition has recently won conspicuous victories over the Italians.

According to information received in Washington through official channels, the German force not only includes dive bombers and panzer (mechanized) divisions but also divisions of regular troops.

The force now totals more than 100,000 men and it is expected it soon will be increased to 12 divisions, or close to 150,000 men. This contrasts with 110,000 British troops estimated to be in that region.

The tanks in the German divisions are believed to number more than 1,000, or twice the number of British tanks. The strength of the air force is not yet known here.

Just how the expedition is being transported has not been ascertained, but it is assumed a route has been found, free from British interference, through islands of the eastern Mediterranean. The movement has been in progress for more than a week and has been steadily growing.

Whether it means that Germany intends to drive out the British from the area merely to eliminate an opportunity for defense of the Suez Canal from that side, or whether it represents the initial movement in a German drive on Egypt and the canal, as part of a pincers movement, with German forces coming down the other side of the Balkans, is uncertain.

However, it is interpreted as signifying that Berlin plans to check the British in that area and to extend and consolidate Nazi control over the entire Eastern Mediterranean.

Obviously it poses a problem for the British of whether to go forward and take the risks of battle, or retreat and suffer the psychological consequences which might be considerable throughout the Middle East.

Britain Plans A Showdown With Belgrade

Envoy to Demand Regent Immediately Clarify Position

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, March 5.—The British minister to Yugoslavia, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, will call on Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia, tomorrow to demand a clear statement of Yugoslav policy toward Britain.

The British minister will ask the regent whether Yugoslavia will sign the tripartite pact, permit the passage of German troops and grant other concessions to Germany, which, from the British viewpoint, would force Britain to consider severance of doplimatic relations with that nation.

This correspondent is informed by a diplomatic source of the utmost reliability that the British minister will inform Prince Paul that Britain is prepared to take immediate and appropriate steps if Yugoslavia follows the example of Rumania and Bulgaria.

Prince Paul returned this morning by special train from Brdo in Slovenia, where unconfirmed rumors from usually well-informed political and diplomatic sources insist that he conferred with Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, as well as

Got Me Wrong, Miss Perkins Says Of Hat Dispute

Women's hats—a general topic of ridicule among men—yesterday got an official stamp of approval from Mrs. Roosevelt. She likes them as they are and thinks that standardization of styles would make them dull.

Why did the First Lady come to the defense of milady's chapeaux? Well, it seems Secretary of Labor Perkins was quoted as favoring style standardization.

But Miss Perkins, who has some unique ideas about hats herself, was only discussing standardization of the hat industry, her office said.

Japan Expands to the West—Buys Garden Site for Embassy

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Empire of Japan is now expanding westward. However, it can be happily reported that the expansion is along Washington's "Embassy Row," and that the living space acquired is a vacant area next door to the Japanese Embassy at 2514 Massachusetts Avenue. It is to be transformed into a peaceful garden.

The land, consisting of two lots, was the site of one of Washington's most famous homes—the gay "pink palace," which was built for Mrs. Margaret Fahnestock Stokes, now Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, of London. The mansion, a glamour spot of Washington for 15 years, was torn down two years ago by its last owners, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

The Auchinclosses sold the property to the Empire of Japan, as the deed has it, for $95,000 on February 27. The two lots are assessed at $64,000. The embassy itself, one of the most attractive along Embassy Row, has an assessed value of $426,500.

The action of Japan in extending its real estate holdings here is in sharp contrast to that of its senior Axis partner, Germany. The Nazis, who occupy a dilapidated, red-brick embassy in the 1400 block of Massa-

Carol and Magda Shake Police On Quiet Spin, Flee to Portugal

By the Associated Press

Seville, Spain, March 5.—The royal foot of Carol, former King of Rumania, stepped on the gas of his big American car during a "quiet spin in the country" Monday and, it was revealed tonight, propelled himself and Magda Lupescu all the way out of suspicious Spain.

Thus Carol and the woman he long ago chose for his constant companion escaped to Portugal from the virtual imprisonment Spain has imposed upon them since they fled from the Iron Guard terror in their homeland last fall.

A mysterious "foreign diplomat" who slipped into the well-watched rooms of Carol's Seville hotel a few days ago was believed to have provided him with the papers necessary to cross the frontier.

(Tonight, in Lisbon, friends admitted cautiously the former sovereign was in Portugal, but declined to disclose his precise whereabouts. In Bucharest, it was hinted he had been supplied with a Polish passport.)

Carol and his red-haired friend apparently had made the most careful plans for several weeks for their escape.

They left behind nothing of value but their four dogs—two Pekinese and two fox terriers—and three automobiles, including the one in which they escaped. This was found

Japan Claims Big Advances In South China

By the United Press

Shanghai, Thursday, March 6.—A large Japanese expeditionary army which was landed Monday at six places on the South China coast was driving inland today apparently with the double purpose of closing Chinese munitions routes and forcing French Indo-China to accept a Japan-sponsored settlement of the border conflict with Thailand.

The Japanese reported that scattered Chinese forces were in "full retreat" along a network of high ways leading inland from Portuguese Macao, south of Britain's Hongkong naval station, to points west of Pakhoi on the northern shore of the Gulf of Tongking, near the borders of Indo-China. They claimed capture of Kwonghoi, Yeungkong, Tingpak and Suitung on the Luichow Peninsula.

Reoccupation of Nanning, former Capital of Kwangsi Province, South China, which the Japanese abandoned last year, was expected. The Japanese were advancing in six major columns on a front of about 250 miles, led by mechanized units which were fanning out against "all points of Chinese resistance."

Chinese forces, estimated at more than 200,000, were holding a line running southward from points north of Nanning to the Indo-China border near Lungchow and were expected to offer strong resistance.

In Chungking a Chinese government broadcast yesterday said the Japanese had amassed 70,000 troops on Hainan Island, large Japanese base off Indo-China, and that more Japanese warships had arrived in the Gulf of Tongking to reinforce the already strong Japanese forces there. The harbors of Hainan were said to be filled with warships while a submarine base was being constructed in Yulin.

Chungking also asserted that German and Italian technical advisers were assisting the Japanese in transforming the Spratley and Paracel Islands in the South China Sea into naval and air bases "preparatory to a southward push," presumably toward Britain's Singapore base.

Countering the new Japanese successes the Chinese claimed, in an official statement in Chungking, that Chinese shore batteries and mines in the Yangtze River sank 192 Japanese warcraft in 1940 and damaged an additional 188. Ships sunk included 27 "medium-sized warships," 10 small warships, 26 transports, 3 armed merchantmen, 118 steam launches and 8 tugs, it was claimed.

and her territory into a bloody battlefield."

Thus he reiterated by implication many warnings that a British-Bulgarian break would bring British bombers over Bulgaria and Rumania as well—Rumania, long since occupied by the Nazis and now a way point in the continuing German troop movement toward Greece and Turkey.

While the minister was saying his cold, good-bys to Sofia, Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, and Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the British imperial staff, finished urgent conferences with Greek leaders at Athens on how best to meet an attack from the German Balkan armies.

Eden left Greece tonight, presumably for Cairo, after having "agreed on all aspects of the situation," the government announced.

The Greek general staff disclosed that "considerable forces" had been dispatched to Macedonia and eastern Thrace—which face Bulgaria—"because of a new situation." Thousands of Greek soldiers and workmen labored urgently to strengthen the fortifications which stand athwart the mountain passes leading from Bulgaria.

Meanwhile, thousands of students, wearing swastika arm bands, walked the streets of Sofia cheering the Nazi military columns; the Bulgarian army took over all radio stations, the telephone and telegraph.

The German general staff set up headquarters in Plovdiv, Bulgaria's second largest city.

The Bulgarian Press Bureau denied reports that Foreign Minister Popoff had resigned in disagreement with Premier Philoff about letting the Germans in.

Popoff was officially, and perhaps diplomatically, ill when Philoff went to Vienna to sign up.

Four employes of the British legation, including one with a British passport, were arrested by secret police but all save one—a Bulgarian subject—had been released tonight.

In London the British government announced that Bulgaria was now an "enemy destination" and that all goods of Bulgarian origin or ownership were liable to seizure. This was tantamount to extension of the blockade to that country.

Dean Doyle Warns Of Totalitarian Thinking in U. S.

A warning that United States citizens, to a certain extent, are showing trends toward totalitarian thinking was sounded yesterday by Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of Columbian College, George Washington University, at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Rotary Club, in the Willard Hotel.

"The groundwork for totalitarian thinking," he said, "is being laid in many ways. Intolerance—exhibitions of racial and religious prejudices—is one example of the workings of a totalitarian mind."

"In our dealing with Latin-American countries," said Dean Doyle, "we are too apt to scoff at their way of living and too willing to say, 'Let's help them out; let's take them over and teach them our way of living.'"

Future May Be Arduous, Eden Warns Greeks

By C. L. Sulzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, March 5.—In a message addressed to the Greek people and made public a short time after he had left tonight for Egypt with the members of his mission, Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, frankly forecast a period of trials and difficulties, but promised Britain's unflinching aid to her small ally until the attainment of ultimate success.

A communique said that Eden and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, had conferred at length with King George II and Premier Alexander Korisis and that the representatives of the two governments had carefully examined the situation in the Balkans.

"They have found themselves," it was announced, "in complete agreement on all points of the situation."

The communique added:

"Eden expressed his admiration for the heroic resistance and the victories of the Greek army. On his part, Korisis availed himself of the opportunity to renew the expression of deep gratitude of the royal government and the Greek people for the invaluable assistance rendered Greece by Britain in the struggle against the unprovoked aggression of Italy, of which she became the victim."

Eden's message said:

"Like all Englishmen, we have for many months watched with admiration the heroic resistance of the Greeks to a brutal attack. We have eagerly followed the feats of arms brilliantly conceived by her leaders and courageously carried out by the men of her army, navy and air force.

"Now we can see for ourselves the spirit and resolution which animate every man and woman in this country.

"We in England are proud that the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force have had the privilege of contributing to your magnificent victory.

"The future may be arduous but be assured that we shall not rest nor falter until the final victory is won."

The Athens radio tonight stated that the Greeks were facing "with Olympian calm" all possible developments in the Balkans and that Greece, "by using her traditions and her heroic army, will face united any new attack which may present itself."

Italy to Promote Bachelor Officers

Big Fires Set In Boulogne, R.A.F. Reports

By the Associated Press

London, March 5.—In a daylight raid in force across the English Channel British bombers assaulted the Nazi-held Boulogne this afternoon and harried the coastal areas of northern France, the air ministry announced tonight.

The Boulogne docks were said to have been squarely hit and a fire set off in the inner harbor.

One German fighter plane was destroyed, the ministry added, and six seriously damaged—perhaps shot down, although their destruction could not be officially confirmed.

The loss of three British fighter craft was acknowledged.

A German Messerschmitt plunged into the channel from a combat 30,000 feet high, the Air Ministry reported, although not a shot had been fired at it.

"I saw a 109 (Messerschmitt) on my tail," a returning British pilot explained. "At once I took evasive action in order to get into position to let him have it, but Jerry was rushing down at such high speed that he failed to pull out of his dive and went crashing into the sea."

Defensively, the day was light. So far as could be learned, it was officially stated, not a German bomb fell on all Britain during the day. London had an inconsequential afternoon alarm.

The admiralty briefly announced that British naval forces had successfully raided "German interests in the Lofoten Islands off Norway" yesterday, but said details of the action had not been learned.

(The Germans had stated previously that light British naval units bombarded an island off Norway, landed a force, took a number of German and Norwegian prisoners and then withdrew.)

ing geographic and strategic principles.

To counter Germany's new military position with new positions of his own would fit logically into Stalin's scheme of things.

The diplomats agreed that the game will be full of audacious moves.

There are some who think Germany may make Rumania pay the price of the strategic Black Sea bases in order to keep Russia satisfied and not risk the possibility of a letdown in Russian oil and food supplies and raw materials for Germany.

Outbluffing Suspected

On the other land, the presence of 1,000,000 Rumanian soldiers, partly officered and equipped by Germans, is seen by another diplomatic school of thought as Germany's choosen means of outbluffing Stalin.

Few if any diplomats expect this game to come to a showdown before many months have elapsed, but nearly every observer is sure it is coming eventually and that Russia's open criticism of Bulgaria for permitting the entry of Nazi troops marked the first public display of Stalin's feelings.

For the first time since the war started, German-Russian collaboration has come up against the age-old problems of Pan-Slavism and Pan-Germanism.

Old Wound Opened

Heretofore, the Moscow and Berlin regimes have mapped out clearly their zones of influence. They divided Poland; Russia took the Baltic states and Rumanian Bessarabia; Germany occupied Rumania. But the occupation of Bulgaria—"Russia's little brother" to every Bulgar peasant—appears to have opened the old wound that brought Germany and Russia to war in 1914.

In Bulgaria the historical interests of Germans and Russians come to the crossroads, the route of Germany "Drang nach Osten"—drive to the East—meeting that of Russia's traditional push toward the west.

Military observers and historians have held for years that the nation which holds Istanbul and the Dardanelles will have the upper hand.

Diplomatic observers expressed the belief that Stalin had let Hitler get the distinct advantage by moving into Bulgaria but they were certain the master of the Kremlin must seek to counter it with some bold stroke of his own.

French Fail To Make Peace Reply, Japan Says

Tokyo (Thursday), March 6 (AP). Domei, Japanese news service, reported today the French Indo-China-Thailand peace conference became "unpredictable" because the French failed to present a final reply yesterday despite Japanese expectations of an answer.

An emergency cabinet meeting was expected today to discuss measures of "coping with the worst possible situation," it was said.

Only last night it was authoritatively indicated that only technical details remained to be worked out. The Thailand-Indo-China armistice which ended border fighting is due to expire Friday but there were unconfirmed reports it would be extended again.

Rome Predicts German Drive On Salonika

By the Associated Press

Rome, March 5.—A clash of British and German armies for Salonika, key to the back door of Europe, was envisaged by Roman observers tonight, after Virginio Gayda, the authoritative Italian commentator, declared nearly a whole division of Canadian troops already had reached that ancient Greek city.

Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia of a reported plan by the British to divert many divisions to the aid of Greece from the North African front, viewed the prospect with equanimity.

He said Germany "is bringing a fresh and powerful contribution of forces against the coalition of the British imperial armies."

German forces in Bulgaria are but 65 miles from Salonika, upon which the fate of all Greece largely depends. However, German seizure of Salonika would give the Nazis both sea and air bases for attacks on the Suez Canal and other British Mediterranean strongholds.

City Easily Defended

But it is easily defended, dominating as it does the Balkan valley approaches to the Aegean. It was from Salonika, too, that the Allied armies under Gen. Franchet d'Esperey began an offensive late in 1918 which crushed Bulgaria in less than one month and forced the surrender of Turkey in two.

With only a month or two left in North Africa before the sun becomes too hot for fighting, the British commander, Gen. Sir Archibald H. P. Wavell, presumably will be able to leave a reduced defensive line along the western Cirenaician border in Libya and divert many of his units to Greece.

Duce Prefers to Do the Job

Gayda estimated Wavell had 20 divisions in the Mediterranean, much motor-hauled artillery and motorized and armored equipment, "furnished largely by the United States"—plus large naval forces.

The Germans, therefore, are expected here to drive on Salonika to prevent any further British landings and to force those troops which already may be there to duplicate the withdrawal of Dunkerque.

Il Duce, it is considered, wants his own legions rather than the Germans to effect a defeat of the Greeks in the field.

If the Greeks, without adequate British aid, are driven from Albania, they may give in and cede territory to Italy on the west, and to Bulgaria on the east, in the view of Italians.

As for Turkey, Italians feel the German "army of security" in Bulgaria will be a constant warning against aid to the Greeks or joining in British military action, while the Nazis wait for the capitulation of Greece before undertaking the long-awaited thrust at the Dardanelles, Syria and the oil fields beyond.

Awaiting the spring crisis, Italian warships were reported today to have bombarded the Greeks on the Albanian coast. Six British or Greek planes which attacked the warships were shot down, the high command said. Two Italian planes were admitted to have been lost.

Other Fascist planes attacked the British bases on the Island of Crete, while German dive-bombers made a raid on British positions in North Africa, it was announced.

Ethiopians Route Fascists, Capture Fort

By the Associated Press

(Cairo, March 5.—Native Ethiopians have routed an Italian garrison of 20,000 in Gojjam Province and seized the Fort of Burye, 140 miles northwest of Addis Ababa in a revolt "spreading like wildfire," the British announced tonight.

(A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Khartoum reported other rebels even had occupied Mansuka Village; 8 miles east of Debra Markos, Italian headquarters 115 miles from the capital, Addis Ababa.)

From Burye, near Lake Tana, the Italians were said to be falling back over a 50-mile mountainous road to Debra Markos with the dusky "patriots" in close pursuit.

The Ethiopians were assisted in their capture of Burye by heavy desertions of both native conscripts and Italian regulars in the garrison of 2,000 to 3,000 men, said British informants.

A communique said "1,500 Italian regulars and 200 colonial troops have deserted with their weapons to join the patriots."

The British said other strong points in the province were being abandoned by the Italians, and apparently they were planning a strong stand at Debra Markos.

The "patriots" were declared to be confident, however, that they could successfully attack that point.

Britain to Demand Yugoslavia's Stand

the German Minister to Yugoslavia.

The British Minister flew back to Belgrade yesterday from Athens, where he conferred with Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary; Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British imperial staff, and Greek government leaders.

There were insistent rumors in Belgrade this evening of a crown council meeting or a special cabinet session but no such session had been called at a late hour. The government press bureau declared there would be no such session tonight.

Ministerial conferences took place throughout the afternoon and early evening, and it is considered probable a full-dress cabinet session may be held tomorrow. Authoritative political sources, however, expressed doubt that a crown council meeting of Prince Paul, the other two regents, members of the cabinet and the patriarch would be called except in the case of a national emergency. The last crown council meeting, according to official records, was held in 1934 following the assassination of King Alexander in Marseille.

The "well-known British plans in southeastern Europe" are known—as far as this correspondent was able to ascertain in Belgrade—only to the German high command or Nazi newspapermen in the Berlin press and propaganda bureau, which continues to reiterate this phrase in official dispatches.

There is no inkling in the circles usually best-informed here about Britain's next move in the Balkans. However, one British diplomat assured this correspondent tonight that if such plans as described by the German newspapers and agencies did not exist before, they are in existence now and will be implemented shortly.

The Belgrade evening newspaper Veche published an extraordinary dispatch today reporting that the Greek government will shortly sue for an armistice with Italy, the Greek government will shortly move to the island of Crete and that even now Greek government leaders are struggling to maintain leadership against threatened revolution.

The dispatch, sent by the Veche's Berlin correspondent, was based allegedly upon information from official circles in Budapest and Sofia. Official Greek circles here labeled the dispatch "absolute nonsense" in all particulars, but took a serious view of its publication having been permitted in the controlled Yugoslav press.

The atmosphere of pessimism which has overhung Belgrade for five days, beginning with the occupation of Bulgaria and deepening with the mysterious journey of the prince regent to Slovenia, seemed even heavier tonight. Rumors circulated everywhere that the tripartite pact had already been signed secretly or will be signed within a day or two. Dr. Alexander Cincar-Markovitch's foreign policy statement, issued through the Journal de Geneve and released simultaneously through this morning's Politika and Vreme, made little actual impression upon diplomats here, as it only reiterated the aims of maintenance of peace and security and virtually duplicated previous foreign policy statements of the foreign minister and the premier. One feature of the statement interested close readers: the word "neutrality" appeared nowhere in the text.

Some diplomats here believe that the Soviet statement to Bulgaria against the German troop occupation was having a bracing effect on government circles, but this correspondent can find little to confirm this belief yet.

The feeling was growing in Belgrade diplomatic circles here late tonight that Regent Paul or the foreign minister might feel himself compelled by increasing public uneasiness and other factors to make some kind of a public declaration tomorrow or tomorrow night.

Germans Call Coup a Wrench In British Plans

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 5.—German circles asserted tonight that swift-moving Nazi Panzer units in Bulgaria thwarted British designs to establish a military front against Germany along a line running from Belgrade through Sofia to Istanbul.

The presence of the troops, described as a monkey wrench in the British diplomatic-military machine, have forced the British to break with Sofia, and reestablish their line from Istanbul to Athens, these circles commented.

However, in view of the Berlin Nachtausgabe, this new line can be only "an attempt to fight a military withdrawal maneuver."

The talk between Reich Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Premier Ion Antonescu of Rumania in Vienna today was described as another nail driven to secure the Balkans to Germany.

It was emphasized in informed circles that the conversations were of military character.

They were not concluded until this evening and Antonescu returned by plane to Bucharest. He said merely that "economic questions—among other things" had been discussed.

Following an announcement by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop that Bulgaria would not be the last nation to join the Axis, neutral observers gave sharpest attention to reports that Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia, was exchanging views with high German officials.

However, no official would comment on the reports.

On the military front, German air activity continued over England, particularly against London and Cardiff, Wales.

British airmen attacking Boulogne and other French ports were said to have tangled with German pursuit planes over the English Channel and D. N. B., official news agency, said seven Spitfires were shot down.

Carol and Magda Flee to Portugal

later abandoned in a wood near the frontier.

A "friend from Portugal" called upon Mme. Lupescu a few days ago and took away her furs.

Even Carol's memoirs, upon which he had been working during his long enforced stay in Seville, were missing when police ransacked their rooms.

Their heavier luggage had been sent ahead to Portugal several weeks ago.

For some time Carol and Mme. Lupescu had been in the habit of taking long drives in the country without a chauffeur. On such times they were accompanied by a small police patrol.

On Monday night, Carol sent Magda's maid on a errand and his valet to the postoffice with a letter addressed to the Rumanian consul in Lisbon.

Mme. Lupescu made an appointment with a doctor for late Monday evening, and instructed the hotel porter to have him wait until she returned. The doctor, presumably, still is waiting.

Bystanders said the pair appeared in high youthful spirits as they got into their car and drove off.

Twenty miles north of Seville at the Extremadura Crossroads, Carol suddenly turned west toward the frontier, 87 miles away, and stepped on the gas.

The police said they soon were outdistanced.

Carol abdicated in favor of his son, Mihai, September 6 in the midst of Iron Guard riots and assassination attempts which followed loss of Rumanian territory to Russia and Hungary.

He fled to Spain, arriving September 13, but was stopped from going on to Portugal and possibly the United States.

escort and in rescuing seamen.

To resounding cheers, he added that "American aircraft are now in service with the fleet air arm and many more are yet to come. During the course of the year we shall receive from America a great reinforcement of ordnance and stores."

Alexander's remarks were made as he asked for a token appropriation of £100 (about $400), to which the House agreed without a record vote. Although this would be the amount on the appropriation bill, it authorizes the admiralty to spend vast sums, the exact amount of which will be kept secret.

The admiralty chieftain assured the House that "the great body of the fleet of August, 1939, remains intact" and added that ships coming into service in 1941 "would of themselves make up a formidable force."

In the next breath he warned, nevertheless, that German submarines now using French bases are close to their prowling grounds and that German bombers "are enabled to prey upon our convoys far out at sea."

Alexander credited British submarines with sinking "something like 100 enemy warships and supply ships," but conceded that "on one or two occasions a raider has encountered a convoy with inferior protection and has inflicted relatively heavy loss."

"But for every convoy attacked," he added, "scores have come through without molestation."

Lieut. Adams Made 29th's Athletic Chief

By Marshall Andrews
A Staff Correspondent

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 5.—Lieut. George J. Adams, of Rockville, Md., a member of Company M, 115th Infantry, has been appointed athletic officer of the Twenty-ninth Division, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, announced today.

Lieut. Adams, a writer and an attache of the public information department of the American Red Cross in civil life, was an enlisted man in Service Company, 115th Infantry, of Silver Spring, before being commissioned. He was boxing champion at Harvard in 1924 and 1925 and a football star. He is 31 years old.

He said today he would organize boxing and wrestling matches and lay stress on football, baseball, basketball, soccer, track and cross-country running. As rapidly as equipment is available, he said, volleyball and softball would be introduced.

Several hundred officers of the division are to be considered soon for promotion, it was learned today. An examining board has been requested, which will consider recommendations of regimental commanders as soon as appointed and convened.

Gen. Amaro Bittencourt, deputy chief of staff of the Brazilian army and head of the Brazilian purchasing commission in this country, was guest of Fort Meade and the Twenty-ninth Division today. He inspected the Seventieth Tank Battalion and the Ninety-third Anti-tank Battalion, Regular Army, and went through schools of the Twenty-ninth Division and saw the Infantry and Artillery regiments at drill.

With Gen. Bittencourt were Lieut. Col. Stenio Lima, his aide; Capt. Carlos M. Frankel, of the Brazilian army, and Lieut. Lloyd H. Gomez, United States Army, who acted as interpreter.

Col. Arthur P. Schock, commanding the 176th Field Artillery, of Pittsburgh, was notified today that his appeal from a physical disqualification had been denied. He spent several days in Washington and underwent a second examination at Walter Reed General Hospital last week, rejoining his regiment last Wednesday.

Lieut. Col. John Nash, Regular Army, was attached to the 176th today, acting in command. Col. Nash has been instructor of the 110th Field Artillery, Maryland National Guard, for three years.

Kindly Conspiracy Spares Parents

There's an elderly couple in Chicago who receive a letter every day from their son at Fort Meade. He isn't at Meade; he's in Chicago, too. But he's in a tuberculosis hospital there, fighting the malady which he never dreamed had seized hold on him until revealed by an Army X-ray.

This boy, whose name must remain hidden, came out to Meade with a Washington company. He gave up a fine job to come into service with the National Guard and he was one of those earnest, studious fellows who spent his off hours studying how to be a good soldier. Then the Army dropped him because it found his hidden tuberculosis.

Every day, now, a friend in the old company here gets a letter from Chicago containing another addressed to the boy's parents in Chicago. The friend mails the letters faithfully. Today there was a note with the daily letter.

"Please send me some more Fort Meade postcards," it read.

Corporal Bud Severed From Service

Corpl. Bud, unable to stand the rigors and discipline of life at Fort Meade, was dishonorably discharged from the Twenty-ninth Division today and returned to private life.

Corpl. Bud is a little black dog of polyglot ancestry who was brought to camp as mascot of the special troops by Private T. W. Childs, of division headquarters. Bud comported himself with dignity beyond his eight months immediately after his arrival here. Then a change came over him.

He disappeared for several days and was discovered in the 115th Infantry area. Returned to his quarters, Bud was court-martialed and stripped of his stripes. He disappeared again, was brought home and disappeared a third time.

When he showed up today, Private Childs gave up the fight. Charged with being A. W. O. L., with desertion and with conduct unbecoming a mascot and a soldier, he was court-martialed again and severed from the service.

Gen. McCoy, Three Others Off on Air Tour of Americas

By the Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy and three companions took off from Washington Airport yesterday on a 28,000-mile inter-American escadrille air tour of the American republics.

The amphibian plane which will carry Gen. McCoy, his assistant and counsel, Walter Bruce Howe, with J. M. Farris, on leave from Eastern Airlines, as chief pilot; Alfredo de Los Rios, Chilean-born flier and journalist, as co-pilot, and Luis O. Medinia, of Bogota, Colombia, mechanic, was purchased by Laurence Rockefeller, son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., and loaned for the tour.

Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of commerical and cultural relations between the American republics; Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of Pan American Union, and other officials were at the airport for the takeoff.

Gen. McCoy and his group will contact leaders of civil aviation in each of the other 20 republics to obtain their views on the future development of aviation in the hemisphere and in establishing chapters of the escadrille, a private non-profit organization.

U. S. Settles 6 Defense Strikes, Postpones Utility 'Blackout'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Mediators of the Office of Production Management and United States Conciliation Service chalked up a red-letter day yesterday with the settlement of six strikes in defense industries and success in postponing for 48 hours a threatened utility company strike that would have "blacked out" a great defense area in southern Michigan.

As progress was reported from conferences seeking settlement of two other stubborn disputes, however, a sprinkling of small strikes broke out in other parts of the country and a threat of an even more serious walkout came from C. I. O. Aluminum Workers at the Edgewater, N. J., plant of Aluminum Co. of America.

Most serious threatened strike, that of A. F. of L. electrical workers against Consumer Power Co., was postponed for two days only a few minutes before a strike deadline set for 3 p. m. yesterday. Agreement to continue negotiations for 48 hours followed receipt of identical telegrams to union and management from Defense Chiefs William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman. The utility serves some 900 Michigan communities, and its shutdown would virtually paralyze all the State's industrial plants except those in the Detroit area. Knudsen and Hillman asked that a "sincere effort" be made to reach an agreement, "because of importance of electric power to firms holding millions of dollars in defense contracts."

A luncheon conference between President Roosevelt and Phillip Murray, president of the C. I. O., meanwhile, revived reports that the President contemplates recommending some sort of defense labor mediation machinery. Knudsen, who has proposed a "cooling off" period before strikes in defense industries may occur, conferred with the President earlier in the day.

Five of yesterday's settlements ended A. F. of L. jurisdictional disputes between roofers and carpenters working on the Watertown Arsenal, in Massachusetts, and on four Maryland defense projects, including Fort Meade, the Glenn L. Martin Co. airplane plant, a dormitory at the Naval Academy, and the Edgewood Arsenal. About 1,200 strikers are expected to return to their jobs today, following conferences between union leaders and OPM Mediator Joseph Keenan.

Chattanooga Strike Over

The carpenter-roofer disputes halted work for only one day.

The sixth settlement will send 350 members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee back to work in the Combustion Engineering Co. plant at Chattanooga, Tenn., today. The plant, which manufactures heavy machinery for production of chemicals, particularly nitric acid used for defense needs, has been shut down since February 21.

OPM conferences between labor and management of the Universal Cyclops Co. ended on a hopeful note last night with the promise of both sides to study means of settlement. A deadline of a week was set before the OPM will take further action. The strike, involving 1,000 members of the C. I. O. Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, has closed the concern's Pittsburgh plant since February 24.

It was also learned from OPM sources that C. I. O. workers of the neighboring plant of Vanadium Co. of America are scheduled to consider in the near future an OPM proposal for the resumption of work, following a strike of several weeks.

At the Labor Department, conferences were resumed at 8 p. m. yesterday between Conciliation Chief John R. Steelman and labor and management representatives of the International Harvester Co., four of whose plants are strikebound. The conferences were said to have taken an improved turn yesterday.

Aluminum Ballot

The Aluminum Co. strike threat, arising out of disputes over the overtime clauses in the union's working agreement with the company, will be crystallized today and tomorrow as some 3,000 workers ballot on whether to strike.

The United States Conciliation Service dispatched Commissioner William Cann to seek a settlement. The ten-story factory is working almost entirely on defense priorities.

At Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, A. F. of L. construction workers continued their strike on work described by the Army as "essential" to defense. Both C. I. O. and A. F. of L. officials here indicated they would stand pat.

Other strikes which developed yesterday in defense industries:

Two Mills Shut Down

A C. I. O. dues and membership drive curtailed operations at the Pittsburgh-Crucible Steel Co. works at Midland, Pa. Two mills, employing 600 workers, were shut down.

At Orange, Tex., 247 employes of Consolidated Steel Corporation left their jobs of supplying material for 12 destroyers. The consequent delay in materials may cause further layoffs of 400 men constructing shipyard facilities, it was reported.

Fourteen tugs were strike-bound in the harbor at Norfolk, Va.

Pennsylvania Strikes

Production on defense contracts at the Neville Island, Pa., plant of the Curtiss Wright Corporation was halted by a C. I. O. strike.

Members of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee called a strike last night at the Pottstown, Pa., plant of the Stanley G. Flagg Co., makers of forgings. About 400 workers are involved.

The White Oak Mills, in Greensboro, N. C., largest manufacturers of denim in the world, with 2,077 employes, closed after a workers' committee sought a wage increase from 32½ to 40 cents an hour and protested addition of the output of 500 more looms to the finishing room's operations.

Army Refuses to Feed Selectee's Elephant

Dallas, March 5 (AP).—Army induction officials declined today to feed an elephant at a yearly cost of $2,840 if James J. Hamiter, jr., is drafted.

Hamiter, owner of a small circus, said that if he goes into the Army someone would have to feed the pachyderm.

$1,533,567,102 Approved for Air Defenses

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Supplemental defense funds totaling $1,533,567,102, for strengthening air outposts in the mid-Pacific and Atlantic and speeding warship building, were approved by a Senate appropriations subcommittee yesterday.

The group indorsed the expenditure of $8,100,000 for an air base at Samoa and $4,700,000 for improving defenses at Guam. Also included in the fourth supplemental defense supply bill of the session are funds for beginning construction of 400 subchasers, patrol boats and other small warships.

$187,400 Added

A total of $187,400 was added to the amount voted by the House last week. Additions included $60,000 for fleet training, $125,000 for Civil Service investigators, and $2,400 for Navy automobiles. The full committee will pass on the bill today.

An amendment offered by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, was adopted, which would prohibit spending money for construction of industrial plants to supply the Navy unless the sites were approved by a special board.

The board would be composed of the director general and associate director general of the OPM and the agricultural commissioner of the Defense Commission.

Stimson Names Four Engineers

Besides construction of naval and air bases and speeding ship construction, the bill carries $675,283,000 for construction of Army posts.

Secretary Stimson yesterday appointed four additional engineers to a committee formed recently to help the War Department compile and distribute information concerning the protection of civilians and "vital civilian installations" in time of war.

Those appointed were:

E. M. Hastings, Richmond, Va., of the American Railway Engineering Association; W. Cullen Morris, New York City, of the American Gas Association; John C. Parker, New York City, electrical engineer, and Frederick G. Frost, New York City, of the American Institute of Architects.

Stimson disclosed a booklet concerning air raid and other types of shelter to protect civilians in war time would be published shortly.

Mediterranean War a Hardship To Dope Pedlers

Harry J. Anslinger, narcotics commissioner, said yesterday war in the Mediterranean has nearly cut off illicit narcotics smuggling from that area to the United States.

One common narcotic, he said, is so scarce that smugglers are selling adulterated mixtures with only 1 per cent narcotic in them. He termed this mixture so weak that it would not satisfy the cravings of an addict.

Yugoslavia and Turkey, Anslinger explained, are the principal sources of narcotics for the United States, particularly of the legitimate kind. So far, he added, the war had not interfered with the purchase of legitimate narcotics from these countries, although the involvement of Bulgaria may make it difficult to get narcotics from Yugoslavia to Turkey from which it is now shipped to the United States through the Indian Ocean and around Africa.

"We are not worried about legitimate supplies," Anslinger said, 'because we have been storing up enough legitimate narcotics to have a three-year supply on hand all the time."

Gen. C. D. Herron Will Be Retired Under Age Limit

The forthcoming retirement of Lieut. Gen. Charles D. Herron, until recently commander of the Hawaiian Department, was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Gen. Herron, who plans to make his home at his Montgomery County farm, reaches the statutory retirement age this month. A native of Indiana, he was graduated from West Point in 1899 and served with distinction in both the Philippine Insurrection and the World War.

For service as chief of staff of the Seventy-eighth Division during the Meuse-Argonne offensive in 1918, he won the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Legion of Honor. He served here several years as War Department executive for Reserve Affairs.

Violinist Among 141 D. C. Men To Be Inducted Tomorrow

Paul Brightenburg Says He'll Appeal On Health Grounds

Washington Selective Service headquarters yesterday announced the names of 141 Capital men to be inducted into the Army tomorrow including Paul W. Brightenburg, violinist formerly with the National Symphony Orchestra.

The announcement came on the eve of the departure of 250 District trainees, who were inducted Monday and Tuesday, for Fort Bliss, Tex., from Camp Lee, Va. Having completed their two-day "processing" at the Virginia reception center, they will now join the 260th Coast Artillery at Fort Bliss.

While Brightenburg is scheduled for induction at Baltimore tomorrow, the musician last night declared he would appeal his selection today. He only recently left George Washington Hospital after suffering two years from an anemic infection.

Brightenburg said he understood his induction would be postponed pending review of his physical examination by medical experts. He added:

"I would not mind serving in the Army but I am appealing the case. I don't feel I have sufficient strength at this time to go through the daily Army routine."

Meanwhile, the War Department reported shoe repair instructors were to be sent to Camp Lee to teach enlisted personnel who will form the basis of mobile shoemaker units.

Registrants to be inducted tomorrow follow (all addresses are Northwest unless otherwise specified).

Destroyer Ludlow Is Commissioned

Boston, March 5 (AP).—The $5,000,000 destroyer Ludlow was commissioned today at the Boston Navy Yard three hours after arriving from the Bath Iron Works in Maine.

The keel of the vessel was laid December 18, 1939, and she was completed several months ahead of schedule.

Bulgars Apologize For Stopping Earle At Yugoslav Line

United States Minister to Bulgaria George H. Earle advised the State Department last night the Bulgarian foreign office has made a "courteous and complete apology" for the action of border guards in preventing Earle from crossing the border into Yugoslavia last Saturday night, following German occupation of Bulgaria.

The department disclosed a cable dispatch from Earle, dated March 4, had been received reporting he had twice tried to cross the Bulgarian-Yugoslavian border on the night of March 1, to cable to the department reports of the Nazi occupation, but had been stopped by Bulgarian border guards.

Earle reported he had made representations promptly to the foreign office, and had received complete apology.

Roosevelt Nominates Wakefield to FCC

Ray C. Wakefield, of Fresno, Calif., was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Wakefield, who has been a member of the California Railroad Commission since 1937, will succeed, if confirmed by the Senate, the late Thad Brown, of Ohio.

The nomination was for an unexpired term of seven years dating from last July 1.

Wakefield, 45, is a Republican, a graduate of Stanford University, and a member of the California bar. His offices have been in San Francisco.

The President sent to the Senate also the nomination of William H. Burke, of Little River, Kans., to be Internal Revenue Collector for the Kansas District.

U. S. Obtains Right to Base Planes Throughout Panama

clause as a "good neighbor gesture" of the type made in peace time, and had decided to grant the base sites in spite of the language of that section of the treaty.

President Roosevelt's visit to Panama in February, 1940, was believed to have aided the conclusion of the negotiations. After his return from that trip it was reported that he had received assurances from Panama, as well as from Colombia and Costa Rica, that they would allow American military planes to use their air fields in an international emergency.

It was recalled that President Arias declared in a speech January 2 of this year that his government was "ready to lend its cooperation to facilitate the defense program that the War and Navy Departments of the United States contemplate."

"The great development in importance of military aviation makes it indispensable that there be extended vigilance and alert stations," Arias said two months ago, "in territories that are outside the boundaries of the Canal Zone proper to insure the canal's due protection and command."

Conducted in Panama

The agreement on air bases was seen as a direct outgrowth of the policy Arias announced in January.

Ambassador Carlos Brin of Panama told The Post last night that the negotiations had been conducted in Panama, presumably between President Arias and United States Ambassador William Dawson.

Secretary Hull, when he learned that announcement of the air base deal had been made public, told reporters that he was very much pleased at the fine spirit of cooperation shown by the Republic of Panama in the successful conclusion of negotiations.

The new defense rights would be of considerable value in protecting the canal from sudden air attacks, military experts said.

Gives Precious Minutes

Permitting United States aircraft and detector devices to fan out from the small zone into the republic would give defenders a few more valuable minutes' time to learn of an approaching attack and to rise to meet it, officers said.

An Air Corps officer said that in time of war it would be unwise to station much more than a single squadron of planes on one field. Since the Canal Zone itself has only a limited number of air fields, centering around two main bases, addition of bases in the Republic of Panama would make wartime disposition of the air force much easier, it was said.

Placing antiaircraft searchlights and detectors inside Panama's territory would have the effect of warning defenders of the zone several minutes earlier of any approaching attack.

One difficulty in defending the canal, experts have frequently said, is that it is such a narrow strip, surrounded by foreign countries over whose policies the United States has no formal control. Acquisition of sites in Panama was expected to improve that situation somewhat.

"It is not safe to put all your eggs in one basket. This gives us some more baskets," one veteran officer said.

The projected system of air defense in Panama will be supplementary to other important American bases in the Caribbean and the bases to be built on sites newly-acquired from Great Britain in exchange for destroyers.

The installations on the canal, itself are regarded as a "last line" of defense. The new air bases in Panama would be a "next to last line." Bases at Bermuda, Trinidad, Puerto Rico, Antigua, St. Lucia and British Guiana would be the "front line for defense of the canal.

Other Sites Surveyed

To strengthen this chain, it has been reported that surveys have begun of sites in other Latin American republics where the United States might build bases, to be made available for use by the 21 republics of this hemisphere.

President Arias' manifesto emphasized that the base sites used by the United States would be returned to Panama after the war.

Panama will have jurisdiction over all civilians within the base sites during their occupation. The United States will pay adequate compensation, he said.

Selection of the exact locations for bases was up to the War Department which has made no announcement of the sites to be chosen.

Army Sergeants Get Training In M. P. Work

Twenty-two United States Army sergeants destined to be military police when nearby service camps reach capacity were assigned for a 24-hour practical training period with local detectives yesterday.

The men, who are attending classes for 30 days at the Army War College, are being taught the rudiments of "handling a soldier on leave." They are under the supervision of Maj. Garland Williams.

Maj. Williams said that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, had agreed to detail each man with a detective sergeant for at least a day "to learn practical policing."

Today 23 additional men will be detailed here for the same training.

Authorities said yesterday that by July the influx of soldiers here may total 50,000.

Senafor Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland. These changes apparently represent all of the modifications the Administration is willing to accept, except for minor alterations.

The Byrd amendment, accepted by the leadership, provides that no funds hereafter appropriated for our own defense can be used for arms loans to Britain or other nations unless Congress specifically authorizes their use for that purpose.

The change does not affect the President's right to transfer up to $1,300,000,000 worth of defense articles from Army and Navy equipment already in existence or provided for. Byrd said "this is adequate to meet the emergency until Congress further acts."

"This amendment," Byrd said, definitely assures that Congress will retain its power over the purse, which it would lose, if our own defense appropriations were diverted to other countries, thereby compelling Congress to make duplicate appropriations."

Six Changes Rapidly Adopted

Other amendments rapidly adopted provide:

By George—That value of Army and Navy equipment loaned or leased must be determined by the heads of the agencies concerned, or such special agencies as the President may designate in his regulations carrying out the program.

By Byrnes—That the President's power to have defense articles manufactured or reconditioned for British aid must depend on funds appropriated and contracts authorized by Congress, except for his free right to transfer $1,300,000,000 of existing defense equipment.

By Tydings and George—That the President's powers to release defense articles for export shall be subject to the above limitations.

By George—That the customary separability clause be inserted, specifying that if any part of the bill is held unconstitutional, it shall not affect the remaining sections.

By committee—That the President's powers under the bill shall terminate on June 30, 1943, or on any earlier date that both Houses of Congress might set in a concurrent resolution.

By committee—That revolving fund use of defense loans repaid shall end on June 30, 1946.

Will Resume Drive

Once the Ellender amendment is disposed of, opposition Senators will resume their drive to further restrict the President's powers with a long series of modifying proposals.

Outstanding among these is an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to deny the President funds for use of vessels as convoys or troop movements overseas, and another by Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to bar loan of naval vessels.

Ellender privately claimed a bare majority of votes for his amendment, but leaders insisted it would be defeated "by a margin of about ten votes."

Some opposition Senators, notably Senator Clark, of Missouri, and Senator D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, disclosed they would vote against the Ellender proposal.

Highlights of debate on the Ellender amendment:

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, argued constitutional powers of the President over the Nation's armed forces gives him no right in peacetime to send land and naval forces overseas.

The Battle of Words

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, disputed this and said the amendment would have "no legal effect" if adopted.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, insisted the bill would give the President power to use troops abroad since "it says the defense of Britain is the defense of the United States."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said he opposed the amendment "because it misleads the people and doesn't accomplish any purpose." Hatch said "it gives the people a false hope."

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, said if it was "deception," then the Democratic Party had written "deception" into its platform.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said a troop restriction had no place in a bill "dealing only with equipment" and not with men.

Senator Johnson (Republican) of California accused Barkley of "quibbling" and said the amendment would carry out the President's "promise to the mothers of the land."

Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont said it would "lend strength and morale to Japan and the Axis powers" without affecting the President's powers in any way.

Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland said it "would lull the American people into belief that troops can't be sent, when that is not the case."

A. Guy Hope Gets Securities Post

Richmond, Va., March 5 (AP).—A. Guy Hope, 28, formerly of Richmond and more recently of Washington, was appointed by Chairman Thomas W. Ozlin, of the State corporation commission, today to succeed Blake T. Newton, jr., as assistant director of the commission's division of securities.

The appointment is effective March 15, when Newton will succeed C. M. Chichester as division director. Chichester resigned his office a few days ago to become director of the State division of statutory research and drafting.

Downey Favors Aid Bill, Letter To Son Reveals

Copyright by New York Times

Senator Downey, of California, whose position on the lease-lend bill had not perviously been stated publicly, released last night a letter to his son, Richard Downey, 17 who had asked him how he was going to vote. Downey will read the letter on the floor of the Senate tomorrow, his office said.

The attitude of the youth of the United States on the pending legislature has been the subject of much debate on the floor of the Senate, with opposing Senators reading into the record telegrams and letters from university and college administrators, professors and students' organization both for and against the lease-lend bill. Downey's letter was intended to answer the criticisms of young people.

Under the salutation "Dear Dick:", Senator Downey wrote:

"You have written me, as have many young people, and many older ones, too to learn how I shall vote on the lend-lease bill now before the Senate. By the time you get this letter, you may have read in the Record the answer to your question. But you will not see there the reasons which impelled me to take that stand, and I should like to make them clear to you."

"Morally Committed"

He asserted that having "morally committeed" itself to an all-out British aid program it would be no more dangerous for this country to meet this pledge "efficiently and emphatically than to fulfill it haltingly and insufficiently."

"We have committeed ourselves to one party in the dispute, and to aid him stingily will be no more neutral than to aid him generously; it will only be a reflection upon our good faith."

Downey said that his support of the legislation would not be "inconsistent" with his earlier vote against repeal of the Neutrality Act and asserted that he was "no less convinced today" than in the past that this country could protect itself against any nation or combination of nationas "regardless of the disposition of the Brtish fleet."

He added that this country's "only practical sphere of influence lies within this hemisphere" and that any "attempt at moral imperialism" would only be turned back "with redoubled disillusion."

"All this I believe, Dick; all this I affirm," the Senator wrote his son.

"But one insistent factor outweighs in my mind these considerations. And that is that we, as a nation, have morally committed ourselves to the full assistance of the British people . . . if we retract our pledge at this late hour, we shall have to answer not only to the embittered living, not only to the deluded dead, but to our own offended conscience.

"The material support it (the bill) offers may come too late to help stem the German's spring invasion, but the certainity that in the end it will come, may give the hard-pressed English the confidence they will badly need in the grim days immediately ahead."

Many Words, Few Swords In Aid Debate

Senators engaged in the lend-lease debate have uttered three times as many words as were contained in all the inauguration addresses of all the Presidents, the Magna Carta, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, Lincoln's Gettysburg address and numerous other speeches and documents, combined.

So said Representative Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in a statement yesterday.

As if in derision of the two weeks of talking while the British aid measure has been on the Senate floor, Chairman Bloom prepared his compilation.

The 44 inauguration addresses, he figured, contained 111,137 words, the talks ranging in length from 126 words of Washington's second one, to William Harrison's 7,700-worder, and including the 10,988 words in President Rosevelt's three speeches.

In addition, Bloom listed these documents and addresses, with their wordage:

Magna Carta, 4,104; Habeas Corpus Act, 1,188; English Bill of Rights, 1,342; Declaration of Independence, 1,458; Articles of Confederation, 3,796; the Constitution, 4,543; amendments to the constitution, 2,214; Washington's Farewell Address, 7,641; Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, 266.

All these, combined with the inaugural talks, produced a total of 137,706 words.

But the Foreign Affairs chairman calculated that the current Senate debate has brought forth 405,000 words. The end, of course, is not yet.

1941 Yankee Doodle Sings Out for 1776 Defeat

By International News Service

When Senator Scott Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, appeared at a radio studio last night to broadcast an address in favor of the lease-lend bill, a young Western Union messenger stepped forward and greeted the Senator with this singing telegram to the tune of "Yankee Doodle":

"When Illinois elected you,
You promised to be true, sir;
You said you wouldn't vote for war
And we believed in you, sir.
So please don't vote for any bill
Like seventeen seventy-six, sir;
For if you do we'll be in war,
And you'll be in a fix, sir.

(CHORUS)

"We'll give millions for defense,
And then some millions more, sir;
But not one boy and not one cent
For any foreign war, sir.
We won't have Hitler over here,
We'll stand for no dictator;
But things demanded by that bill
Belong to our creator.
So please don't vote our rights away
In this darkest hour,
And don't give to any man
Such vast and God-like Power.

The message was sent from Chicago, and signed by Frederick W. Beach and Frank E. Brightman, of the War Referendum Council.

Dies Sees Nazi Plot to Stir Up South America

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Information that a million Germans in South and Central America are secretly organized for military action and may be used to divert American troops if the United States becomes involved in Europe's war has been received by the House committee investigating un-American activities, Chairman Martin Dies said last night.

Dies said the information came from a reliable world-wide organization, and that it convinced him that if considered necessary "Hitler will make some move in South American countries within the next few months, perhaps by May, to take over certain governments for the purpose of nuisance value to the United States and to obtain raw materials."

He commended the State Department for moving jointly with the Mexican government for defense in North America, and said within the last six or seven months, the Government had curbed the activities of Nazis there.

"The information we received is that Germans in the Third Reich in certain South American countries are only awaiting word to overthrow governments from within," he said. "This appears fantastic, but Hitler, who has been outsmarting the world, has been doing it by fantastic methods.

Raids Yield Evidence

"The information, with that which the committee has gathered in raids made along the Mexican border," Dies said, "convinces me that Hitler will make a drive on South America immediately if he wins the war in Europe."

"It is likely that he will do it earlier if we begin to send large quantities of armaments to England. His purposes will be to divert our energies from aiding Britain to defending South America. South America is vulnerable to attack. I think, however, that the German invasion of certain South American countries will be from within first."

Dies said information before his committee showed that Germans in South America "are organized into companies and regiments and each man has a specific duty to perform when Hitler starts to move."

"Hitler wants to get control of the vast sources of raw materials, which he needs to maintain all of the millions of conquered people in Europe," Dies said the information disclosed.

Dies said his committee had found new German organizations in this country and in one in Chicago files seized showed "10,000 members, each with a number."

People Asleep, He Says

"We have yet to learn the purpose of the numbers," he said. The committee is now preparing several reports on Nazi and Communist activities in this country, he said, all of which will be made public.

"The American people have not yet awakned to the seriousness of the situation," Dies said.

Dies announced that his committee had opened regional offices in Federal buildings in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and New Orleans to receive information on un-American activities. A score of other regional offices are to be opened later he said.

The Dies Committee plans to subpena records of every chapter of the American Peace Mobilization, Chairman Dies disclosed.

Meanwhile, attaches of the district attorney here called in reporters to explain that the failure to act in the cases of five persons previously cited for contempt of the Dies Committee was because the district attorney had been unable to induce Dies or other members of his committee to appear in the Federal court at Pittsburgh. The district attorney's office said it had planned to try all five cases at once in the court here, but in order to do so it was necessary to extradite two Pittsburgh men.

SHIELD THEIR IDENTITY—Wearing masks to shield their identity, these two young office workers testified in Boston yesterday at the minimum wage board hearing for office workers. U. S. Will Reveal Schenck's 'Most Personal' Affairs

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—Assistant United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa told a jury today that the Government would undertake "the somewhat distasteful duty of delving into the private and most personal affairs" of Joseph M. Schenck, movie magnate on trial charged with evading income taxes totaling $412,000 during 1935, 1936 and 1937.

Opening the Government's case, Correa said he would prove that the high cost of earning a living—Schenck reported in his 1937 return he expended on entertainment and other expenses $89,385 in order to earn his annual salary of $118,080—was not without its pleasant side.

"We will produce the evidence that these parties consisted of entertainment by Schenck of gambling companions, women friends—in general, people to whom his relationship was purely a social one," Correa said.

Juggling Charged

He charged that Schenck, chairman of the board of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, had withheld mention of some of his income, lied about deductions, juggled his books to prevent the Government from knowing whence money came and where it went, and arranged "sales" of his Mexican gambling and horse-racing holdings, using his own money, to give the appearance of losses in real estate.

Correa said Schenck borrowed $100,000 from the Bank of America one day and returned it—in a brown paper bag deposited in the bank's offices after hours—a few days later.

"In June, 1937," said Correa, "he entered into another mysterious transaction. Schenck made a loan of $100,000 to Arthur Stebbins, his nephew. Stebbins, in turn, loaned the money to one William Bioff, a labor leader. Actually the loan was really a loan or payment from Schenck to Bioff, using Stebbins as a dummy."

Bookkeeper on Trial

On trial with Schenck is his bookkeeper, Joseph H. Moskowitz, who is charged with having prepared figures for the income tax returns.

The prosecution cited as typical of Moskowitz's bookkeeping the entry of about $44,000 alleged business expenses in 1936. The sum was broken down into only two conglomerate items: $4,700 for "traveling and entertainment hotel expenses" and $39,000 for "railroad transportation and entertainment," Correa said.

"The proof will show that the entire $4,700 of hotel expenses for 1936 consisted of weekend parties and visits by Schenck to resort places in the vicinity of Los Angeles," he went on. "The vouchers show the exact nature of the parties and who was present. And they show beyond peradventure of a doubt that these excursions were decidedly not related to Schenck's business."

Navy Test Pilot Dies in Crash Of New Fighter Near Norbeck

Lieut. Seymour A. Johnson, 37, Navy test pilot, was killed near the Manor Club, Norbeck, Md., yesterday when a latest-type fighter plane plunged into a creek bed, apparently in a power dive.

While investigation of the scattered bits of the Grumman monoplane—the Navy's newest 400-mile-an-hour fighter—may never reveal what occurred, officers here believed that Johnson may have lost consciousness at a high altitude.

The high sped of the descent and the great force of the impact, together with the fact that Lieut. Johnson was engaged in high altitude tests well above 30,000 feet, suggest that something might have gone wrong with his oxygen supply, causing him to lose consciousness, it was said.

Observers said the plane dropped from a great height with its motor wide open, leveled off for a split-second and then crashed with an explosion heard for more than a mile.

The motor and nose of the plane were buried 10 feet in the creek bed and the wreckage was strewn in a radius of 50 yards. Searchers were led to the scene by smoke from the burning oil and gas.

Montgomery County firemen expressed the belief the plane carried explosives because of the way the wreckage was blown to bits. This, however, was denied at the Naval Air Station. Officials said the height from which the plane fell and the terrific speed would have scattered the wreckage.

Lieut. Johnson, who barely escaped death last July when his seaplane plunged into the Potomac, near Highway Bridge, took off from the Naval Air Station shortly after 9:30 a. m. in the fighter on a service test flight, Navy officials said.

The plane crashed about 10:45 near the frame dwelling of the Misses Harriet and Ellen Riley, elderly sisters.

Miss Harriet and a colored handyman, Curtis Pollard, were first on the scene. Pollard said the plane dropped from the sky with an ear-splitting roar, turned over on its side and then fell into the woods. A loud explosion "like a bomb" followed, he said.

The plane and pilot were identified by scraps of flight test cards found in the wreckage. A Navy salvage crew gathered up the debris as an official board prepared for an inquiry.

The Gumman F4F3 plane was one of the first production models of the recently developed type, undergoing tests here before deliveries were begun to the aircraft carries of the Fleet. Officials said the accident should not delay deliveries as it had been under test for some time and there has been no indication of any defects.

Tuesday night, less than 18 hours before his last flight, Johnson jokingly offered a ride to 60-year-old C. J. O'Connor, of Woodridge, Md., a carpenter who was putting the finishing touches on a new recreation room in the Johnson's home, 1715 Army and Navy Drive, Arlington.

"I told him I didn't see why he ever went up in one of those contraptions," O'Connor said yesterday. "He laughed and said there was nothing like the thrill of flying. He wouldn't change his job for any other in the world."

With more than 4,000 hours in the air, Lieut. Johnson was considered one of the Navy's outstanding fliers. He obtained his basic flight training at Pensacola, Fla., in 1929 and spent eight years as a Naval aviator aboard battleships and aircraft carriers.

At his own request he was transferred to testing duty at the Naval Air Station here in June, 1938. He was slated to become a lieutenant commander by July.

While studying at the Naval Academy, where he was a varsity wrestler, he met Alice Virginia Kelley, of Kensington, Md. He was graduated from the Academy in 1927, the year Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, and they were married in 1929, after he completed two years of sea duty. Mrs. Johnson and a daughter, Suzanne, 8, survive.

Japan Expands to West—Buys Garden Site for Embassy

chusetts Avenue, were planning to build a $1,000,000 embassy on S Street, near the Woodrow Wilson home, but abandoned the project when war clouds gathered in 1939.

An attache at the Japanese Embassy said yesterday that a real garden had long been desired. There was no room in the rear for one, he said, because the embassy building almost reaches the steep hill leading down to Rock Creek.

The student of international affairs, who has been worried over the deterioration of American-Japanese relations, might find a hopeful augury in the garden project.

According to the Encyclopedia Britanica, the Japanese garden has always been "part and parcel" of the Japanese home. The Japanese garden, says this authority, "aims at being natural that it may satisfy the human craving for nature and by supplying peace and repose may be a retreat in which man's spirit can wander and find spiritual recreation and sustenance."

For "Peace and Repose"

Thus the garden that is to supplant the "pink palace" in Massachusetts Avenue may do much to help Kichisaburo Nomura, Japan's new, 6-foot Ambassador, find "peace and repose," and instill that spirit in American-Japanese relations.

Sylvanus Stokes and his bride, the glamorous Margaret Fahnestock, gave some memorable parties in the gayly painted "palace" back in what Westbrook Pegler calls the "era of wonderful nonsense." On one occasion they staged a Junior League ball at which the debutantes wore costumes suggesting rare wines and liquors.

After the breakup of the Stokes marriage, the mansion was taken over by the young broker, Auchincloss, when he came here from New York with his Russian wife, Maya. They were divorced and thereafter Auchincloss maintained "bachelor" quarters in the mansion. When he married Nina Gore Vidal, they moved to Merrywood, his estate near McLean, Va.

Society Conquers Politics

The next occupants were the late W. Forbes Morgan, cousin of President Roosevelt, and his young, blonde wife, Sara Morgan, and the latter's father, Robert Jackson. They gave a fancy dress ball in the mansion the same evening that Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse were giving an equally large reception for Al Smith after a Liberty League dinner.

The society gossips said that the ardent New Deal family Morgan and Jackson gave their masquerade that evening, hoping that in their bizzarre costumes their guests would not be able to go to anything so dignified as a Liberty League reception. But, as it turned out, the guests managed to shuttle back and forth between both receptions.

Mr. Morgan died, and the pink palace became empty again. There was talk of former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley taking it over, but they took a house in Georgetown instead. The palace was something of a white elephant when Auchincloss had it razed in December, 1939.

A.M.A. Slated To Begin Its Defense Today

Barring the unexpected, such as the submission of additional evidence by the prosecution or protracted arguments over motions, organized medicine will begin defending itself today against the Government's charge that it violated the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The defense is expected to consume at least one week, possibly two. William E. Leahy, Seth W. Richardson and Edward Burke, representing the doctors, have not divulged their strategy but it is virtually certain that at least 5 of the 20 individual defendants will take the witness stand.

They are accused, along with four eminent medical groups, of restraining Group Health Association, a medical care cooperative for Federal employes stationed in Washington.

That the defense will move Justice James M. Proctor for a directed verdict when the trial is resumed at 10 o'clock this morning in District Court is highly probable.

John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher, special assistants to the Attorney General, rested the Government's case late Tuesday. It was stipulated, however, that any evidence which they might have overlooked may be offered today.

First Lady Asks Attention Be Given Crowded Schools

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference that Washingtonians probably will want to devote thought to how to help the problem of overcrowding in the schools. Especially is the situation bad in colored schools, she said, with some colored classes having more than 60 students because of a shortage of teachers.

The crowded conditions in white schools are doubtless due to the rapid influx of defense workers, she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she had gotten "quite a reaction" on her recent statement that Americans must get in the frame of mind in which they would be willing to give up certain commodities if factories were turned over for defense purposes. She said she didn't say this would happen, but that it might happen, and that people must gear themselves to do without things so that whatever happens does not come as too much of a shock.

The First Lady said she liked the column of Westbrook Pegler yesterday in The Washington Post on "O: Sacrifice."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that a dinner held at the White House Tuesday night was for launching a study of population trends. The group, many of whom are Government officials, will get together and define the problem. They believe it vital that the population trend be set before the public.

Efforts in House to Increase Farm Parity Payments Fail

By John B. Oakes

Three separate attempts to increase the $212,000,000 proposed for farm parity payments by President Roosevelt were turned back in the House yesterday during consideration of the 1942 Agriculture Department Appropriation bill.

As the House was tentatively accepting the Administration's budget recommendation of $212,000,000, it was widely reported that when the bill reaches the Senate Agriculture Committee, a serious effort will be made there to raise the parity grant to $1,000,000,000.

After spending most of the afternoon debating whether to increase parity funds, the House decided not to, and then quit for the day without finally acting on the 97-page farm bill as a whole. The measure carries with it a total appropriation of $1,008,977,550. It includes about $50,000,000 for parity payments, and authorizes expenditure of an additional sum to bring the parity total to $212,000,000, the same sum as that appropriated last year.

This figure is designed to give the agricultural producers of five basic crops—tobacco, cotton, rice, wheat and corn—approximately 75 per cent of a "parity" price calculated on farm purchasing power in 1909-1914.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, urged a grant of $425,000,000, which, he said, would bring farm prices to 85 per cent of parity, and Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, followed that proposal with an amendment to raise the figure to $875,000,000 to bring prices to 100 per cent, or "full parity."

The debate indicated that some proponents of higher parity appropriations felt that as long as the defense program was providing increased prosperity for labor and capital, the farmer was entitled to his share too.

Although support of the amendments came from both sides of the House, the Pace proposal was finally defeated, 65 to 124, and the Dirksen amendment went down, 84 to 127. Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, thereupon suggested that the figure be raised to $325,000,000, but, by vote of 20 to 84, the House stuck to the original sum.

It was learned last night that farm Representatives may today propose to recommit the entire bill to the Appropriations Committee, with instructions to raise the parity grant to $875,000,000. Such a move would permit a roll-call vote, which under House procedure, could not be taken on this question yesterday.

Meanwhile, the report circulated in the House that the Senate Agriculture Committee would be asked to approve $1,000,000,000 for parity, no matter what the House finally determined to do.

Pointing out that the Democratic platform had promised full parity, Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, an Appropriations Committee member, said that he intended to make "every effort" to obtain parity, but had not yet decided on the best method.

Emergency Hospital, Brookings Institution Declared Taxable

Properties of Emergency Hospital and the Brookings Institution yesterday were declared taxable and ordered back on the municipal assessment rolls.

Following recommendations by a special board investigating some 2,000 parcels of tax-exempt privately owned property the Commissioners declared that six other properties were properly exempted from the real estate levy.

The valuation of Emergency Hospital, 1727 New York Avenue Northwest is $1,058,428, with an annual ta of $18,522 and that of Brookings, 722 Jackson Place Northwest, $391,575 with an annual tax bill of $6,853.

Reason Given

The special board, headed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Fowler, said, "We are unable to find that the Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, Inc., is an institution of purely public charity conducted without charge to inmates, profit or income, and therefore conclude that it is improperly exempt from real estate taxes.

"Our examination of the records leads to the conclusion that the hospital we are considering, is not providing needy persons gratuitously with medical care and treatment, and with medicines; that in every instance, as far as we are able to ascertain, the corporation is paid for all services rendered. Certainly we would not be able to conclude that this is a purely public charity, conducted without charge to inmates, even though it may be conducted without private profit or income."

In recommending that the property of the Brookings Institution be replaced on the rolls the board said, "If Congress intended to exempt scientific institutions, such as this, it appears it would have done so in express terms."

Exemptions Listed

The following properties were found to be properly exempt:

Corcoran Gallery of Art, 1700 New York Avenue Northwest; the church and parsonage of the Gospel Spreading Association, 2030 Georgia Avenue Northwest, operated by Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux; church and parsonage of the Plymouth Congregational Church, 1419 Seventeenth Street Northwest; the First Baptist Church, southwest corner of Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, and the Yugoslav Embassy, 1520 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Inc., and the Commissioners agreed on a formula for the payment of taxes for that portion of the Constitution Hall used as rental property. The tax paid for 1940 amounted to $4,648.31. Otherwise the property is properly exempted from any other taxation.

Water Coolers For Postoffice Branches Ordered

The drinking water situation at the Brightwood and Columbia Heights Postoffice substations will be well in hand by the time warm weather arrives, Postmaster Vincent Burke was confident yesterday.

Both substations right now lack water coolers and The Post has received an anonymous complaint. The Postoffice Department, like the Office of Production Management, is having difficulty obtaining needed equipment, Burke pointed out. Automatic electric water coolers, he said, are "on order."

The more than 100 clerks at the two substations are now drinking from paper cups with water drawn from wash basin spigots. Burke sees no hardship in the procedure as long as the weather remains cool. He says he gets his own water that way at home—in the winter time.

If the new coolers have not arrived by summer, Burke stated, stations will be supplied with standard bottle coolers, abundantly serviced with ice.

Permit Suspension Curtails Speeding, Van Duzer Says

Recent action of District traffic authorities in ordering the suspension of drivers' permits for first offense speed infractions in excess of 45-miles-an-hour has already produced "splendid results," Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said.

Although actual arrest figures will not be available for comparison until later in the month, Van Duzer said it was evident that motorists are curtailing they tendency to drive fast.

Some 30 cases have been presented to the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits since the rule became effective and in each instance suspensions ranging from 30 to the maximum 90 days have been imposed.

"This has been one of the most effective measures Washington has adopted in its fight to control motoring carelessness," Van Duzer said.

Overton Fiscal Plan Hearing Opens Today

For the first time since the Overton fiscal formula to regulate the annual payment of the Federal Government to the District was proposed, a House subcommittee today will hear testimony on the plan.

Under the leadership of Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, who is sponsoring the formula in the House, the subcommittee will meet jointly with a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee in the latter's committee room.

Commissioner David McCoach, jr., Tax Assessor Edward Dent and Acting Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton will be the principal witnesses. Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, will direct the inquiry.

Representative Hunter has urged all members of the House District Committee to attend the hearing so that they may be familiar with the formula when it is considered by the full committee.

One member of Hunter's subcommittee, Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, has announced his support of the plan, while Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, another member, has stated his opposition.

McCarran to Head Hearing on Hankin

Prompt and full hearings on the nomination of Gregory Hankin as a member of the Public Utilities Commission were promised yesterday by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, following his appointment as chairman of a special subcommittee of the Senate District Committee.

McCarran was authorized by Chairman Reynolds to select whatever members he wished to serve with him on the subcommittee. He said he will make his selections this week.

Senator Reynolds decided to refer Hankin's appointment to a subcommittee after he had heard complaints that the nominee had not been proposed by any civic organizations or the Commissioners.

"I believe that the people of Washington should have an opportunity to find out all they wish about the persons nominated to administer their laws," said Reynolds.

Because the Public Utilities Commission has only one member now, however, Reynolds said the inquiry will not be prolonged or delayed.

Travelers Aid To Plan Future Of Girl-Mother

The Travelers Aid Society volunteered yesterday to work out a "long-time plan" for the future of Mrs. Lola Fleshman, 14-year-old child mother from West Virginia, who allegedly was deserted here recently with her 10-month-old daughter, by her husband, who is 19.

"Any plan that we would try to carry out would be one that would seem reasonable and acceptable to both Lola and her family," said a statement from the society. "She would not be hurried into any action or sent back to her home against her will."

Mrs. Fleshman's problems are intricate, the society said, because she is not eligible for public relief, being a legal resident of West Virginia; is unable to obtain employment because of child labor laws; cannot enter public school without paying tuition, because of her nonresidence, and cannot be adopted without the consent of her parents.

Man Convicted Of Manslaughter After Stabbing

Henry C. Fagan, 43, was convicted of manslaughter in the District Court yesterday for the fatal stabbing of French G. Miller, 58, of 811 B Street Southwest, last July 2.

Government witnesses presented before Justice F. Dickinson Letts by Assistant District Attorney Arthur B. Caldwell said Fagan stabbed Miller in a drunken brawl at Hemmersleys Court and E Street Southwest. Although injured about 6:30 p. m., the man did not reach a hospital until about midnight and died shortly afterward of loss of blood.

Fagan has been arrested here 30 times since 1929, on charges ranging from drunkenness to robbery. He was sentenced to a four-year prison term for several robberies in 1932.

The maximum penalty for manslaughter is 15 years in prison.

Roosevelt Signs Airport Bill

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt has approved the expenditure of $2,030,212 in Work Projects Administration funds for the Cumberland (Md.) Municipal Airport, it was learned yesterday at the WPA.

The project now may be undertaken at the discretion of the State administrator. The airport will be in Mineral County, W. Va., just across the State line from Cumberland.

WPA records showed that the project, long sought by the late Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, won the President's approval on February 27, the day Byron and others died in the wreckage of a transport airliner near Atlanta, Ga.

Suit Charges Wiedemann Given 5 Million for Spies

San Francisco, March 5 (AP).—A complaint filed in Federal court today represented that Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general, had received from Germany more than $5,000,000 to be used in espionage activities in the United States and other parts of the Western Hemisphere.

The complaint, a civil action, was filed by the attorney for Mrs. Alice Crockett, of San Francisco, who claimed Wiedemann sent her to Germany on a confidential mission, and had refused to pay her for her services. She demanded $5,000.

Mrs. Crockett's complaint asserted that Capt. Wiedemann, who was superior officer over Adolf Hitler in the World War, had told her it was the plan of the German government "to promote strife and class hatred . . . for the purpose of destroying unity and undermining the strength of the United States.

Another allegation was that he was "active in secretly storing large quantities of ammunition," particularly in New Jersey and other Eastern States, "to be used by the (German-American) Bund in fighting against the Government of the United States."

Member of Destroyer Crew Lost at Sea

The Navy Department last night reported the loss of Fred Fearnes, a seaman aboard the destroyer Kearney, while the vessel was steaming through rough seas en route to Puerto Rico. The commanding officer of the Kearney reported a four-hour search had been made for traces of the seaman, whose home is at East Saugus, Mass.

Bodies of Three Killed in South Arrive Today

The bodies of three Washington sportsmen, fatally injured Tuesday in an automobile crash at Coral Gables, Fla., will arrive at Union Station today for burial here.

James Burch, sr., 53, of 3846 Macomb Street Northwest, veteran canoeing champion and Washington manager for the Prentice-Hall business advisory service, will be buried today in Fort Lincoln Cemetery following funeral services at 2 p. m. in Nevius' Chapel, 1300 N Street Northwest. The chapel service will be open to friends, and interment will be private.

Requiem mass for Gardner Phillip Orme, 49, 1631 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, well known speed boat racer, and brother of James Orme, local automobile dealer, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow in St. Matthew's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

The body of Andrew A. Crawford, 43, of 1723 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, speedboat driver and business manager of the Washington Insurance Clinic, will be taken to Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest. Plans for the funeral will be completed Saturday, following the arrival in Washington of Mr. Crawford's widow, Mrs. Edna M. Crawford, now en route from California.

Lieut. Kreml, Safety Expert, To Speak Here

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Washington's traffic troubles will be analyzed tomorrow night for the benefit of local police, judges, Congressional and civic leaders by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, of Evanston, Ill., nationally known authority on motoring safety.

Lieut. Kreml, representing the International Association of Chiefs of Police as head of the safety division, will speak as guest of The Washington Post at 7:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel. Some 50 leaders in the local traffic safety movement—from Capitol Hill to the District Building—have accepted invitations from Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post.

The youthful traffic specialist, who rose from a plain "cop" on the Evanston police force to become recognized across the country as an expert in his line, has traveled the length and breadth of the country studying both State and city traffic problems.

Frequently, Kreml has visited the District to study its problem. Within recent weeks he has made repeated trips here for conferences with War Department officials planning mass traffic movements under the national defense program.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, is president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, which Kreml will represent. The two often have conferred on Washington traffic conditions.

The Nation's top traffic control man was guest of The Post in 1937 when, at a similar dinner, civic and official Washington turned out to honor his accomplishments. It was just after he had been awarded a prize of $5,000 by the C. I. T. Safety Foundation in New York for "outstanding achievements" in the field of safety and traffic control work.

As a result of his suggestions at that time, local traffic planners adopted policies which proved instrumental in solving important problems.

Kreml also is director of the Traffic Safety Institute of Northwestern University and was one of the "professors" at the special course attended there by Inspector Arthur E. Miller, present head of the local accident prevention unit.

In his talk tomorrow night, Kreml is expected to cover points concerning the use of civilian traffic "observers" and the part played in traffic matters by Police Court—two subjects which have created considerable controversy here since the first of the year.

Judge Refuses Her a Divorce

BETTY COMPTON, former musical comedy star, whose suit for divorce from James J. Walker, New York's former playboy mayor, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Arthur Gomez in Key West, Fla. Hill Asks Bar To Extend Use Of Its Library

Francis W. Hill, jr., yesterday urged the District Bar Association, of which he is president, to allow colored lawyers to use its 25,000-volume library now housed in rent-free quarters at Judiciary Square.

The association twice rejected compromises worked out by its officers, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and representatives of protesting groups. Jackson chose the association must abandon its the assoriation must abandon its policy of discrimination by April 1 or find somewhere else to keep its books. The association excludes colored attorneys from membership and limits use of its library at the courthouse to members, judges, prosecutors and other court officers.

Hill, in an article in the association's official journal, urged his colleagues to accept the Attorney General's declaration that facilities on public property "shall be available to all members of the bar in good standing, without discrimination on account of race, color, religion or sex."

Hill warned that the increased cost of private quarters (estimated by bar officials at $10,000 a year) would require an increase of dues. (The bar now collects about $17,000 in dues annually and spends about the same sum.) The increase, said Hill, might cause a loss of members, and consequently of revenue.

The ultimate answer to the problem, Hill suggested, might be a joint building for the District and American Bar Associations.

The association may reconsider its position at a general membership meeting at the Mayflower Tuesday night.

Postlude

Symphony Plays Best Works Entered in Composers' Contest

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in Woodrow Wilson High School Auditorium Wednesday night in a concert complimentary to members of the association. Program of unidentified American compositions.

Last evening before the members of the National Symphony Orchestra Association assembled in the auditorium of Woodrow Wilson High School, Hans Kindler established what one hopes will be an annual custom here and a precedent for American conductors elsewhere. He conducted ten compositions selected from 86 scores submitted to him in a contest which held out no other award than public performance, and requested the auditors to choose the three which they thought the best. The work which received the most votes in the balloting, the result of which will shortly be announced, will be performed at one of the orchestra's concerts next season.

BROWN

In his preliminary remarks, Dr. Kindler expressed his suprise and gratification at the number of manuscripts sent to him and at the generally high quality of the music. Only six, he said, had to be rejected because of obvious amateurishness and technical clumsiness. He declared that it had been no easy task to choose only enough music to make up one program for the consideration of the audience, and he praised the orchestra for the cooperation it had given him in reading scores and in rehearsing the ones selected.

Before each number was played Dr. Kindler announced the title, and in those cases which needed a descriptive word he made brief comments. The compositions performed are listed in their order:

1. A military overture.
2. First and second movements of a symphony.
3. Hawaiian suite (one movement).
4. Festival suite: Troop of Greek dancers, Oriental Writing on the Wall, Pyrrhic dance.
5. Variations on an Old Form.
6. Exile (third of four symphonic documents).
7. Twilight Dream.
8. Prelude to a suite: Potomac.
9. Sunday Evening in Bloomfield (from Southern Iowa Suite).
10. Jazz tone poem: Etude en Noir.

With the dead-line looming only a few moments ahead of the writer, it is impossible to comment in detail on the compositions. One noted with interest that without exception the composers showed complete awareness of the changes in harmonic idiom which mark contemporary musical thought, although some of them naturally made less use of it than others. Every one was worth hearing and every one contained interesting passages.

My own three preferences, expressed with the regret that they must be only three, are No. 2, No. 8 and No. 5. The preferences are based primarily upon an indefinable quality of individual expression in the music and not upon attractiveness of melodic themes or rhythmic ingenuity. I might have chosen, for example, "Sunday Evening in Bloomfield," because it is so thoroughly American in its atmosphere and humor; or "Twilight Dream," because it has a nostalgic beauty. But what I was listening for was the feeling of inspiration within the music and for an accompanying skill in the expression of fundamentally musical ideas.

High School Cadet Drills Set for May

Palestine Jews Seen Prepared To Block Nazis

Dr. Bernard Joseph, legal adviser to the Jewish Agency for Palestine, said yesterday that Jews in Palestine would put an army of 40,000 in the field to fight alongside British forces if Germany should break through Turkey to Syria.

The former Canadian lawyer who came to Washington from the Holy Land recently, spoke at a meeting in the Cosmos Club.

A student of Near Eastern affairs, Dr. Joseph said he was certain that Hitler's attempt to wean Turkey away from Great Britain would end in failure.

He added that a successful German attack upon Turkey would see a Palestinian army created. More than 8,000 Zionist volunteers are already fighting with the British army in Africa, he said.

Newsman to Speak At Jewish Center

Kenneth Crawford, Washington correspondent of the New York newspaper PM and former president of the American Newspaper Guild, will speak at the Jewish Community Center at 9 o'clock tonight on "Is War With Japan Inevitable?"

The program, open to the public, is sponsored by the Town Hall of the Air, associate group of the Jewish Community Center. Joseph M. Tuchman will be moderator.

Col. Nathan D. Ely, Retired, Dies at 75

Col. Nathan D. Ely, 75, U. S. A., retired, died at his home, 2340 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, yesterday morning.

A native of Wisconsin, he served as a seaman in the Navy during the Spanish-American War and entered the Army during the World War. After the war, he was given a permanent commission as a colonel in the judge advocate general's department, which he held until his retirement in 1929. He was a graduate of Iowa University.

His wife, Mrs. Mabel C. Ely and brother, Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, U. S. A., retired, with whom he lived, survive.

Rev. Rasmussen, Church Secretary, Dies at Residence

The Rev. Steen Rasmussen, 52, secretary of the home missionary department of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, died yesterday at his residence, 918 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

A native of Randers, Denmark, the Rev. Mr. Rasmussen first came to this country in 1913. He served here as an official of the church conference until 1920 when he returned to Denmark.

After serving at the headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventist European department at Berne he returned to this city in 1936. His last post was as secretary for the home missionary department of the church conference with headquarters in Takoma Park.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Anna Rasmussen; two sons, Glenn R. and Stanley Rasmussen; and a daughter Mrs. Evelyn Russell, all of Takoma Park.

Funeral services have been set tentatively for Sunday at Takoma Park Seventh Day Adventist Church, Takoma Park, Md.

George E. Creeron Funeral Today

Funeral services for George E. Creeron, 55, retired Capital businessman, who died Monday, will be at 9:30 a. m. today at St. Patrick's Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of Clinton, Mass., Mr. Creeron came to Washington in 1917. Save for a year, 1919-20, when he lived in California, he was connected with the Palais Royal Department Store until 1928. In that year he founded a millinery concern at 614 Twelfth Street Northwest, which he operated until his retirement in 1932. He lived at 1320 E Street Northeast.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Catherine Margaret Creeron.

'Mothers' Arrest Declared Threat To Free Speech

Conviction of two "Mothers Crusade Against H. R. 1776" leaders for disorderly conduct Friday in attempting to present an American flag to Senator Glass, of Virginia, would be "to destroy the right of free speech," it was charged in Police Court yesterday.

The charge, made by Defense Attorney T. Edward O'Connell, brought this reply from Judge Hobart Newman:

"If I find these people guilty, it's a flag-waving aspect that won't bother me in the least."

O'Connell moved to dismiss the charges against his clients, Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, of Chicago, and Mrs. Clara Nibberich, of St. Louis, on the grounds that they were illegally brought under the general disorderly conduct act of the District instead of the law applying solely to Government buildings. The prosecution will reply at 2 p. m.

Body Found on Tracks

The body of an unidentified white man, apparently killed by a train, was found south of the Speedway last night on the railroad tracks which run alongside Fourteenth Street Southwest. Neatly dressed, the man was "not a bum," said Policeman Donald B. Plant, of No. 4 Precinct.

PALE, TIRED WOMEN
Supply the Blood and Nerves with Iron and Vitamin B1
Thousands of women and girls over 14 are not getting enough iron to make rich red blood, and not enough Vitamin B1 for proper functioning of the nerves.
When the iron lag ends month is not regulated, there's weak aching, tired women worn out. They have pale faces and often a nervous condition of Vitamin B1 deficiency. Take the capsules, and relieve digestion. Thin women should try IRONIC, the tonic now prescribed which supplies extra iron and Vitamin B1. No habit-forming drugs, no alcohol; no liver.
Each day's IRONIC furnishes more iron for the blood than 4 pounds of beefsteak, or 7 cups of spinach! And more Vitamin B1 than is content of 1 dozen eggs. Most of all, IRONIC makes good red cells only a few weeks daily.
When iron is restored to the blood and the body is fully supplied with Vitamin B1 to quickly relieve that tired nervous feeling of the change and time, appetite returns, nerves are strengthened and you feel proud of your appearance. Get IRONIC at once! Try it for 10 days. Note how much better you feel! Then, look better, and better, and sleep better. Watch more!

3 Children Die In W. Va. Blaze

Charleston, W. Va., March 5 (AP).—Three children were burned to death early today when fire destroyed their home in the mining community of Blakeley.

The dead were Velva Washington, 11, and her brothers, Clebert, 6, and Franklin, 4.

Wife Too Ill to Celebrate, Man Marks 56th Year Wed at Work

HERBERT H. BROWN

"Extry, extry! Grover Cleveland elected! Extry!"

An impulsive young blade, taking his girl friend home from a dance in the old Read House in Chattanooga, drew a sudden inspiration from the newsboy's cry.

"Honey," he whispered to her, "let's get married the day Mr. Cleveland is inaugurated."

"Why, yes," she replied.

And they almost did. Tuesday was the fifty-sixth anniversary of that first inauguration of President Cleveland. Yesterday was the fifty-sixth anniversary of the marriage of Herbert H. Brown and Rose Lee Kirkpatrick.

He could not remember yesterday why their nuptials came a day later than planned.

Daddy Brown, as he is affectionately known along Washington's "brokers' row" in downtown Fifteenth Street, was a bit sad yesterday as he indulged in reminiscence. His wife is ill, too ill for them to celebrate the event.

So it was just another working day for Daddy Brown, notwithstanding the fact that, technically, he has been on the Fenner & Beane retired list since 1928. His wife was abed in their home at 1901 Columbia Road Northwest. She is 79, her husband 83.

Social-Religious Series to Begin

Southwest Washington churchgoers tomorrow night will attend the first in a weekly series of social-religious community evenings, where they can enjoy any of six or eight games or attend a worship service, in the Westminister Presbyterian Church, Seventh and E Streets Southwest, it was announced by Rev. H. V. Porter.

The "family church night" program will be conducted each Friday from 7 to 10 p. m., with 14 activities during the evening in the church building, the Rev. Mr. Porter said.

Activities will include ping-pong, badminton, checkers, chess and shuffleboard games, drama, radio and art clubs, classes in model airplane building and photography, junior and adult choir practice, a worship service and refreshments.

Registration for each evening will be 10 cents and the public is invited. Activity leaders will be Alvin Boyd, Ernest Kahlert, Forrest Cromwell, Johan Von Zuylen and the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Porter.

Britons to Get Hints On Repelling Invaders

London, March 5 (AP).—Twenty million "What to Do" leaflets will be distributed to Britons next week as a part of the government's anti-invasion preparedness campaign.

Seattle Prepares To Test Blackout

Seattle, March 5 (AP).—The first blackout test in a major American city will halt night life in this community of nearly 400,000 for 15 minutes Friday.

Frank R. Cadman, blackout chairman, has assembled more than 4,000 volunteer air-raid wardens for duty, in addition to 3,500 civilians who will assist police and fire departments.

The warning signal will be sounded by factory whistles and sirens over every broadcasting station in the city ten minutes before blackout time. Wardens will order motorists to the curb and house owners will pull down their shades or turn out their lights.

Mayor John E. Carroll has asked all citizens who have no business on the streets to remain at home, but police expect curiosity to draw large crowds downtown. No person will be permitted to step off darkened sidewalks during the blackout period from 10:40 p. m. until 10:55 p. m. (P. S. T.).

Controlling Rents

Representative Randolph has taken a logical step in bringing up the question of rent control in the District at this time. If there is to be a rental board, it should be established soon. The attempt to hold down rents during the World War was a failure because action was not taken until May 31, 1918. By that time the profiteers had raised their prices and freezing the rates only continued the hardships of tenants and landlords who had attempted to keep rents down.

The objections to rent control are natural and strong. It tends to peg rents at a high figure. It interferes with cherished liberties. It discourages speculative building, which is always needed when a housing shortage exists. Government economists, who are not always averse to restrictive measures, look on rent control as a last resort. Yet some of them do approve it in an emergency. For example, Harriet Elliott, in charge of the consumer division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, holds to the view that:

> Rent control is recognized as undesirable from the point of view of both landlord and tenant and should therefore be resorted to only when new construction is not sufficiently rapid and extensive to meet the need and where local communities can find no other means to check a disastrous rise in rents.

Regardless of all that can be said to the contrary, a housing shortage does exist in the District, and an acute situation is in the making. Last month The Post called attention to the report of the WPA Division of Research, which showed that only 1.9 per cent of all housing units here were for rent, and a negligible number in the lowest rental brackets. The overall vacancies already were below the proportion needed for a normal moving day, yet indications are that 100,000 persons will be added to the District's population this year. A prominent real estate man estimates there will be 16,000 dwelling units added in that time.

It appears, therefore, that we may be in for a repetition of the real suffering of 1917 and 1918. Mr. Randolph asserts that already a pay increase at the Navy Yard has been absorbed by boosts in prices at nearby lodging houses. The House District Committee should at least examine the facts so that it will be in a position to act, if action becomes necessary, before a general boosting of rents takes place. If landlords know that Congress is investigating the situation, moreover, they will be less likely to order unreasonable increases.

Return Of The Natives

Nearly 23 years after the Armistice the last of the A. E. F. has come home. These are the men who remained in France when their outfits made the return trip across the Atlantic. They had married French wives and as the years went by most of them found satisfactory jobs or started thriving little businesses. They reared French-speaking children and themselves gradually adopted French habits of life and perhaps of thought. Had the history of the past two decades been different, most of them no doubt would have remained all their lives in France. In a generation or two there might have been only English, Irish, Welsh or Scotch surnames to distinguish their descendants from the generality of the French people.

Not, of course, that these former soldiers ever abandoned their own nationality or any of their national loyalties. They celebrated faithfully all the American festivals—especially Thanksgiving Day and the Fourth of July. They maintained touch of a sort with their old comrades through their posts or chapters of the American veterans' organizations. They took a guardian interest in the graves of the American war dead and in the various American memorials. They spoke and thought of themselves as Americans. Nevertheless the America of their memories was the lusty, confident, mobilized America of 1918, not the confused America of May, 1940, which read with stupefaction of the successive disasters in Norway, Holland, Belgium and France. This is indicated by the fact that on the eve of the Battle of France the leaders of the Paris Post of the American Legion joined in those futile and pathetic appeals of the French for nonexistent American warplanes.

Doubtless, too, before that fearful May 15, these Americans had shared the fatal confidence of their neighbors in the "impregnable" eastern defenses of France. As they recall it now it must seem to them like the confidence that some of our Senators still feel when they think of "3,000 miles of ocean." Anyway, their little fortunes gone, their businesses extinguished or confiscated, this tiny rear guard of the A. E. F. has come back. With the help of money borrowed from the State Department these veterans of 1918 have brought their families with them. It is a sad enough homecoming—but at least there is still one homeland where a middle-aged man can, if he must, build his life anew.

A War Labor Board

The demand for more effective means of settling labor disputes in defense industries is daily winning so much support that most students of the problem now concede that an improved mediation service is essential. Undersecretary of War Patterson urges the creation of an agency similar to the National War Labor Board of 1918. The House Judiciary Committee before which Mr. Patterson testified is studying several bills to facilitate the adjustment of employe-employer controversies. Officials of the Office of Production Management are understood to be working out plans for a mediation board that could be set up by executive order.

Differences as to the method to be employed are many, but most of these plans reflect a common aim—to settle industrial disputes without loss of time in the production of defense weapons. It is true, as President Roosevelt has pointed out, that strikes have not become an alarming threat to the armament program. The point is, however, that there should be no stoppage of vital work while disputes are being ironed out. The estimate cited by Mr. Patterson, that 120,000 man-days of production were lost last week in plants working on Army supplies, is sufficient to indicate the seriousness of the problem. He has ample reason to fear, moreover, that the strains and stresses created by the armament program will intensify rather than diminish labor disputes unless improved machinery for their settlement is set up.

In many respects the labor problem is more complicated than it was in 1917-18. For example, an A. F. of L. strike at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, is delaying work on "one of the most important military aircraft centers in the United States." Apparently this walkout stems directly from the antagonism between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. In effect, our national defense is jeopardized while two American unions fight for supremacy. That type of walkout is utterly indefensible and it is because of such occurrences that we now have a public demand for the remedial measures such as Judge Patterson calls for.

One of the first acts of the old National War Labor Board, which he would revive, was to evolve a series of policies and principles that would protect the public interest as well as the rights of employers and workers during the World War. It stoutly upheld the right of collective bargaining, but it also laid down sensible rules to prevent unions from taking advantage of the war to coerce non-union men or extend the principle of the closed shop. In other words, it insisted that the national interest be given precedence over the interests of any group. And with only the strength of public opinion behind its policies, those rules won almost universal acceptance.

Whether the same type of board would be successful in solving the more complicated problems now arising is a debatable question. Ordinarily a board set up by Congress and given a clear-cut formula for mediation of labor disputes should attain more prestige than a temporary agency created by executive order. In any event it ought to be composed of skilled mediators. We are not impressed by the argument that it should represent management and labor. Both will be adequately represented by the parties to the dispute. The greatest need is for trained mediators who will represent the Government—the national interest—in efforts to prevent strikes or bring them to a speedy end. And while any such board would have to work in harmony with the OPM, the specialized job of straightening out labor disputes, as we have already suggested, should not be loaded onto the overworked directors of the armament program.

Cooperative Defense

A cordial understanding between the United States and Mexico, no less than between this country and Canada, is essential to defense of the Western Hemisphere. Acting alone, Mexico could not expect to repel a powerful foreign foe. The United States, of course, is in a much better position to resist an aggressive thrust, but failure to coordinate our defenses with those of our neighbor on the south would leave this country vulnerable also. Cooperative preparation to resist any potential threat from overseas is the only rational policy for either Washington or Mexico City.

The principle of hemispheric defense has taken firm root in Latin America as well as in the United States. There is a wide gulf, however, between acceptance of that general aim and agreement upon specific defense projects and operations to implement it. And without definite plans to link the defense facilities of the Americas into a unified system, hemispheric solidarity would be only a deceptive slogan. We have already gone a long way in working out a mutual defense arrangement with Canada. Panama, too, has entered into an agreement permitting the United States to use certain areas within that country for air bases. Negotiations with Mexico were not postponed because they are less essential to our national defense. While Mexico is farther from our large centers of population than is Canada, her proximity to the Panama Canal certainly makes defense of that country vital to the security of the United States. Discussion of a common defense policy with our southern neighbor has doubtless been slow in developing because of the delicate problems involved.

Tension has existed at various times in the past between Mexico and the United States. We gave the Mexican people reason for suspicion as to our motives in the era of "manifest destiny." More recently Mexico has given Washington concern by its seeming disregard for American property rights in that country. Undoubtedly the people of both countries will now be pleased to note the progress that is being made toward a better understanding. In the face of grave dangers to their security these two neighbors must find a way to pool their strength and resources for their common defense. Since they are exploring the problem in an amicable spirit, there is every reason for confidence that they will succeed.

The War At Sea

In his address of February 24, Adolf Hitler made the claim that 215,000 tons of British shipping had been sunk by German U-boats and bombers in the previous two days. If the figures just released by the British Admiralty are to be believed, the Fuehrer was indulging in an orgy of wishful thinking. During the entire week preceding the Fuehrer's address, the British and Allied losses of merchant shipping, the admiralty insists, amounted to 60,868 tons.

The British will find precious little comfort, however, in the fact that the Nazi claim of damage to their merchant fleet can be heavily discounted. For losses during the week February 17-24 are the highest for any seven-day period since December 1-8, when British vessels totaling 101,190 tons were sent to the bottom. Sinkings are again on the rise and threaten to exceed all records unless new and more successful means of combating the U-boat and German bomber menace can speedily be found. Even if the present average of losses is not greatly exceeded as the weather becomes milder in the Atlantic, Britain may soon face a desperate situation—for her shipbuilding capacities are not adequate to provide replacement for the tonnage sunk.

Britain's first lord of the admiralty, A. V. Alexander, was thus not exaggerating the nature and extent of the threat which faces his beleaguered nation when he informed the House of Commons yesterday that Britain needs "many more ships and great numbers of men" if she is successfully to wage "the battle of the Atlantic now opening." And the need embraces not only merchant vessels but also warcraft capable of performing convoy duty. It is in this category that the British fleet is particularly deficient, a fact borne out in the disclosure that the latest contingent of Canadian troops to be transported from the Dominion to Great Britain was protected by a fleet of many flags. It is also borne out in the admission by Mr. Alexander that some convoys have had "inferior protection" and thus have suffered "relatively heavy" losses.

Indeed, it is fair to say that the greatest danger which Britain faces today is not to be found in the Balkans, the Mediterranean or the Far East or even in the threat of an invasion but in the war of attrition which Germany is waging on British supply lines. If that war is won by Hitler, the invasion of the British Isles will become a relatively simple undertaking. On the other hand, the maintenance unbroken of Britain's sea lanes and supply routes will make it possible for her successfully to resist the German onslaught. Nor can this country ignore the situation, except at its own ultimate peril. We must do everything possible to replace Britain's tonnage losses. To that end there is real sense in the advice of William Hard in an article in the current Reader's Digest: "Build merchant ships, yes. But, above all, build destroyers and destroyers and destroyers."

WHITE FOX IN THE SNOW

White fox, what secret do you know
As you rest here like a white shadow
On the white snow?
Beside you brittle branches make
Black curves against the afternoon.
What winter memories lie behind
The pointed smile, the restless face
Where the slant eyes belie the languid grace?
One paw is lifted, indolent and quiet,
But sentient for the silver flight.
The muzzle is upraised to the flakes that fall
To the long-heard, the never-ending call
Of the white trail where cold stars lie

"Soviet Silence"

In his "Soviet Silence" article in your issue of today, Prof. H. Laski explains "Russian Reaction to Balkan Tangle" by Stalin's fear to risk Soviet security. It seems as if this explanation would charge Stalin with more than cynicism: with shortsightedness in handling Russian policy. We must certainly not underrate either his intelligence or Russian diplomacy by presuming that Stalin is unaware of the greater risk he takes by gambling on a Hitler victory. Stalin as an old revolutionary can be hardly so dogmatic as to ignore the facts: (1) That a Nazi revolution victorious over Europe, including the British Empire, would threaten Soviet interests much more gravely than resistance to Nazi aggression with the help of an undefeated Britain and the whole Mohammedan world; (2) That by having shifted Soviet internationalism to the track of Russian nationalism, he cannot afford to leave the Balkans at the mercy of Germany, to sacrifice the Straits in order that the Nazis may get hold of the Mosul oil fields; (3) That promises made by Hitler to spare Russian interests, even if they were worth more than the paper which they are written on, would be valid anyway for the duration of the war.

Whatever the Russian sphinx may be planning, this explanation is much too simple and unsatisfactory.

Uniform Traffic Laws

From Model T to streamlined ones, automobiles throughout the United States have blazed a glorious trail of progress. Complications in driving have long ago been eliminated, and every manufacturer of motor vehicles strives constantly toward improvement in this direction.

This is a beautiful picture, but there is another side, not as beautiful. It is that motor vehicle laws enacted primarily to insure safety of life and property, while good, show lack of progress, in that they are not uniform throughout the United States.

One great flaw in the system is the lack of uniformity governing the expiring dates of automobile tags of the different States of the Union. It would be a boon to millions, and a great step toward progress, if this complication could be remedied, and all annual tags issued in the same month of the year, for all the States.

I believe the majority of our citizens strongly favor uniform laws regarding traffic, tags, titles and operation, etc., of motor vehicles for every one of the 48 States of our United States.

Letter From London

I've been in London over two months now and feel completely used to it. Life is still fairly normal (especially this last week, without raids), except that no one plans ahead, as we all know there's hell to come. It's strange how you can go on living in the immediate present—and enjoy it. In certain parts of the country you'd hardly know there was a war on.

My admiration for the Cockney women who have lost everything and have to make a new home is higher than I can say. Of course, some of them are thrilled to get new curtains and linoleum (they can all claim for damaged or destroyed furniture); but most feel pretty sad. They all say "As long as our families are alive, that's all that matters."

Since I've been in London, the bombing hasn't been too bad. I've heard only two loud bombs, and confess that they set my knees to shaking. It's amazing how quickly you can get used to the idea that there's something hostile overhead.

I'm in bed with flu, and my doctor has been in. He had some amazing stories to tell about rescues—people who have been under the rubble for four days, doing first-aid while bombs were dropping, moving time bombs. He was perfectly matter-of-fact about it. He and his wife run a first-aid ambulance and are called out whenever there's an "incident."

The American help is vastly appreciated. In fact, everyone admits that without the U. S. A. the war would drag on till everything is destroyed. We are following the hearings on the lease-lend bill with bated breath. Willkie is the hero of the hour over here—everyone has fallen for him.

Streets Of Italy

The recent letters in The Post concerning the streets of Washington have interested me greatly, for that subject has been on my mind ever since I came here a few months ago.

Having always heard that Washington was our most beautiful city, I was prepared to be impressed and was, indeed, filled with admiration for the magnificent buildings, the tree-shaded avenues, and the lovely parks. But the condition of the streets was an unpleasant surprise, almost shocking. To see little piles of dirt and dead leaves along the edges of the sidewalks, bottles and broken glass in the gutters, bits of paper and sometimes entire newspapers constantly blown about, did not seem to me worthy of our Nation's Capital. Better things are expected of this city than of others, and it all speaks of carelessness and lack of civic pride on the part of the citizens.

Comparisons are said to be odious, but since Mr. Rust in his letter in The Post of February 27 used so many of them, I may be excused for one. Shortly before the war, I lived two years in Italy, visiting most of its chief cities, and everywhere I found the cleanest of streets, all swept, washed and free from dirt, litter and torn paper.

Mussolini may be a "black-hearted Italian," "a jackal" and a number of other things just as bad, but he must be given credit for having cleaned up the streets of Italy and, what is more important, for having trained children and grown-ups to keep them clean. That is the chief point to consider, for there never will be cleaner streets until every person has such pride in the beauty of his city and such a feeling of civic responsibility that he will do his utmost to keep them clean.

Case Against The "Obstructionists"

The administrative Government, acting upon what was believed sound policy, has committed this country to the position of ally to Great Britain. The two major political parties recognized this fact in their political platforms. Then came the general election. The people sustained the administrative Government. Naturally, in this enlightened day, one would expect all members of Congress to join heartily in carrying out the will of the people as expressed at the polls. However, it turns out otherwise. Many members seem to see a precedent in the record of the Congress that declined to ratify the League of Nations, thus giving credit for a material prerequisite which did not in fact obtain. President Wilson did not have "the advice and consent of the Senate" to participate in the council of the League of Nations. Consequently, upon his return that body stood upon its prerogative—to consult with its constituency before voting on the proposed measure of ratification and when it voted, declined to ratify.

And so in the lease-lend bill, the opponents say we will follow the example set us by the "bitter-enders" opponents of the League of Nations, thus disdainful of a great fact obtaining here which is without counterpart in the League of Nations episode, namely: That in the instant case the people at the polls in November, 1940, have duly ratified the otherwise questionable conduct of the administrative Government in all that had been done toward giving aid to Great Britain, whereas in the League instance, the Congress had not previously taken the people in their confidence upon the question. Manifestly, in both instances, the Congress had to have the answer of the people. In the latter instance, the "bitter-enders" were justified in going to the country, because the country had not given its answer upon the question; but, in the former instance, the pertinent questions were duly propounded to the people and their answer duly given in November, 1940.

These obstructionists are also without cause for their criticism of the bill as carrying dictatorial powers. The Constitution makes the President commander in chief of the Army and Navy, and reserved to Congress the power to declare war and make appropriations.

Thus, in fact, the President is only a figurehead, anyway. Doubtless however, the Congress of this latter Roosevelt Administration does hold the record for going out of its way to make the President dictator for spending a few billion dollars of the taxpayers' money through certain so-termed "blank-check" laws which, thanks to time, have a definite end. But, aside from these laws, these latter-day "bitter-enders" opponents are clearly without a legal showing of dictatorial power in pending proposed legislation that is without precedent.

These "bitter-enders" say that the passage of the lease-lend bill will be followed by war; that to avert war the bill must be voted down. Yet, even the isolationist favors the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine and the "open-door" in the East.

I wonder how these isolationists would go about maintaining these two policies of government. Have they suggested some way for doing so that will not be objectionable to the Axis powers? As men of good faith, they will acknowledge that as between the kind and quality of governmental acts in this present world crisis, the part this Government has already played prior to November, 1940, and what it may do—pursuant to the provisions of the lease-lend bill—there is no fundamental distinction or difference. In November, 1940, the people of this country went on record, ratifying and espousing the policy of ally in this war of Great Britain against the Axis powers. This course was but the sanctioning of what had literally taken place on the part of the administrative Government during the year 1940. What had been done was by virtue of our traditional policies—the Monroe Doctrine and the "open-door" in the East. We were faced with the policy of aggression on the part of the Axis powers, and what were we to do? Fie upon those politically spineless creatures among us—the "die hards," who perhaps cherished the hope that they would have their way in the result of the general election of 1940 and succeed where Mr. Chamberlain and his cabinet failed.

The Post Impressionist

Contacting Celebrities

It was Christopher Morley who first tweaked my interest in the essay. And for this reason it was Christopher Morley's autograph I wanted. But how to get it? Already he had penned that poisonous line: "There is nothing quite so exasperating as autograph collecting." That sentence was a distinct challenge to any collector and I decided to match my artifice against it.

First, I tried a blunt means. Every adventure must have a beginning and this glittering task began in a sincere, frank note that implied how much I would appreciate this essayist's signature. No answer. Just a waste of postage, and I concluded that Mr. Morley shamelessly confiscated the stamp I enclosed and sent it tripping to anywhere but Baltimore. I realized that his scrap of handwriting was to be an elusive thing. Considering the possibility of his recognizing my name, I allowed a lapse of time, merely to blot out any impression he may have had that I was autograph-hounding.

A tribute is hardly a thing to be ignored; and yet, my beautifully formed letter, which was a genuine expression of my grateful feeling for Mr. Morley's many works, coaxed only the same blank response. My carefully chosen words, my choice sentences, evidentally found no rapture in his mind. The challenge of that "There is nothing quite so exasperating as autograph collecting" was even keener than I had first imagined!

Another interlude passed before I attempted to break down the indifference of this Christopher. Sheer determination like mine laughed at two unsuccessful efforts. There was a third chance. A fourth gamble. And even a fifth, maybe. My latest idea buzzed at the Morley residence and gained attention. A play for his interest was made, and an egotistical one it was. I had much wonderment at my own ability as an essayist, and as I labored under the influence of the composer of "John Mistletoe," what could be more fitting than a determination of the literary merits by the master? So I earnestly sent an essay of mine, brazenly asking for a comment on its merits. It worked!! And I hope Mr. Morley doesn't blame me too much for cherishing a certain sheet of Saturday Review of Literature stationery on which is penned a hasty note.

Fred Stone several years ago appeared in Baltimore at Ford's Theater. It was a gay, rhythm-stirring musical comedy in which he was starred. Shows, in my own naive style, are preserved in a more concrete form than memory by treasuring newspaper reviews and my own scribbled notes. Stage celebrities for whom I have affection I ask to autograph my program. In a letter sent to Mr. Stone, I expressed the fact that I was too shy to ask him in person for his signature. My own letter was returned with a penned:

"Will be delighted to write on program. Come backstage. Fred Stone."

The radio debut of Henry L. Mencken was the source of another important addition to my collection. His topic was "Beer"—and there was a rollicking conversation with the N. B. C. interviewer—Londell. During the repartee, the weaker sex found a decided place in the chatter. To me that brought up again the question whether or not "In Defense of Women" is a satire. Only one mind knew this. So I logically and immediately quizzed this mind. His gracious, quick letter of explanation was something that brightened the mail a few days later. Into my scrapbook went a neat page of typewriting signed with a name that is famous throughout the world. That I had proof for future debates about the volume on the female by Henry L. Mencken meant something to me personally—that I had profited in a signature was true again.

O. O. McIntyre had long been my pet columnist. And because he worked for a well-known syndicate and was familiar with many of the big newspapers, I thought that he might be able to put me in contact with somebody who might help in the discovery of that "escape into print." I refused to be awed and sent him some material which I had been told had public appeal. I honestly hoped that he would suggest somebody who would give my copy a little more attention than the editors in general had offered. His answer expressed a regret that his contract prohibited him from reading my manuscript. A cheery encouragement told me to remember that times weren't normal. At the end of this letter Mr. McIntyre signed his name.

The inspiration I found in "Adventures of a Novelist" naturally found its outlet in a friendly letter to Gertrude Atherton; I just couldn't help expressing what this book meant to me. Her lengthy note, completely written in longhand, found a real welcome under the sheltering covers of a certain book of mine. That she was kind enough to criticize my style, that she—the authoress of many exciting novels—found a faint quality in my maze of words, was enough to make me wistful for the delightfully maddening career of a scribbler which she had so liltingly described in her volume.

"F. A. Kummer" identified my next addition. This was a good tonic. Today I value it, not only for its place in my scrapbook but because of his favored: "Although I am forced, by lack of time, to refuse to read most of the manuscripts sent me, I have read yours." His criticism of my short story made me aware that I had put practically no stress on the plot, while I had caught the knack of wording worthwhile "descriptions" and "character drawings." The end of a closely-typewritten sheet revealed a pencilled "F. A. Kummer."

Mingled with this love of autographs is a necessary technique of "Know your man!" One easily fumbles an opportunity by failing to separate the different codes that celebrities have. There are people who act offish when approached for their handwriting; they have their minds made up not to be pestered. So these, if one is to acquire a new number for their accumulation, are the ones that need special attention. A bit of strategy is a decided asset in this exasperating mania.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Russian Policy

WHILE IT MAY seem odd that Russia should object to the Bulgarian conquest only after it is an accomplished fact, the performance is not inconsistent with all the rest of Stalin's diplomacy. Ever since Munich he has dreaded the power of the German army and has realized the weakness of the Russian army, and his one supreme preoccupation has been how to keep the German mechanized divisions from overrunning Russia and destroying him.

LIPPMANN

For the plains of Russia are ideally suited to conquest by a mechanized army. Hence the Hitler-Stalin pact of August, 1939, which left the French and British to meet the full force of the German army. Hence his moves in Poland, the Baltic states, Finland and Rumania to improve his own strategic defenses. Hence his frightened inability to resist the arrival of the German army on the shores of the Black Sea—a body of water as vital to the internal security of Russia as the Great Lakes would be to the United States if there were a hostile power on the Canadian side. Hence, we may imagine, his hope that Hitler's army will become engaged and will exhaust itself against Britain and in the Balkans and Middle East—that is to say anywhere which does not lead Hitler to the Ukraine and eventually to Moscow.

IN CONSIDERING the attitude of Russia we are most likely to see things clearly if we remember that this is a war between land power and sea power, and that Russia is the only great power left which has a land frontier with Germany. Thus far Hitler has been irresistible—but only on land, except in Norway when the connecting sea was easily under control from German territory. Hitler's conquests have thus far stopped at the shore line of continental Europe. He has yet to cross the English Channel. He has had to leave French North Africa alone and he could not intervene to save the Italian Empire. As long as the British navy commands the seas, Hitler is locked up inside of continental Europe. This leaves Russia in a very exposed position. For if Hitler finds that he cannot use his powerful but unemployed army against Britain and the overseas world, there remains Russia which is easy to conquer and well worth conquering.

It is for this reason, because his own position and probably his own life are at stake—and much less for ideological reasons which are now a luxury that the frightened cynics of Moscow cannot afford,—Stalin wishes to prolong the war. He wishes to keep Hitler fighting anybody but Russia and the longer Hitler fights anybody but Russia, the longer he must postpone the conquest of Russia. This does not mean that Stalin desires a victory for Hitler. Far from it. Stalin wishes someone else to beat Hitler, and in the meantime he has tried to appease Hitler by making Russia more useful to Hitler as a nonbelligerent than Russia would be if it were occupied, as in 1918, by the German army.

STALIN APPEASES Hitler by making himself useful in a number of ways: by Communist propaganda in the democracies, by paralyzing the will to resist in neighboring countries which Stalin is unable to support against Germany, by furnishing raw materials, and by opening a hole through the blockade via the Pacific and Siberia. For the time being he has purchased immunity by these services. The fragile arrangement has worked because of Hitler's preoccupation elsewhere with Britain, with his languishing ally in Italy, with the restless occupied countries.

But Stalin's position is deteriorating. Hitler is on the Black Sea. Hitler is in Scanadinavia. The strategic positions for the conquest of Russia have been occupied. Were Britain to fall, and with Britain there would fall Turkey and Persia, the occupation of Russia may be not much more of an operation than the occupation of Rumania and Bulgaria. On the other hand, if Britain does not fall but grows relatively stronger, and as the blockade of Europe is prolonged, it is to Russia that Hitler must look for food and raw materials to withstand the siege. But, since there is not enough food in Russia for the Russians, and no important surplus of raw materials that Russia can afford to export, and a wretchedly bad transportation system, Hitler cannot be appeased indefinitely by the meager supplies that Stalin sends him. The time must come, whether Hitler defeats Britain or fails, when adequate supplies can be obtained from Russia only by an occupation in which supplies are seized and the Russians are treated like the Poles and are put to forced labor.

THE COURSE OF RUSSIA will not be determined, we may be sure, by small concessions from Great Britain and the United States or by diplomatic hypocrisy about Russia's own offenses against the moral order. Russia's course will be determined by Stalin's desire to survive. He will appease Hitler unless a time arrives when he can and must defend himself by force of arms. All that the democracies can do to hasten that day is, first, to defend themselves successfully and thus exhaust Hitler and, second, to tighten the blockade so as to deprive Stalin of his capacity to serve Hitler and appease him.

The first of these means is the grand strategy of the war itself which rests on the principle of forcing Hitler to fight where he must cross water and encounter sea power. We shall probably see this principle exemplified soon in the Near East. The other means is to find ways of closing the Russian back door to Germany. For in so far as this door can be closed to the very important supplies which are passing through it, it must become ever more expensive and difficult for Stalin to appease Hitler. As the supplies from the outer world dwindle, as the stocks within conquered Europe are used up, it must increasingly become a question of whether Stalin or Hitler is to have the insufficient supplies that are now available within Russia.

THE POLICY OF Stalinist Russia is the absolutely cold calculation of a man and a regime that are trying to save their own lives. The method of the policy is to appease Hitler at the expense of the rest of Europe. The sound policy toward Stalinist Russia should rest on our equally cold calculation—which is that when Stalin no longer has the means to appease Hitler, he must in the end resist him.

When there are no longer any intervening countries which can be sacrificed, when the Russian hole in the blockade of Germany is closed, when the resistance to Hitler is consolidated with water between the German army and the Allies, when Hitler cannot get at the Allies but can still get at Russia, then Stalin's policy will have been played out and he will have to revise it.

The Reptile Tribe

SOME OF MY native or naturalized Florida public invariably resent as a foul and almost personal aspersion any reference in these dispatches to the reptiles which abound in the swamps and plains of their fair State. They insist that one sees what one wants to see in any clime, and that I am one who just goes looking for snakes. There is something to that, because the luxuries and elegance of Florida are no novelty to one who has spent a quarter of a century in New York, whereas the back country stirs the imagination—the more so because it lies so close to the pleasure coast. Still, this sort of overemphasis, if such it be, is no special peculiarity of mine, as may be noted in the fact that beyond the city limits of New York there is a thoughtless impression that this city is composed of just two elements—those who spend the livelong night, every night, helling around the Stork and El Morocco, and those who live in horrid slums. This picture of our city eliminates the majority of the people and their way of life, which is neither glamorous nor squalid, but New York does not protest.

OUR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, if we have one, coldly ignores movies, novels and gossip which do our civilization less than right. However, the fact that such a picture does persist in the public mind elsewhere suggests that out-of-towners, when they come here, instinctively seek out sights they wish to see and divide their time between society saloons and regions where it is well to walk outboard of the sidewalks to avoid the falling bodies of innocent tots flung from tenement windows by drink-crazed parents. Such horrors as the latter I have never seen, but I have seen reptiles in Florida, and perhaps Floridians come here to do the town have come upon sights that elude me.

But Florida people are unduly sensitive about snake publicity. People do not shun snake country, and if they had, few sections of the United States ever would have been settled by the white man.

It is well known that New England is infested with a type of rattler, smaller, it is true, than the balloon-tire model found somewheres in Florida, but quite poisonous, and only a few years ago a collector was struck and died on a mountain on the Jersey side almost within sight of the Empire State Building.

A commuter living on a rocky ledge in Scarsdale slapped down two dwarf rattlers with a niblick, and it is accepted that the Orange Mountains, the Poconos, Catskills and Berkshires are not to be explored on foot in summer without some degree of care. There are regions in Connecticut where the copperhead abounds, and, of course, the Middle Western States are familiar with the rattler.

Snake stories, when they occur in these regions, are duly printed in the local press and, if adorned with circumstances of unusual news value, are shoved along on the wires to the outside world without feeling one way or another. We accept such facts of life and never attempt to suppress them.

BY CONTRAST, in an amusing case, a young Hoosier, sitting on the city desk of a paper in West Palm Beach, once was sharply cautioned for giving position on page one to the capture of a 12-foot alligator by the town police in a garden on a city street at night.

In our surburban and country regions here we pay very little mind to reptiles, but, do, of course, conduct ourselves according to the sound wishes of Josh Billings, who wrote "When I see a rattlesnake's head sticking out of a hole I say to myself, 'That hole belongs to that snake.'" We don't mess with them, and the relationship mostly is 50-50, although we did have a historic case once near Winsted, Conn., in which a copperhead took the offensive without provocation and, by man's superior cunning, was dealt a fate that served him darn well right.

A man was fixing a tire beside the road when the copperhead advanced, so the man nagged the reptile with a long stick. And just as he struck, the man shoved a newly inflated inner tube in the snake's way, with the result that the snake struck the tube, the air pressure rushed through his hollow fangs and he blew up until he exploded like a toy balloon at a New Year's party.

Policy-Makers Of Defense

SOMETHING very like a war Cabinet has at last been formed. Its members are the heads of the State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments, with Harry L. Hopkins acting informally as secretary. Its task, although officially limited to administration of the lease-lend bill, is really to formulate, under the President's direction, all the numerous emergency policies which have hitherto grown like mushrooms on the Governmental dump heap. It began to function a fortnight ago, and has already prepared the first consolidated schedule of British and American armament requirements.

Such is the meaning of the teeming rumors about interdepartmental defense committees, superdefense agencies, and so on, which have plagued Washington of late. The new group will certainly not called a war Cabinet when it is christened, and its importance will probably be minimized by the President. But the real clew to its character and potentialities is to be found in what it has achieved already.

Before it is finally gazetted, of course, the President must put through his plan for reorganization of the defense setup after passage of the lease-lend bill. At present, besides the new group, the plan calls for continuation of the Office of Production Management in its existing shape as the defense production agency. It also calls for consolidation of the price division, consumers' division, agricultural division and other remnants of the old defense commission in a sort of office of economic management. Governmental plans have a way of falling to pieces at the last minute, but the auguries for this one are better than good.

UNLESS THE President changes his mind or its members fall down on their jobs, the new war Cabinet or Cabinet committee ought to become an active generator of defense plans, standing in the same relation to the Government as the executive committee of a board of directors does to an industrial corporation. Something of the sort has been desperately needed in Washington for many months, and while many people may not regard the new body as the perfect solution of the problem, it is at least a long step in the right direction.

Its formal duties will be twofold: to define defense objectives, as in the case of the British-American armament schedule; and after the objectives have been approved by the President, appropriated for by Congress and transmuted into production by the OPM, to decide what shall be retained in this country and what shall be lease-loaned abroad. Its short history already indicates, however, that its practical scope will probably be considerably broader than any statement of its formal duties would suggest.

The President began to consider steps to be taken after the lease-lend bill rather more than two weeks ago, shortly after Harry Hopkins' return from abroad. Hopkins had brought with him much useful information. Above all, he had brought a conviction of the wisdom of reasonably centralized, over-all planning to meet British and American war needs. The schedule of British needs brought from London by Arthur Purvis of the British Purchasing Commission had proved, some time before, that upward revision of the defense program must be attempted. After pondering the situation, the President therefore called together Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, and told them to tackle the problem cooperatively.

Since then this group has met almost daily, with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles sometimes substituting for Hull, and Undersecretary of the Navy James Forrestal acting in the absence of Knox on an inspection tour. Because he did not want an official position, Hopkins has not attended the daily meetings, but he has always been present when the group met with the President, and he has acted as liaison officer in the intervals. He has also recruited the beginnings of a permanent staff, borrowing from the Treasury George Haas as statistician, Philip Young as expert on British requirements, and Oscar Cox as counsel, and getting help in the War Department from Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, executive officer for Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson. Besides preparing the British-American consolidated schedule, the group has already begun to tackle several other knotty questions raised by the defense effort.

IT SHOULD BE clearly understood, of course, that the new group is strictly supplemental to existing agencies. OPM Director Gen. William S. Knudsen was consulted by members of the group as to the part he wished to play. His answer was a laconic request to be allowed to produce the goods, while other people did other jobs. He will have his way.

For the business of determining policy and defining objectives has little to do with the business of production. Policy has not been determined clearly; objectives have rarely been defined at all, because the President alone was responsible, and he was always overpressed by the daily governmental routine. In one or two departments, of which Henry Morgenthau's Treasury is the prime example, there were men clear enough in their own minds to fight for some semblance of orderliness in the Government. But before reasonable orderliness could be attained, the President had to take such a step as he has now tentatively taken.

Their first achievement is the best proof that the new group fills a big hole. It seems incredible that until now, no overall list of British-American war needs had ever been drawn up. Yet it is the fact, and it explains much of the faltering and fumbling in the defense effort. Now the list is ready, and the appropriations are being calculated by the Budget Bureau. When the Budget Bureau has finished, the Congressional leaders will decide whether to request the appropriations in a lump sum, or for Britain and the United States separately. And when the appropriations have been voted, the defense effort can at least move forward toward a visible goal.

Britain Establishes School For Seamen in Middle East

By Larry Allen.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt, March 5.—Britain has established a "miniature Annapolis" somewhere in the Middle East to train young seamen to shoot with topnotch accuracy and speed.

At present, 750 bluejackets—a maximum—are being trained in seamanship and gunnery in broad, spacious grounds of the new "naval university," first overseas school to be operated under British admiralty direction.

New recruits and ordinary seamen are put through tough gunnery practice and tests in all phases of preparatory naval training, with the reward of "able seaman" ratings. Gun drill, field training, ammunition handling, hydraulics and fire-control practice are in the curriculum.

The bluejackets, many of whom received brief training in England, get three weeks of intensive work in the school, then three months of service aboard warships before qualifying as able seamen.

Highly trained gunnery experts and naval warfare technicians put young seamen through rigid drills in gun-firing and explain tactics.

The new institution was described as an important aid in putting finishing touches on new drafts of sailors—providing an immediate reserve supply of men near the scene of Mediterranean naval operations, instead of training all in England.

Officers said the training center was designed to turn out a steady stream of expert seamen to keep British warship crews at peak efficiency.

Nazi Planes In Ecuador

By Devon Francis.
Associated Press Aviation Editor.

Appraisal Of Threat

QUITO, ECUADOR (Correspondence of the Special News Service).—In Ecuador, as in all of South America, appraisals of threats to the security of the Panama Canal are being made by the United States, and the operations of a German airline here are among their concerns.

Sedta, affiliated with the German air transport monopoly, Deutsche Lufthansa, is both an airline and goodwill emissary for Berlin.

How much of a threat, if any, to the United States Sedta's operations constitute in a military sense is a matter which United States officers normally would cover in confidential reports dispatched to official Washington.

More obvious is the spirited competition between Sedta and Pan American-Grace Airways, known as "Panagra" and owned jointly by Pan American Airways and W. R. Grace & Co.

Unofficially, but nevertheless with the apparent blessing of Washington, Panagra has pitted itself against Sedta in Ecuador.

Some legs of the routes of the two companies parallel each other. Through an agreement with the Ecuadorean government, Panagra advances the money for the purchase of land for airports. When the land has been improved for use, Sedta avails itself of its legal right to use such a public landing field.

Any military aspect of European air line flying on this big continent must be considered against the backdrop of the United States foreign policy. As relations with the Axis powers have worsened, the Army and Navy have grubbed around to find possible trouble spots.

They must decide, for instance, in the big scheme of hemisphere defense, whether the airport at Esmeraldes, in northern Ecuador, a few flying hours from the Panama Canal, constitutes a danger to that vital waterway.

ONE BOMB, DROPPED by a lone airplane at night, might tie up canal traffic for weeks.

Sedta runs two sturdy, triengine Junkers transports to half a dozen airports in Ecuador. It gives good service. Its planes can get in and out of small fields which Panagra's faster, newer planes could attempt only at the risk of accident.

Sedta parallels Panagra into Guayaquil, Salinas, Manta, Esmeraldes and Quito, and then adds Cuenca and Loja on its own account.

The German line not only uses ports established by Panagra but it undercuts Panagra's rates as well. Currently it is carrying by air without additional cost all letters bearing train-mail stamps.

The competition is on a no-holds-barred basis. When Panagra suffered an accident recently, Sedta's advertising blossomed forth with the statement that its airplanes had three engines. Panagra's planes have two.

Last October, part of the Quito press began agitating for the ousting of Sedta. As long as the German line can prove that its operations are in the public's interest and that it serves areas not served by Panagra, the question of its ouster would be embarrassing to the Quito government. Sedta now is trying to establish service into Porto Viejo, only 20 miles from the regular terminal at Manta.

Considered singly, Ecuador's airports, even though they were seized by violence by a power unfriendly to the United States, could not be used as bases of operations against the canal. Given a strong United States air force in the Canal Zone, the Esmeraldes airport, for instance, would have to be buttressed by auxiliary fields for safe operation.

One airport can be bombed out of existence by a determined attack.

Military men purport to see significance in the fact that the German transport planes load their baggage through hatches in the bottom of the fuselage. Bombs are loaded in that fashion on military planes.

UNOFFICIAL SOURCES here put at 102 the number of German-controlled transport planes in South America, a figure at least three times as high as any I have heard in a circuit of this continent.

In its drive toward hemisphere defense, official Washington, through the Army and Navy, is trying to implement its diplomacy with agreements whereby no part of this continent could become a springboard for enemy military action against the canal.

The narrow, but long, coastal plain of South America's west coast, including that portion of it in Ecuador, is an evident worry to the armed services. As relations with the Axis became strained, the United States tried doubly hard to enlist the active collaboration of the republics of South America in some sort of defense setup.

A border dispute of long standing between Peru and Ecuador has not made the task any easier. In the midst of an incident involving Lufthansa, operating in Peru, and Sedta, a statement by an official of the latter company did not go unnoticed.

Paul Degetau, Sedta's manager, in a published letter assured the Ecuadorean government that his two airplanes would be at the disposal of Quito in the event of international trouble.

Lufthansa adopted another tack. It disavowed any intention of creating an incident between the two countries.

Sedta personnel does not like that of Panagra, and the compliment is repaid in kind.

Unable to get a seat in one of his own planes, a Panagra employe the other day bought one on Sedta.

"How many passengers do you have?" asked the American.

"Seven passengers and two pigs," replied the German pilot.

"I looked around," says the American in relating the story, "for the other Yankee."

But there really were two pigs. Sedta carries everything. That is one of the secrets of its success in Ecuador.

Executive Authority

The Immensity Of The President's Task

NEWSPAPER and radio reporters at President Roosevelt's first press conference following a few days of illness from a cold alluded to his appearance, using such words as "wan," "gray-faced." In his spirits also, there was some lack of his customary eager alertness. He passed up opportunities for wisecracks, such as the newsmen occasionally provide by their questions. Much more often than usual, Mr. Roosevelt fell back on those perfunctory phrases which table a question without answering it—replying that the question was too general; or that to answer the question would take a half hour; or that the matter is still under study. When a reporer asked if the President thought there was a filibuster in the Senate on the lease-lend bill, Mr. Roosevelt replied that he supposed this was a matter for argument. When the reporter pursued, "Would you care to argue it, sir?" Mr. Roosevelt wearily indicated that he did not.

SULLIVAN

At the close, Mr. Roosevelt said, in a rather graciously apologetic spirit, that he was sorry the reporters didn't get much from the conference, he was sorry to have spoiled so many good stories. A reporter replied, in a spirit probably meant to be tactful, but sounding possibly tart, that the newspapers would manage to be filled tomorrow nevertheless. That was an opening which Mr. Roosevelt at his best would have leaped to, an opportunity for the irony he frequently uses about newspapers and their contents. But in his present mood, Mr. Roosevelt merely said the reporter who made the remark was a wise, experienced man.

THE ALLUSIONS of radio and newspaper reports to Mr. Roosevelt's appearance and listlessness might create an incorrect impression. He had had only such a cold as few escape this time of year, and his vigor resists colds better than most. About the President physically, there is that lack of news which is good news.

In his spirits, however, it is possible Mr. Roosevelt may be conscious of a feeling of frustration, which to him would be a most unusual sensation. It is possible that, whether Mr. Roosevelt realizes it or not, he faces the necessity of admitting to himself that he cannot keep his own hands on as many matters as he tries to. At best, he is not good at that delegating of authority which is at the heart of efficient administration. During his 1936 campaign, Mr. Roosevelt smilingly told intimates that he could make a better argument against his reelection than the Republicans did, and that the burden of the argument would be imperfections of administration.

To the admitted peacetime inadequacies of Mr. Roosevelt's administrative methods are now added two new conditions, both seriously detrimental to speed and efficiency. The first is, of course, the sheer immensity of the war job, now piled high upon that inverted pyramid of administration whose point rests upon the White House. Mere weight of the additional job, and its newness and complexity, would alone explain much of the brake upon efficiency.

But to the size of the war job is added a trait of the method by which Mr. Roosevelt attempts to manage it. He takes account of two groups. One consists of the men experienced in industrial management, such as Mr. Knudsen, formerly production manager for General Motors; the other consists of the New Deal radicals around Mr. Roosevelt, together with the labor leaders, especially the C. I. O. ones, typified by Mr. Hillman, who continues to be vice president of C. I. O. (and also member of the executive committee of the American Labor Party).

AS BETWEEN THESE groups, Mr. Roosevelt's method is to—express it any way you please—carry water on both shoulders, walk a tight rope. (Except that it would give a false impression to suggest Mr. Roosevelt is impartial as between the two groups; the result of his method is not impartial, it is the radical New Dealers who in most cases get their way.) Between the two groups, Mr. Roosevelt's method is that no representative of either shall have authority, that always authority shall be divided between two. The example, at the very top of the defense structure, is Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman, who, Mr. Roosevelt insists, are not two men but one—the twin head of the Office of Production Management. As it happens, Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman get along fairly well, though I do not, at this time, say which of the two usually prevails over the other—that is a separate story and a most important one. In the ranks below the top, Mr. Roosevelt's method works out fantastically. In office after office are two men chosen to check each other, whose mutual attitude must result as "giving each other the dog-eye."

As between the two groups, it is the New Deal and extreme labor group that prevails. So much so that Mr. Raymond Clapper says "the Roosevelt Administration is, in effect, a labor government;" and Mr. Arthur Krock reports to the same effect. This judgment raises the question whether America can at the same time carry on preparation for a foreign war and what would amount to a domestic revolution.

When Private Joe Doakes, of Company X in the Philippine Islands, wants to find out in a hurry why he hasn't heard from the folks in Washington, he radios his complaint nowadays, and without hocking his watch to the paymaster.

He can flash his "Why no letter?" demand 10,000 miles to the Capital, free of charge, in about the same time as required by commercial systems. The medium is a little-known but active volunteer radio network, run by the Army.

The Army Amateur Radio System is the official term for 2,500 "hams" who operate private sending and receiving sets in this country and its possessions.

Except for a minority of service men, who are members of the system only incidentally to their regular duties, the "hams" are civilians—businessmen, laborers, farmers and professional men with a hankering for radio.

They are subject to no Army regulations except one: They must "drill" at sending and receiving messages at least once a week—between 7 and 9 p. m. Monday. If they do not fulfill this requirement, they are "separated" from the system.

The 2,500 amateur stations are split into networks. The national or Army "net" centers around Amateur Station WLM, located in the Munitions Building. There is also a net for each of the nine corps areas, and one for each State.

To send Doakes' message here from the Philippines transmission would involve a relay over the Army net. One of the several amateurs in Manila would flash the message to Hawaii, from where it would be routed to Station WLM here.

Bulking large in the flow of thousands of messages daily, according to Maj. David Talley, liaison officer for the system, are messages of newly inducted selectees to their families. A number of trainees, in fact, are making arrangements to set up amateur transmitters at replacement centers, it was reported from other sources.

Within the Third Corps Area, the "hams" shoot messages back-and-forth through the District, Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, via the W3SN, control station at Baltimore.

Similarly, radio messages traveling only inside the state net for this region (Maryland and the District) pass through the central station of Burke Edwards, a mineral water distributor of 302 Lynn Drive, Chevy Chase, Md.

Wage-earning vocations of members of the radio system are varied. The State control man, alternate to the mineral water distributor, is Lieut. Col. E. S. Van Deusen, of the Army Motor Transport Corps. His home and station are at 5521 Chevy Chase Parkway, D. C.

Youngest of the local operators is Henry C. Lybrand, 3901 Fulton Street Northwest, 22-year-old typist with the International News Service. Another member of the Army hookup is Roy C. Corderman, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. official, of 4101 Leland Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Corderman, is also emergency coordinator for the American Radio Relay League, which did notable work in the New England hurricane of 1938.

Other Washington amateur Army stations are W3PV, radio designation for Roland A. Fowler, real estate man of 7120 Eighth Street Northwest, and W3FE, otherwise J. S. Noble, of 3618 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

It's easy to see that Mrs. Perkins favors standardization of hats. Hers haven't changed much in eight years

We're Holding Our Hats While on This Delicate Subject

The delicate subject of women's hats became a matter of controversy from the Social Register to the soda counter after Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday that standardization of styles "might be less trouble, but it certainly would be dull."

It all began when Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was reported in a recent statement to have favored the control of "wild" hat styles.

Miss Perkins' office said the press and the White House were confused. The closest the Secretary had come to a dissertation on hats, her office said, was to complete a study of the women's hat industry in which it was pointed out that standardization of the industry is important for survival.

On the subject of "wild" styles, Mrs. Roosevelt asked, "Who is to say what's wild? Can't we be allowed to choose? I'm for freedom."

As long as women like "wild" hats, she continued, it will be impossible to "tame" the headgear.

An anonymous male observer of the recent styles said the First Lady's view on styles does not coincide with her urging the sacrifice of luxuries to utilize industry for defense needs.

It was also pointed out that mass production, a current United States need, would be easier to get if the hats were standardized.

Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the president of the Export-Import Bank, agreed with Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Individuality is definitely necessary," she said. "You must remember that we all don't have the same kind of faces."

She also expressed admiration of Miss Perkins' tastes in the hats she is reported not to remove even at her desk.

"One of the most becoming hats I've ever seen Miss Perkins wear was a huge joke hat given her at a recent Women's Press Club stunt party," she said. "I think even Miss Perkins liked it, for she wore it all evening."

The more varied the hat the more "it helps the spirit and the soul, although rather hard on the pocketbook," said Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Florida Senator.

"Differently styled hats give women a new lease on life," she said "And I really believe the men like the present styles. My husband never pays any attention to the styles, but at a recent tea he said to Mrs. So-and-so 'I admire your hat.' And it was the most outlandish affair. I was amazed and pleased to see he really likes the styles."

Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, wife of the Nebraska Representative, emphasized that there's a difference between "smart" and "becoming" feminine chapeaux.

She terms Miss Perkins "a woman of great courage who persists in wearing the same style." Miss Perkins' style she called "becoming."

The "smart" variety is "just any kind at all," she said.

Behind the soda counter in a drugstore at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest stands Joseph Wentz, 18, of 24 Todd Place Northeast, who sees as many as 1,000 feminine hats a day.

Joe wrinkled his nose. "As far as birds and flowers go—that's out. I like 'em just simple. Maybe a feather here or a feather there. But generally—"He shrugged—"You know—simple."

Shoes Unlined And Elasticized For Spring

Have you ever heard of unlined patent, garbardine, calf or alligator shoes, the gabardine and calf being not only unlined but elasticised as well. They are a brand new treatment in shoes and you can be sure they will put comfort right up in the forefront. They are being featured in smart but unfussy styles.

If there is one thing women have tired of it is fussy and dressy bows on shoes. Dressy shoes are now being dressed-down rather than dressed-up. High point in the matter of trimmings are "hat treatments." That doesn't mean veils or roses or feathers, either. "Hat treatments" are neat discs at the throat which simulate straw hats both in their closely massed self stitching and in their shapes. Some resemble open crown breton sailor hats lying flat aginst the throat of the shoes and are ornamented with a simple brown or button, which makes them most attractive.

Home Furnishings Historically Inspired

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

The styling of home furnishing accessories is reaching a closer accord with furniture styles. Modernized old styles, also historically inspired modern styles, are fashion trends in floor coverings, lamps and decorative objects as well as furniture. This will be a year remembered for the freshness of new designs and their contemporary flavor, even though they are traditional in inspiration. A new style character for things modern is having an exciting upswing.

Lamps and pictures that match each other exactly are now top fashion. Pictured at left is a Balinese group, the lamp base being the composition head of a girl painted in brilliant colors that are repeated exactly in the water color of the picture on the wall. It is ideas like this that start the planning of smart new rooms.

In the living room pictured below, flower decorations are carried out in the group of pictures hanging over the divan. The divan is covered in a flower fabric with a matching yellow background, and the whole is set off by an unusually attractive textured rug.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Goes on Wanting and Trying to Have Second Child, Despite Precautionary Warnings of Husband And Family Doctor; Asks Disinterested Opinion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since our daughter, who is now 7, was born, we have planned for another child. She was an incubator baby. But now she is a healthy, exquisite, intelligent child. When she was born, the doctor advised me against having another. I believed, however, that the risks were unimportant, compared to the advantages of having another child. My desire for another child led to several miscarriages and considerable expenses—for furniture, badly needed clothing, etc.—but I have been frustration.

After each failure I have been in deep melancholia, which I have managed to throw off. I am happy and interested in my daily life, yet this contentment seems to be partly due to my conviction that I will have that second baby yet . . . Because my family doctor has continually discouraged my efforts, I consulted another doctor—a woman, who has several children of her own. As I had hoped, she had a different attitude. She gave me an exhaustive physical examination and could find no reason for the miscarriages. She admitted I would have to "be careful," and might require a Caesarean section—but she thought, as I, that it would be worth it.

Now, my husband is afraid. He says we shouldn't try to improve on perfection: our little girl. He says that since he is probably at the peak of his earning power, we may never be able to do as much for her as we would like to; but that we can do more for one child than for two. We are buying our home, and we do have a struggle meeting expenses—for furniture, madly needed clothing, etc.—but I have believed the privations were worth having another child, so that our daughter could learn to share and could have the companionship of a brother or sister.

My husband points out, however, that since we are so happy and congenial, I shouldn't take this risk; that the expense and my endangered health are a worry to him. He said these words: "You owe me something, too, you know." This remark puts another light on things. I do owe him some consideration. So, these past weeks, I have wavered back and forth. In one mood, I am determined to make the best of the blessings I have—a good husband, a sweet daughter, and a nice little home. Then, in another mood, comes the nagging thought: But is it fair to her? Then I think of ways to compensate to her. And then I will see a picture of a baby in a magazine and I know that I have got to have another baby. I need a baby, for myself. (And yet, I do have absorbing hobbies; and am reasonable and well balanced except for this obsession.)

What chances for normalcy does an only child have? When she is grown, will she have an unhappy memory of a lonely childhood—even though she has many neighborhood playmates? Is it harder for a child who has grown up alone to adjust himself to the world? Do you think I should make every effort—even though I may never be successful—to have another child? Would we be unfair to our child if we decided to let things continue as they are?

For years I have been certain, even with all the setbacks, that I would have another child. Now that there is a question in my mind as to the wisest course, I am confused and worried. Will you please advise me? Sincerely,
MRS. P. T. M.

Mental Hygienist's Slant Might Prove Helpful

DEAR MRS. P. T. M.: I am inclined to think the supposed disadvantages, in every case, of being an "only child" are sometimes sentimentally exaggerated. Given intelligent parents, with a civilized yet realistic outlook on life, why shouldn't an "only child" develop as normally and happily, and emerge into adulthood as well prepared as the child of a large family, to cope with the intricacies of the social scheme?

Such parents would, of course, provide their child with a "compensatory" training and association with other children which would save him from the egoist's handicapping assumption that the world centers 'around himself; which would teach him that he is one among millions on the face of the globe, and that vital relatedness-to-living is achieved by contributive, adaptive, sharing processes—not by a self centered, supposedly self-serving attitude of domineering, demanding and taking.

Even assuming that an "only child" is somewhat less robustly happy than children in a large family, during his growing-up years, because obliged to spend more time in contemplative soliture,—who (save the hedonists) has ever supposed that unadulterated, unthinking happiness is either the aim of life, or the best preparation for coping with life's realities?

Some margin of solitude in childhood is potentially conducive of a thoughtful, philosophical, analytical habit of mind. And the person who has been an "only child" may—as a result of his continuous semi-detachment from the arena of objective experience—bring a finer balance, a surer judgment, a deeper insight to bear upon the world of men, than does a person who has always invested all his energies in an active social interchange—taking no time out to decipher the profit (or loss) of same to himself or others.

So, I think we may honestly agree, for the sake of discussion, that you do not "owe" your one child a brother or sister, in the circumstances described. But having begot her, you do owe her a reasonable concern for her (shall we say) basic security: which is to say, security in the joint love and care of father and mother. Can you guarantee her continuance of this security, in trying again for another baby? In my opinion, if such an undertaking seriously threatens your life, you would be blindly selfish in attempting it. Your one child would stand to pay, in immeasurable desolation and bewilderment, for your unreasoning insistence on a course of action to which Nature itself seems to be opposed;—not to mention your husband and family physician.

And it seems to me you are not matching your husband's generosity with equal consideration. What of his side of the picture?—keeping himself, constantly in debt, paying the costs of your series of miscarriages and subsidizing your continuous conferences with doctors; uncomplainingly adapting himself to a married life of sorts with a woman who has committed herself to a condition of semi-invalidism for years; and now, finally, confronted with the possibility of being left a widower with a motherless daughter—all because of your neurotic compulsion to have a baby, whether or no.

It occurs to me that a mental hygienist's analysis of your emotional distress might prove helpful. A better understanding of the basic implications of your frantic striving for another baby might change the face of the situation entirely.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Women's Page.

Women Prefer Some Color In Male Garb

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

It's up to the men now whether they blossom out in color and plaids this spring. Women generally give such action their enthusiastic approval. A survey made yesterday among Washington clubwomen, business women, social leaders and homemakers showed that women welcome the change in men's attire.

This doesn't mean that men are to strut around like peacocks in gaudy colors, but rather that they will be wearing soft muted shades like those shown in the new dusty Glen plaids. These are the plaids that have won enthusiastic praise from women whose pet aversions have been the race-track tweeds and loud Scotch plaids.

Put Blame on Women

During the past, men have put the blame on women for their own drab, uninteresting outfits. In defense of women, Dr. Florence Armstrong, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, puts a new light on the question. She doesn't believe women have intentionally usurped the color field, but said, "Stylists got busy concentrating on women's clothes and just forgot the men. The grim industrial revolution which brought on the machine age might have played a part. Men found it more practical to wear clothes that didn't show soil; but now, with spotless modern factories, it's time they return to gay colors."

Dr. Armstrong likes to see men in color and plaids. "The little bit of color they have worn in their ties and hats has saved the day," she said. "George Washington," she continued, "used to go around to parties wearing plenty of color and he got along very well."

Clubwoman Objects

One conscientious objector to color for men was Mrs. Herbert S. Middlemiss, president of the Women's City Club. "I'm agin it," she said. She approves of a little bit of color, as in plaid scarfs and ties, but doesn't think that men generally look well in color. "Color makes men appear less manly," she continued. "Dark, conservative clothes are more in keeping for a man, as they are a better background for women's colors." To Mrs. Middlemiss there is nothing more unhandsome than men in light-colored slacks. She frankly believes they look a little feminine—somewhat like women's lounging pajamas.

It was the wife of one of the best-dressed men of the season, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who would really go the whole way in putting men in color. She likes the idea of the "knee pants" era of velvet and lace jabots back again. "I would even love to see my own husband in velvet," she said. "But of course, any such idea would be abhorrent to him—and perhaps that is why he is one of the best-dressed men." She continued, "The drab, uninteresting colors are more serviceable, perhaps, but I like the romantic era in any clothes."

Towel Treatment

Hollywood, Calif., March 3.—As an occasional complexion aid Priscilla Lane takes a cue from men. Voicing her approval of the male sex, who never worry about their complexions, Priscilla describes a wet towel treatment followed by a facial brushing with liquid soap. She uses warm towels to open pores for the brushing, wet towels as an astringent.

Avoid Food Fads in Reducing; Special Combinations Worthless

By Ida Jean Kain

There are so many food fads that it is hard not to believe that perhaps you need something special to help you deal with avoirdupois. Some of the self-styled food experts will try to impress you with the divination that "You, Madame, are the potassium type" and that you need more of this element in your menus to keep you slim.

Or they may tell you that you are not eating foods in the right combinations—that that's the whole trouble with your weight. Or, you may be assured with earnest fervor that you need a dash of magnesium to bring out your magnetic personality.

Usually, the stress is given to some obscure mineral, one you don't hear much about. And it seems almost logical to believe that the lack of some such element in your diet—rather than just too much food—is making you fat.

No Mystery About These

If any mineral is lacking, it is very apt to be calcium, phosphorus or iron. These are rarely stressed by the faddists. There's no mystery in them. But they are, nevertheless, the ones that are important. And if you get enough of these minerals, you get all the others—they are present in the same food sources.

No food combination is going to make you slim unless it is low enough in calories. There is no combination of foods that has any chemical reaction against fat. The thing to be sure of is the foods comprising your menus supply all the protective elements.

If you are looking for novelty in your menus, you'll find it in the behavior of protein. A diet high in protein speeds up the tissue of metabolism. That means you can lose weight a little faster on the same caloric allowance when a good share of the calories are in the form of protein. The protein foods are: lean meats, fish or fowl, eggs, skim milk, cheese. They should be included every day—not merely to expedite your loss of weight, but because they furnish repair material for wear and tear. Another advantage of the protein foods is their high satiety value. They help you to feel well on your diet.

Fats Really Fattening

Here is another scientific tip that will help you to reduce: Pure fats are two and one-fourth times as fattening as any other food element. An ounce of sugar and an ounce of butter weigh the same, but the sugar counts 113 calories and the butter 218. You can reduce faster by cutting fats to the minimum. Fat does supply one food essential, however—butter is high in Vitamin A, and this must be replaced. This can be done by supplementing the daily menus with one vitamin concentrate.

A balanced diet is more sensational than any food fad ever devised. It lets you use up useless fat and improves your health.

Particles That Doom Hosiery May Injure Other Clothing

Minute carbonaceous particles, strongly acid, which ruined women's hosiery during the 50-mile-an-hour wind two weeks ago and again early this week, may ultimately affect other garments such as topcoats and dresses, the Bureau of Standards reported yesterday.

Howard E. Shearer, research associate at the Bureau, said his examinations of stockings worn during the windy "blitz" disclosed small acid-soaked cinders lodged in the fibers.

"It is not unlikely to assume," he said, "that these same cinders have lodged in the fibers of other garments and; if so, the strong acid may do damage."

Shearer said he believed that "something unusual" was being burned in furnaces in the downtown area where the stockings were ripped to shreds.

"The particles we took from some of the damaged hosiery," Shearer continued, "were apparently not from furnaces burning ordinary coal or oil. They were strongly acid and that's what caused the trouble."

The same was true, he said, of the stockings ruined during the rather mild windstorm Monday and Tuesday.

The "danger zone" has been established between Tenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest and Pennsylvania Avenue and F Streets. The worst spot, according to the number of complaints, was Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

H. K. Kugel, head of the District smoke inspection unit, was at a loss to explain the acid cinders. He said most buildings in the area measure up fully to smoke regulations. He has asked Shearer for a report of his findings and will conduct further research.

Michigan Society To Dance Today

The Michigan State Society, said to be Washington's oldest active State society, will hold an informal dance at the Hotel 2400 at 9:30 p. m. today.

Officers of the organization searched through the organization's records yesterday to find it has had various names since its founding in December, 1862.

Originally known as the "Sons of Michigan," it celebrated the entrance of the State into the union with a huge dinner on January 26, 1864, at the National Hotel, 212 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Among the guests were Gens. Pleasanton, Augur, Meigs, Rucker, Custer, Cole, Alger and Ellis.

In 1877 the name of the organization was changed to the Michigan State Association, which was changed recently to the organization's present name. During the past 30 years every Michigan Senator has served as president of the society except Senator James Couzens, who served as vice president.

Prenuptial Parties for Miss Stillwell And Mr. Hagner Keep Society on Go

By Hope Ridings Miller.

PRE-NUPTIAL PARTIES for Miss Louise Stillwell and Randall H. Hagner, jr., who will be married on March 14, are making the social calendar hum these days. The bride-elect's completed plans indicate that her wedding party is to be one of the largest of the season, and not only the ones in that group—but practically everybody else, it seems, is trying to work a party for her onto an already crowded schedule.

Hope Ridings Miller

The ceremony, which will take place at the Argentine Embassy, at 4 o'clock, will be followed by a reception to which a number of additional guests have been invited. Miss Stillwell has chosen as her attendants Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, the former Marguerite Hagner, as matron of honor, and as bridesmaids, Miss Elaine Darlington, Miss Isabella Hagner, Miss Sita Finkenstaedt and Miss Margaret Houghteling.

Alex Hagner will be best man, and ushers will include Britten Brown, Middleton Train, Samuel Biddle, Yelverton P. Garnett, jr., George Wheeler and Thomas Moorhead.

Miss Darlington was hostess at a dinner last night in honor of Miss Stillwell and Mr. Hagner, the party taking place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett on New Hampshire Avenue. The Garretts, who flew up to Pittsburgh late Tuesday afternoon, returned late yesterday—also by plane—and were on hand to greet guests at last night's fete.

Among those in the company were Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Miss Finkenstaedt, Miss Hagner, Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Wheeler, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. A. Yelverton P. Garnett, jr., Countess Guy Baillet-Latour, Mr. and Mrs. William Arnold, Britten Browne, Middleton Train, Samuel Biddle, Tinsley Adams and Alex Hagner.

Miss Finkenstaedt Gives Luncheon

The next party in the Garrett home is to be given Saturday afternoon when guests of honor will be Mrs. Garrett's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarkson, of Long Island, who are coming to Washington to spend the weekend.

Another fete on Miss Stillwell's schedule yesterday was the luncheon given for her by Miss Finkenstaedt. The 11 guests included Countess Baillet-Latour, Miss Darlington, the Misses Marion and Mary Theresa Norris, Miss Zeva Fish and her cousin, Miss Beth Kean; Miss Prochnik, Miss Mildred Dunn, Miss Hagner and Miss Peggy Morgan, of Baltimore.

Miss Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, will entertain at a dinner tomorrow night in honor of Miss Stillwell and Mr. Hagner. The fete will take place at the Dunn home, 1706 Eighteenth Street, and there will be 22 guests.

Bachelor Dinner At Chevy Chase Club

One of the largest parties scheduled for the couple is the dinner that Mrs. Randall Hagner, mother of the prospective bridegroom, and Alex Hagner will give on Thursday, March 13, the evening before the wedding. The Sulgrave Club will be the scene of the event, which is expected to draw around 50 guests.

Meanwhile, tonight, Mr. Hagner will gather a sizable number of his friends for his bachelor's dinner at the Chevy Chase Club, and the list of parties will continue to grow by the minute. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler are planning a cocktail party for Miss Stillwell and Mr. Hagner, and a number of other fetes also will be worked onto their calendar in the next few days.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Donna Julia Brambilla will be hostess at a luncheon today at the 1925 F Street Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Watson will have guests dining with them tonight . . . Mrs. McCeney Werlich will entertain at dinner on Monday, March 10 . . . Mrs. George Thorpe will be hostess at a dinner before the opening of the National Gallery on March 17 . . . Others entertaining before the opening are Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, who will have their dinner at the Sulgrave Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Edward Foote To Wed Mrs. Doeg Monday Afternoon

The Post learned exclusively last night that Mrs. Dorothea Scudder Doeg will be married Monday afternoon to Edward Addison Foote, son of Mrs. Edward A. Foote, of Cleveland, and the late Mr. Foote. The prospective bride is the daughter of Edward W. Scudder, publisher of the Newark Evening News, and Mrs. Scudder.

Mrs. Doeg attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. Mr. Foote was graduated from Yale in 1927. He is a nephew of Mrs. Royal T. McKenna. Only relatives and close friends will attend the wedding, which will take place Monday at Mrs. Doeg's home in Georgetown.

Mrs. Atwill Gives Party

Mrs. Altemus Whitney, who recently returned from California and is at her estate near Upperville, Va., to spend part of the spring, was among the guests at a small dinner given last night by Mrs. Lionel Atwill. The party took place at the 1925 F Street Club.

Lieut. Walter Brooks, who has just been inducted into the Air Corps, and who recently came East from his home in California, was also among those present, as was David Cohn, the well known author, and Miss Azadia Newman, the portrait painter.

Others there were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert M. Danford, Maj. Gen. Allan Gullion, Maj. Winant Johnston, former Senator Henry F. Ashurst and Irving Harris, of New York.

By Carolyn Bell

Proofs that Washington women are Orient-conscious could be found yesterday at the Shoreham, where more than 800 appeared for the first of the Far East lecture series which was followed by a buffet luncheon. Stepping forth in sprightly spring finery, the ladies filled the new ballroom to hear Dr. Ellsworth Huntington . . . swarmed over the lobby where the receiving lines were in action . . . and later discussed the lecture over their curried shrimp or creamed chicken, in the Blue Room.

"You can't keep women in line," laughed some knowing person as Miss Beverly Marshall, one of the pretty young ushers, attempted to get the women to assemble to greet the honor guests. Although it was announced that protocol would not be observed—it was followed in the matter of receiving lines. Not knowing just what to do with Cabinet wives and Supreme Court wives, the powers that be solved the situation by having two receiving lines. Mrs. Barnet Nover made the introductions to the Cabinet ladies. Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, wore a black frock with lingerie touches at the neckline. Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General, also had chosen black, and Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Agriculture Secretary, wore a chic black ensemble with a ruffled white collar.

On the left side of the room were the Supreme Court wives. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone headed the line and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who wore a wine red ensemble and furs, was next in line. Others there were Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter and Mrs. William O. Douglas.

Guests Given Geography Lesson

The knowledge-hungry ladies were exposed to a lesson in geography yesterday morning. Dr. Huntington is professor of geography at Yale University. The gist of his lecture dealt with the effect that climate and diet have on peoples. Japan, Dr. Huntington says, has variable weather, as does northern China. Therefore, these people are healthier.

Preceding the lecture, a message from Secretary of State Cordell Hull was read by Maxwell M. Hamilton, chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs of the Department of State. Next week Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt will speak.

Following the talk many of the ladies took their places in the queue awaiting luncheon. An interesting table included Mrs. Archibald McLeish, whose soft, brown ensemble was topped by a chartreuse sailor; Mrs. Frankfurter, Mrs. Robert Harkness and Miss Craig McGeachey, recently arrived Britisher who represents the Minister of Economic Warfare.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

Arriving a bit late, with her Red Cross uniform thrown over her arm, was Mrs. Horace Williams. She wore a lipstick red frock and matching flower hat. Turned out in a purple silk native dress was Mme. Kwong, whose husband is attached to the Chinese Embassy. Mrs. T. V. Soong came in for the lecture, but had to hurry away before luncheon. A bevy of pretty young ushers were on hand to see that everyone was well taken care of. They included Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Beverly Marshall, Miss Mary Jane Stanley and Miss Betty Mills.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who is chairman of the series, wore a handsome tweed suit of purple and blue stripes. Mrs. Raymond Clapper, general chairman; Mrs. Frank A. Waring, luncheon chairman, and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, chairman, were on hand to see that things ran smoothly.

Among the luncheon hostesses were Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. John Dempsey, Mrs. John Studebaker, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Frederick M. Gould, Mrs. Harold Krafft, Mrs. Adam Gordon, Mrs. Harold Biesemeir, Mrs. Robert Sherrod, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. Charles Boysen, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Harold Bowen, Mrs. William C. Van Vleck and Mrs. Frederick Shelton.

Friends View The Biddles' New Home

By Elizabeth Henney

At the first party to be given since Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle moved into their new home in Georgetown, Mrs. Biddle entertained yesterday afternoon.

Receiving alone in the drawing room the hostess was gowned in ice blue satin, fashioned floor length, with a long-sleeved bolero of the same material, outlined at the neck and sleeves with a wide band of black chantilly lace. With it Mrs. Biddle wore an old-fashioned necklace of aqua marines and amythysts. An anniversary present from her husband, the necklace was from the collection of the late Ada Rehan, famous Shakespearean actress.

Almost as they would on a Georgetown tour, the guests prowled from room to room of the lovely house at 1669 Thirty-first street, which had once been the property of Fulton Lewis, collateral descendant of George Washington.

Biddle Library Papered in Gold

Coming in for much admiration on the part of the guests was the effective way in which the Biddles have blended the modern and antique, both in furniture and decoration. In the library, just to the left of the entrance, Mrs. Biddle has had the walls done entirely in gold wallpaper, as a most effective background for some of their collection of paintings and sculpture. A Pascin oil-portrait dominates that room over the mantel, and many pieces of sculpture (done by Mrs. Biddle's sister, Cornelia Chapin) and oils (by the Solicitor's brother, George Biddle) are to be found throughout the room. By far the most valuable of their collection, according to Mrs. Biddle is a small portrait, "Harvest," by Albert Pinkham Ryder, which they have placed for the moment in the library, but which has yet to find its "perfect spot" in the household scheme of things.

Many Assist At Tea Table

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, she gowned in black with touches of white and a smart black and white sailor hat; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, she in black, with touches of blue, which were accented by her blue flower nosegay hat; Mrs. Francis Shea, Mrs. Matthew McGuire, Mrs. James Bennett, Mrs. Ugo Carusi, Mrs. Keith Kane, Mrs. Charles Fahy, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Wendell Berge, Mrs. Thomas Quinn, Mrs. Warner Gardner and Mrs. Thomas Harris.

Among those noted during the afternoon were Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the Minister from Ireland; Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the Senator from New Mexico; Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Robert K. Knowlton, Mrs. Bruce Wallace, Mrs. James V. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Lewis, Mrs. H. A. Schweinhaut and many more.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

"Practically every one I've talked with here has been bombed or machine gunned" said a guest at a party the other afternoon. No, it wasn't a London gathering, but one right here in Washington. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Jones, who recently came here from Manila, where Mr. Jones was financial adviser to three successive commissioners.

DUDLEY HARMON

One guest was Mrs. Edward Treglown, who, with her English husband, is visiting Justice Frank Murphy. Until a month or so ago they lived on the coast of England, in the so-called "defense area" which is continually being bombed. Young, blonde Mrs. Treglown says, "I was the first woman to be machine gunned in England." She was out in her garden one day, when along came a group of planes, and the bullets landed all around her.

MANY OF the American correspondents in London used to drive down and stay with the Treglowns. She says she is mentioned in a new book, to be released shortly, "They'll Never Quit," by Harvey Klemmers. He went to London originally with Ambassador Kennedy but stayed on after his boss' return and only recently came back.

The Treglowns made the trip here by Clipper after several weeks of waiting in Lisbon. When they left, their house had somehow escaped damage.

ONE GUEST at the party who has been dodging bullets off and on for years was John Davis, of the State Department. He was not only in Warsaw when the war began, but was one of the few who stayed on through the siege. He told of taking planes in Europe, only to have them return to the airport because traffic was interrupted by dog fights. The Davises shipped all their furniture and personal possessions out of Poland and have not heard a word about them since.

Mrs. Davis and their son had arrived in Europe from a vacation here just a week before war began and had to come right home again. Later Mr. Davis was sent to Norway, but, rather anticlimactically, left the country before it was invaded. He has previously gone through bombing in 1927, when war broke out in Nanking. Now he is head of the Philippine Division of the State Department.

JUSTICE MURPHY dropped by to greet the guest of honor, C. M. Cotterman of the Philippines. The latter, who is in his seventies, made the trip from Manila by Clipper and plans to return the same way in April. He went to the islands some 40 years ago to start the postal service there and then went into business. He has made his home in Manila ever since and is well known everywhere there. Commissioner and Mrs. Francis Sayre lived in the house next to his while they waited to move into the Commissioner's official residence in Manila.

Practically all the guests had something to do with the Philippines at one time or another. Paul V. McNutt, who followed Justice Murphy in the Commissioner's post, dropped by for a few minutes only as he was on his way to dine at the White House. Mrs. McNutt is just back from a brief stay in New York.

Another present at the party was Alger Hiss of the State Department, who also has to do with Philippine affairs.

SIR HENRY and Lady Chilton, who are visiting Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon, are renewing acquaintance with the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax at a dinner tonight at the embassy. Mrs. Bacon will also be a guest. The Chiltons will return to New York on Saturday and later will go back to England.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Leave for Florida Today

"I'm not going to do one single thing," said Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday when asked what her activities while in Florida would be. The First Lady will leave Washington, and incidentally, all appointments and engagements for some time to come, today. She will take the plane, if the weather permits, for Golden Beach, Miami, for a vacation in the Florida sun.

Mrs. Roosevelt also added, when queried as to whether the Duchess of Windsor would come from Nassau to see her, that nobody would visit her. She plans to spend her days swimming and reading. She said yesterday that her idea of the perfect vacation was "to do the things you wish to do."

The First Lady promised to meet with Florida reporters briefly when she alights from the plane, but will then go straight to the house at Golden Beach and seclusion. She says the residence has a wall around it and looks directly toward a beach.

The newspaper women had invited Alexander Woollcott to attend yesterday's press conference with the First Lady, but the White House visitor begged to be excused. Quizzed about her guest, she said he was "most entertaining." She and the President spent an evening at Mr. Woollcott's invitation looking over some beautiful colored photographs he has of Marineland, in Florida, and Vermont. That same night they saw a documentary film which Harry Hopkins brought back from England.

Mrs. Roosevelt will return March 16 from her Florida vacation. She will hold a press conference the next morning at 11 o'clock and that night will accompany the President to the opening of the National Gallery.

Miss Rogers Addresses Zonta Club

Miss Ann Rogers, head case worker for the Florence Crittenton Home, addressed the Zonta Club yesterday at its regular luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

There is too much sentiment and not enough research regarding the problems of children born out of wedlock, said Miss Rogers, and there is generally too much harshness in the public attitude toward the unmarried mother. An illegitimate child, she pointed out, has few rights under the laws of this country.

Of appreximately 180 known white births out of wedlock in the District every year, about 85 are at Florence Crittenton Home, said Miss Rogers. This institution is one of 65 in the country, conducted under the Florence Crittenton Mission, which was established in 1883. The unmarried mothers and their children are always cared for during the first year of the child's life and are followed up as long as there is need, she explained. The mother is trained so that she will be self-supporting when she leaves the home.

There is need for a similar institution for colored girls, she added.

Miss Rogers told the Zontians that 75 per cent of the girls received at Florence Crittenton were from broken homes. Their average age is 19, she said, and their average "I. Q." 89.

Mrs. Nan Street, president of the club, opened the meeting and Mrs. Ann Harding introduced the speaker.

Roosevelt Reassures Women on Lease Bill

President Roosevelt assured the National League of Women Voters yesterday in a letter to Miss Marguerite M. Wells, National League president, that the policy under which the lease-lend bill would be operated "would not be a war policy but the contrary."

The President's letter was a reply to an official communication from Miss Wells stating theorganization's support of the bill.

Handicraft Comes Forward in Machine Age

Miss Vera Smith, instructor in ceramics, shows an example of the work to Mrs. Cazenove Lee, a member of the board of directors of the National Craft Training School

Passing through narrow hallways and up and down equally narrow stairs, the visitors saw displays in every room not only of pottery, metal work and weaving but also of the equipment in the workshops.

On the first floor, was pottery. Bowls, vases, plates, children's cups with amusing little animals forming their handles, candlesticks and decorative figurines were among the pieces of pottery shown. There was great variety in style and the use of color, giving individuality and interest.

In the basement was the woodworking shop where there was also equipment for spinning pewter. Handsome cups of different sizes and design were among the pieces on display. There were also tables and other examples of woodwork.

On the second floor, other metal work was shown including pieces of silver, copper and pewter—plates, bowls, cups, candlesticks and a variety of costume jewelry.

Another room on this floor was devoted to weaving and was equipped with looms, large and small. Rugs, linens, tapestries and needlepoint were on display.

On the third floor, screen printing was being demonstrated with several examples of work already done.

Mrs. Harry L. Rust, herself an accomplished craftsman, and president of the board of directors, was present with other board members to welcome the guests at the exhibition. Among them were Mrs. Cazenove Lee and Mrs. William L. Breese, jr.

Miss Mabel Richardson, of the American Red Cross, was one of the interested visitors. Miss Edith Coulson, former secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, whose suggestion of the need for such a training center was originally responsible for its being started, also was there, as were Mrs. Laurence Benet, Mrs. William L. Breese, jr., Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Miss Clara Saunders and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie.

The center was established about two years ago through the generosity of Mrs. William L. Breese. Since it opened, 250 students have passed through the center. Students pay $150 for a year's tuition for regular classes from 9 to 4 for five days a week. Although the center was chiefly designed to train crafts instructors, it is by no means limited to these.

The woman's board assists in its maintenance, as the tuition is not sufficient to suggest it.

MEMBERS of the volunteer committees preparing to assist with the rooming house survey to be made for the local Defense Council, under the direction of Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, of the Washington Housing Association, won't have to worry about transportation.

Mrs. Frank Thorpe, jr., has been assigned the job of organizing a motor corps to "chauffeur" the inspectors from place to place and wait for them while they are making their inspections. She already has a group of young women, some of them this season's debutantes, on her list of volunteers. She expects to have 50 group lieutenants, each responsible for five other girls. With this number, there will always be enough drivers available to care for the workers who need transportation.

Cooperation also has been promised by the Police Department, which is working out a plan by which special permission for parking during the period of inspection will be granted. This will minimize the time required for covering a given area, eliminating the necessity for driving 'round and 'round looking for a place to stop.

The rooms inspected and approved will be listed on cards with the rental price. These cards will be furnished to room applicants at a central headquarters soon to be opened. The Capital Transit Co. will cooperate with the committee in providing information as to what bus or car goes nearest the location and this will be included on the card.

The room survey is designed to prevent overcrowding as workers in the defense program flock to the Capital, and also to assist them in finding living quarters suited to their needs.

ANOTHER DEFENSE SURVEY—The American Legion Auxiliary has announced plans for registration of the half million women in its membership for voluntary emergency service. The registration, which is similar to that already carried out by the American Legion, will be conducted on March 15.

Auxiliary women will fill out questionnaires being sent by the national headquarters to 9,100 units throughout the country. On the questionnaires they will list their availability for service in many fields, including automobile driving, nursing and first aid, canteen work, entertainment, social service, office, household and administrative work, sewing, knitting and mending. Junior members will be listed for messenger and guide service.

Each unit will be expected to organize corps of volunteer workers, prepared to meet any calls for emergency service which may reach it. The individual members will be assigned to the type of duty for which they are best qualified.

This corps will work in close cooperation with the voluntary service organization of the legion and with the Red Cross, according to Mrs. Helen McCabe, department president.

The program is being directed nationally by a new national committee, headed by Mrs. T. Louis Chess, of San Mateo, Calif. Similar committees are being organized in each State.

Mrs. McCabe has appointed Mrs. Edith M. Armstrong to head the voluntary service committee for this department.

Wellesley Club Sees Movies Of the Campus

Motion pictures of the Wellesley College campus enlivened last night's meting of the Washington Club at the home of Mrs. William E. Safford, 3339 Mt. Pleasant Street Northwest. Some of the pictures were taken by Mrs. Bernard A. Chandler, president of the club, during last month's alumnae council, at which she represented local Wellesley women. Mrs. Chandler reported on the council session, as did the club's second councilor, Mrs. S. Paul Johnston.

Special guests at the meeting were a group of English women who became acquained with club members during preparations for last December's British war relief matiness held at the National.

Mrs. Beveridge J. Mair was chairman of the refreshment committee. Her assistants, all of whom graduated from Wellesley during the 20's, were Mrs. Paul S. Anderson, Mrs. William Wiley Chase, Miss Helen Comegy, Mrs. Charles Z. German, Miss Dorothy Grover, Miss Cary Millholland, Miss Millicent Rex and Mrs. Walter Livingston Wright, jr.

New York Society To Dance Saturday

The spring dance and party of the New York State Society will be held on Saturday evening in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will be from 10 to 1.

Members of the New York delegation in Congress have been invited. The receiving line, headed by the president of the society, James E. Black, will comprise, among others, Mr. and Mrs. William Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Gompers, Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Sutcliffe, Miss Ethel Anthony and Mrs. Marie A. Hollister.

Membership cards for 1941 may be obtained by addressing the society treasurer, Miss Jean Hamilton, 1306 Euclid Street Northwest. Guest tickets may be obtained at the door on the evening of the dance. Miss Irene Boehlert, Copley Courts Apartments, is the secretary.

Year's Funds Assured for Blood Bank

Maintenance of the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank for at least one more year is assured.

Preliminary figures yesterday on the third annual blood bank campaign, sponsored by The Post, WJSV, the American Legion and the American Contract Bridge League, revealed the following:

A total of $2,333.58 has been received from benefit parties, $1,713.55 being forwarded through The Washington Post and the remainder sent directly to Children's Hospital.

14 Parties Still to Be Given

In addition, more than $2,000 is in process of being transmitted, representing receipts of benefits held in the last few weeks. Beyond all that, 14 American Legion parties still remain to be given, exclusive of several others scheduled by other organizations and private individuals.

That the fund will reach the $5,000 mark appeared to be a conservative estimate yesterday. It is expected to be a month before all benefits are held, returns in, donors acknowledged and the total known.

Meantime, Mrs. Carrie Gant, president of James E. Walker auxiliary unit, American Legion, announced that members are raising a donation for the fund.

Benefit Tonight

Tonight the Vincent B. Costello auxiliary unit will hold a benefit party at the home of Mrs. Margaret Greenburg, 417 Seaton Place Northeast. On the committee are Mrs. Esther Watson, unit president; Mrs. Greenburg, Mrs. Ann Gramling, Mrs. Emma Joyce and Mrs. Katherine Mills.

Two other legion parties are scheduled for tomorrow night. The Second Division Post and auxiliary unit, in cooperation with the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's parish, will stage its benefit at St. Martin's Club, North Capitol Street and Rhode Island Avenue. James Reese Europe auxiliary unit will give its program at Crystal Caverns, Eleventh and U Streets Northwest.

3 Washingtonians Face Still Charge

Baltimore, March 5 (AP).—Two men and a woman, said by the United States attorney's office to be Washington residents, were held for Federal grand jury action after a preliminary hearing today before U. S. Commissioner James K. Cullen on charges of operating an unregistered still at a house in South River Heights, near Annapolis.

The three were Emory W. Swink, Lawrence R. Dyer and Mrs. Margaret Williams. Bail for Mrs. Williams and Swink was set at $1,500 and for Dyer at $1,000.

Federal agents stated that they seized a 60-gallon still, 750 gallons of mash and 31 gallons of whisky during a raid February 25.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Shortage of Defense Workers Stressed

General relaxing of rules and regulations by the Civil Service Commission indicates that shortages of trained persons for defense jobs are developing, while demand continues unabated. The commission yesterday, for example, gave the War Department authority to give one grade promotions to its temporary male stenographers and typists without its prior approval. Male stenographers and typists are becoming scarce and the department is promoting them in the hope of keeping them on the job. Recently the commission gave both War and Navy authority to promote its probational employes after only 30 days of service. There are open exams now for both male stenographer and typist.

The shortage of junior engineers is giving the commission serious concern. Defense agencies have been advised to go to engineering schools now and commit themselves to hiring students who will be graduated in the spring. Those who qualified for the engineer option under the junior professional assistant test weren't even given assembled tests and all available persons who qualified are now working in Federal jobs.

Inspectors of defense materials also are urgently needed. The commission this week ordered its district managers to approve without question the promotion of mechanics in navy yards to inspector positions, on the recommendation of either the chief inspector of naval materials or the supervisor of shipbuilding.

The commission also decreed that all temporary employes in defense jobs must be fingerprinted prior to appointment. It also warned department heads to have all defense employes fingerprinted without delay. What inspired the order is perhaps the fact that the Treasury Department recently found one of its temporary defense employes to be a notorious Communist. The employe hadn't been fingerprinted nor his character checked before he was given employment. The department now investigates carefully before it puts a person to work in a defense job.

One of the questions always asked prospective Federal employes is: "Have you ever been arrested, or summoned into court as a defendant, or indicted?" One conscientious young lady recently told the Civil Service Commission:

"Sued by boy friend for return of engagement ring."

Max Boyd, A. P. reporter, will start to work next week at OPM . . . Bernie Schoenfeld, Interior script writer, has joined OPM's publicity staff . . . James J. McEntee yesterday celebrated his first anniversary as director of CCC . . . Malcolm Smith, assistant statistician of Civil Service Commission, is leaving to become a regional statistician of WPA . . . Paul Krieger announces that UFWA's Commerce local will hold its spring dance March 15 in Commerce auditorium . . . National Association of Regulars is urging Congressional action on H. R. 1409 which would raise the pay of building guards and give them police powers.

The first 100 girls to register to dance with the draftees will be used to make movie skits. Five movie concerns are sending men here to make pictures of girls registering at the District Building Saturday afternoon. The 100 girls will then be placed in buses and sent to Arlington cantonment, on the Virginia side of Memorial Bridge, where the first dance of Government girls and draftees will be held. More than 100 girls have either called or written Archie Edwards to volunteer for the dances, which will be sponsored by the District Defense Council. A number of personnel experts have volunteered to register the girls. Among them are Dwight Porter, USHA; Leland Deck, Maritime; Edward Meisenhelder, Agriculture; Basil Capella, OPM; Kenneth Gallagher and Anthony Betoni, Civil Service, and Itali De Angles, FHA.

His friends are kidding B. M. Gaddis, an official of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, for discussing grasshoppers with Katharine Hepburn during a 500-mile plane trip. Gaddis, his friends say, didn't recognize the movie star, but insists that she knows all about grasshoppers. Gaddis says it is all a joke that has gone too far.

Five to a Pound

The pig that went to market gave five billy goats an idea yesterday, so they wandered off a farm in Takoma Park and sauntered into town.

They didn't see much of the market because police immediately escorted the adventurers to the dog pound. Now police await their owner.

Conservation News

The Board of Education yesterday received a batch of statistics indicating that Washington is being swiftly restocked with native sons—and daughters—a species generally supposed to be virtually extinct. Of the 92,597 in public schools, 58,143 were born here. Somebody ought to tell the Indians.

Citizens' Federation Celebrates

Marks 31st Year With Dinner, Hears Praise by Congress, District Leaders

The Federation of Citizens Associations, celebrating its thirty-first anniversary as Washington's unofficial town council with dinner in the Mayflower Hotel, last night was praised by Congressional and District leaders as "the most influential body of citizens in Washington."

Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court told the more than 250 citizens that "you have made the public business your business."

Commending the federation's 31-year record, Cayton said "every time the rights, the health, the safety of your constituent organizations and its thousands of members has been challenged, you have responded with active, intelligent, broad-minded leadership."

Likes Washingtonians

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, member of the Senate District Committee, called the federation "the organization relied on most by his committee for expressions of the sentiment of Washington residents."

Capper added that he likes Washingtonians, "next to Kansans, better than any other people on earth."

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, of the House District Committee, said that the federation has been "forthright and forceful" in its presentations on Capitol Hill and that "members of the House look with favor upon representations of this body."

He predicted "even more influence in the future as the federation's prestige continues to grow."

McCarran Speaks for Suffrage

The citizens' drive for suffrage in the District was praised by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate District Committee, who said that he strongly favors the move and intends to "present fairly to the Senate the facts about suffrage here when the matter comes up for a vote."

Harry N. Stull, federation president, reviewed the work of the organization and reported it now "stronger in number and prestige than it has ever been."

Calling the anniversary dinner a symbol of "31 years of service to the community," Stull said that "if there is any group of persons in the District who think they can do a better job, they are at liberty to attempt to do so."

He introduced as honored guests Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, head of the Board of Education; John Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission; William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, and Stephen T. Porter, chief of the Fire Department.

One-Man Debate

Four past presidents of the federation also were introduced: Dr. George C. Havenner, Jesse C. Suter, L. A. Carruthers and Thomas A. Lodge; as were the dinner chairman, James A. Crooks, and Harry S. Wender. David A. Babp, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and K. P. Armstrong, federation officers.

The entertainment program included a one-man debate by a black-face comedian, "Congressman Jet Black," who observed that he was late because of being caught in "the Van Duzian wonder—Union Station Plaza," and then in "Gen. Thomas' dilemma," the federation-sponsored underpass at Thomas Circle.

Other entertainers were Marian Middleton, the Potomac Electric Power Co. Glee Club, Rose Marie Schiller, Jacqueline Fedder and Sidney's Orchestra.

Judge Cayton, the principal speaker, stressed the civic importance of the bill to be presented to Congress shortly, which would merge the Police and Municipal Courts and transfer one-third of the work of the District Court to the Municipal Court.

Calls Bill the Answer

He asserted that 90 per cent of all District citizens who appear in local courts appear in either the municipal or police courts and that the newly-written bill "presents the real answer to many and many a problem in our lower court system."

"I truly believe that there is no more important problem before our citizenry and no more important problem before the Department of Justice than the administration of justice as it affects the great mass of our people," he stated.

In this connection, he commended previous action by the federation supporting the Small Claims Court, of which he was the founder, "which has now been functioning for three years and has for the first time in the history of the District, brought the courts really close to the mass of the people and made justice available to thousands to whom it was merely a name before."

Oldest Inhabitants

Plans for the 150th anniversary of the laying of the District cornerstone, to be observed south of Alexandria, near Hunters Point, Va., were announced last night at a meeting of the Society of Oldest Inhabitants of the District.

Clagett Proctor, chairman of the society's committee which is sponsoring the affair, stated that cooperation is expected from the Masonic orders of the District, Maryland and Virginia, the Mount Vernon Chapter of the D. A. R., the Society of Natives, the Board of Trade and the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The program will be based on a reenactment of the laying of the cornerstone April 15, 1791, at the southern extremity of the square which was designated as the District. The section in which the cornerstone was laid has since been ceded to Virginia with all the land west of the Potomac, Proctor said.

Fourteen persons were voted into the organization at last night's meeting held in the old Engine House at Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest. A gift for building repair from Christian Heurich was announced.

Citizens Suggest New Bridge Needed on Park Rd. for Army

The Friendship Heights Citizens Association voted last night to call the War Department's attention to the fact that the Park Road Bridge had been deemed too frail to accommodate passenger buses.

The Army should look into the matter, declared the association, because a crosstown route for troops and equipment would be needed if Washington had to be defended from an invader.

In other resolutions, the association indorsed budget recommendations for $30,000 to finish six rooms at Woodrow Wilson High School, a plan for a three-hour business recess on Good Friday, and the Overton-Hunter real estate taxation formula.

Carmine Carofalo was appointed to look into the advisability of affiliating with the proposed municipal assembly.

An answer to the association's request for a law to prohibit zoning changes without approval of the majority of residents within five blocks of the property in question was received from G. M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners. He explained such a law would violate the Constitution's due process clause.

Classes for Soldiers Planned in D. C. Schools

The Army yesterday completed arrangements to send enlisted men and officers from nearby posts to classes in Washington night schools.

The Board of Education approved a request from officials at Fort Washington to give soldiers courses in typewriting and office practice, auto mechanics and radio servicing. Teacher-training will be made available to reserve officers.

The Office of Education recently authorized schools to give the courses with the cost to be defrayed from national defense training funds.

Draft Service Wages Asked for Custodians

The Board of Education voted yesterday to ask the District Commissioners to draft legislation authorizing payment of custodial employes for services performed while draft boards were using school buildings.

The Comptroller General recently ruled that the Selective Service System lacked authority for the expenditure.

Count Potocki Arrested on Charge Of Driving 45

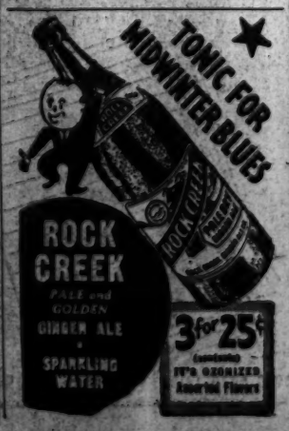
Count Jerzy Potocki, former Polish Ambassador to the United States, was arrested by Washington police last night and charged with speeding on Sixteenth Street Northwest at 45 miles an hour.

At Sixth Precinct Station, where he was taken by Privates Percy Dawson and W. L. Sherrer, the former envoy, who resigned his post several months ago, was asked whether he still possessed diplomatic immunity.

"Not any more," he replied.

He was booked and detained at the station house until the American Automobile Association posted $25 collateral for him at Third Precinct Station.

Under the law, he cannot forfeit the collateral, but must appear in Traffic Court at 11 a. m. today.



Auto Injures Dr. Floria and 4-Year-Old Son

A 56-year-old Washington physician and his 4-year-old son were injured seriously yesterday when they were knocked down by what police said was a stolen car.

Dr. Salvatore Floria, of 943 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and Angelo Floria were the victims. The accident occurred at Ninth and K Streets Northwest. Theodore Weaver, 36, colored, of 428 Twenty-first Street Northwest, was arrested by police and charged with unauthorized use of an automobile and failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Dr. Floria was treated at Emergency Hospital for a possible right hip and leg fracture and multiple bruises. His son was treated for a fracture of the left leg and concussion. Both were transferred to Sibley Hospital.

Esther Simmons, 43, of 121 Thirteenth Street Northeast, was in Emergency Hospital last night suffering from back and right leg injuries. She was knocked down by a car at Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest as she stepped off a loading platform. Police said the driver was Frank J. Eichinlaub, 22, of 4366 Argyle Terrace Northwest.

Richard Burns, 42, of 2415 Newton Street Northeast, was arrested and charged with driving while drunk yesterday after his car was in collision with a Safeway Trailways bus in the 2300 Block of Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. No one was injured.

Draft Dancers To Face Music In Next 10 Days

The girls who register Saturday for Washington's "draft dances" can expect early induction into active service.

A committee of welfare and recreation experts meeting at 1603 K Street Northwest with Robert E. Bondy, District welfare director, last night decided to take the girls to their first dance at a nearby Army camp in about ten days.

Registration for selective date service is due to start at 1:15 p. m. Saturday on the third floor of the District Building with arrangements made for recording the proceedings by news reel companies.

The first dance, Bondy explained, will be conducted in the nature of an experiment—not to determine how draftee gets along with draftette—but to obtain experience that will be valuable—in making arrangements for subsequent dances.

For the same purpose, Bondy revealed, it is planned soon to take a troupe of entertainers into one of the camps of the Washington area for a single theatrical performance.

By giving a trial dance as soon as possible at either Fort Belvoir, Myer or Meade or Arlington Cantonment, Bondy explained, it will be possible to determine how many girls will respond to a call for 75 dancing partners, how they may be safely transported and how an adequate supply of chaperons may be found.

The camps at which the experimental dance and entertainment will be held will be selected later.

School Board Seeks Power For Repairs

Faced with growing needs for repairs at many of Washington's older school buildings, a committee of the Board of Education yesterday moved to increase the board's control over the school repair budget.

The board's buildings, grounds and equipment committee decided to ask the District Commissioners for a conference at which closer working relationships between school authorities and William A. Draper, engineer in charge of the District Repair Shops, might be worked out.

At the same time, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith told the committee that after years of trying, District authorities have at last been induced to fix Western High School's leaky roof. Work has been started on roof repairs, she reported.

Control of the school repair budget is now in the hands of the Commissioners. Under an arrangement agreed to by the board and Commissioners in 1927 and only slightly modified since, requests for repairs are received from school principals and transmitted to the repair shop by Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent, after being designated by him as emergency, essential or desirable. The designation, it was pointed out, is not binding upon Draper, who may make such changes as he deems necessary.

An arrangement more satisfactory to the board, Mrs. Smith said, might result from a conference with the Commissioners.

Crane and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, pointed out to the committee that adequate school repairs have become a major problem chiefly because of the failure of Congress to provide sufficient funds.

"To indicate how inadequate these funds are, it is only necessary to observe that more than $17,000,000 have been appropriated for new buildings since 1930," a report on condition of schools submitted to the board yesterday, declared.

"These new structures must be painted and otherwise maintained. Yet with this additional load, the average annual appropriation for upkeep during the past ten years was less than the average annual amount appropriated for the same purpose during the five years preceding 1930."

Schools Alter Policy on ABC Permits

Ballou Objects To Changing Method For Opposing License Renewals

A new policy intended to end routine protests by school authorities against renewal of licenses for liquor establishments in the vicinity of schools was adopted yesterday by the Board of Education in a session marked by a verbal battle between Superintendent of Schols Frank W. Ballou and board members.

Over Ballou's protests that the new policy would restrict his discharge of moral responsibility to school communities and that it is "not the responsibility of school officials to become detectives," the board decided:

"As a general rule, protests against renewals by school authorities should be based on new information or any evidence of violation of the law rather than as a routine course of procedure merely because a protest was filed at the time the original application (for a license) was made."

The procedure for protest was worked out at a conference of six board mmbers and three members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board last month and stated in a report submitted at yesterday's meeting by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, board member.

The conference was the direct result of simultaneous submission by Dr. Ballou of 20 protests against license renewals at a time when the ABC Board would have had virtually no opportunity to hold hearings on the protests as required by law.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, declared that many of the protests then submitted were supported by "flimsy" evidence that the places concerned were detrimental to school morals. She pointed out that Dr. Ballou later had withdrawn ten of the protests.

Under the new procedure renewals of liquor licenses will be protested by the School Board "as soon thereafter in October as notices are posted on the establishments notifying the public that application has been filed for renewal, rather than to wait until the end of the license year to protest all renewals at the same time."

Other decisions on protest procedure agreed to by both boards are:

That the board continue its present practice of taking formal action on protests against new licenses and renewals.

That any "definite information" of law violation in establishments near schools be communicated "at any time" to the ABC Board and "also recorded in any subsequent protest that may be made with respect to the license."

"That pupils be instructed that minor children patronizing establishments selling liquor are subject to penalty as well as the proprietors."

Women to Demonstrate Their Driving Skill

An attempt to remove the stigma from women drivers will be made this afternoon when 40 feminine members of American Red Cross Volunteer Motor Corps stage a street demonstration of their driving skill.

The demonstration, scheduled for 2 p. m. on Jefferson Drive, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, is sponsored by the American Automobile Association and the Red Cross. Participants will be members of the motor corps who are now taking driving lessons given by the two organizations.

Minus Key, Capt. Person Breaks Into Own Home

Caught short recently without an official key to present at a school dedication, Assistant Engineer Commissioner John L. Person fumbled through his pockets and brought forth the key to his own home. He thought, of course, it would be returned.

The key went the usual rounds from Capt. Person to a school board official, to a citizen association official, to the school principal, etc., etc. Speeches were made and then Capt. Person went home. Unfortunately for the captain, his family was out of the city and he had to sleep. The small window in the back of the house cost only 10 cents to replace, he insists.

$500 Reported Missing After Job-Seeker Goes

A colored man walked into the office of J. Merrill Conner, real estate broker, in the Investment Building yesterday, asked for a job and left with close to $500.

At least that's what Conner thinks happened to the money which disappeared about 12:30 p. m. He told police the money was in a small cash box when the colored man entered. After the man was refused a job and had gone the money was missed, Conner reported.

Workman in Hospital After 12-Foot Fall

William Smith, colored, 41, a workman on a new apartment house under construction at 2100 Connecticut Avenue, suffered a possible fracture of the back yesterday when he plunged 12 feet through a skylight.

They Wanted the Time, So They Took It

Theodore Gray, of 1538 First Street Northwest, was stopped yesterday afternoon by two men at North Capitol Street and Massachusetts Avenue. Could Gray give them the time?

Gray produced the watch. The two strangers took it. They also took $5 from Gary's wallet, he reported to police.

Death Laid to Poison

The death of Warrant Officer Arthur Ehler, 39, Anacostia Naval Research Laboratory pay clerk, whose body was found Tuesday in a New York hotel room, was officially ascribed yesterday to corrosive gastritis "probably induced by a quick acting poison.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

A Young Adventurer Comes Out of the West

Mr. Sherwood Wanted to Produce, So He Did; The Trans-Lux Runs a Marathon Preview; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THERE ARE STILL ADVENTURERS in the motion picture industry. One of them is the youthful Mr. Robert C. Sherwood—who only missed being Robert E. Sherwood by a couple of letters and spaces. This Mr. Sherwood is the producer of the Columbia release of "Adam Had Four Sons," opening tomorrow morning on the screen at the Earle Theater.

BELL

Mr. Sherwood doesn't know quite why he is the producer of "Adam Had Four Sons," beyond the fact that after a considerable experience as actor and director in the famous Pasadena Playhouse, he developed a tremendous yen to get into the picture business. It seemed to him that the most expeditious way to accomplish his aim was to buy a likely property and make a film of it. So he got hold of Charles Benner's novel of "Legacy" and here it comes under its new Edenesque title.

Not having been able to attend the luncheon in his honor yesterday, this desk was flattered late in the afternoon by a visit from the six-feet-three, blonde, young stalwart who is taking the vagaries of the "moom pitcher business" in his stride. On the advantageous side of 30, he is full of enthusiasm and perplexing questions. The most perplexing was, "What does the public want on the screen?" If we could answer that one, we could write our own ticket 'way up there in the millions—which wouldn't be so bad, seeing as how, at the moment, we are approximately 80 cents on the shy side of having a thin dime.

But it may be that Mr. Sherwood was kidding. Born in San Francisco, he has lived for 18 years in Hollywood and quite obviously knows his way around the studios. He shot "Adam" in 42 days. And has three more coming up for Columbia release, although he doesn't as yet know precisely what or when.

One of his more reticent confessions is that he once played oboe with the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, a matter which he mumbles with some confusion. The answer to that probably is that oboe players, by the pernicious peculiarities of the instrument, always are supposed to go crazy. You only have to meet Mr. Sherwood to know that he chucked his reed under the bed and forgot it before it did the same to him.

He is married but has no children, which has him running a very deep last to "Adam," the man his screen title says had four sons.

When Roland Robbins, the veteran panjandrum of the Trans-Lux Theater, goes in for previews, he approaches the business in the grand and elongated manner. For instance, wishing to introduce The Post's Dorothy Thompson, Wythe Williams, Linton Wells and William L. Shirer to the talent a day in advance, Mr. Robbins is screening "International Forum" practically every whipstitch this afternoon and night. It will be shown to interested guests on the Trans-Lux screen at 5:40, 7:12, 8:40, 10:10 and 11:40 p. m. The regular honest-to-goodness run of this special and exclusive Trans-Lux feature will begin tomorrow morning.

As is remarked elsewhere on these pages, there is no stopping that "Night Train." Beginning Sunday, Sidney Lust, the bronzed derelict from the Florida coasts, will present it for three days as chief feature of the bill at his Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, Md. On the same program will be Mary Lee, Rufe Davis and June Storey in "Barnyard Follies," with "Alfalfa" Switzer also among those present.

One hopes that Mr. Alexander Woollcott, the ill-mannered "Man Who Came to Dinner," and Miss Doris Nolan, the provocative Lorraine Sheldon of the piece, had fun with the two Scotty pups they were discovered buying on E Street Tuesday night. They are a couple of gay dogs—the pups, not Mr. Woollcott and Miss Nolan, although they may be, too.

For the encouragement of the thirsty, that baffling bartender, "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman, still will be with the "Streets of Paris," when it comes along to the stage at the Earle in a week. All you have to do is ask for the particular brand of poison you prefer and, if you are lucky, that seductive siren with the tray will bring it to you.

As the first of a string of name bands, Benny Goodman and His Orchestra will play a one-night dance session at the new Uline Arena on Sunday night, March 16, from 9 to 1 by the clock. A flat admission charge of $1.10 per pair of feet will prevail.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 5 (INS).—Head and shoulders above all best sellers of 15 years ago was Margaret Kennedy's "The Constant Nymph." It started a new school in writing and while some people thought it naughty, it was beautifully written. Later as a stage play and a British motion picture, it continued to attract attention—with almost every American company bidding for the rights. Warners bought it—and while they've owned it for some years Hal Wallis never made any attempt to film it. Now it will actually reach the screen, with Errol Flynn and Joan Leslie, as soon as "Dive Bomber" is completed.

Roland Drew, one of my favorite gin rummy players, has just signed a contract with Warners and if he's half as good in their pictures as he is drawing sets of threes to beat me, he'll be as big a star as he ever was. His first will be "Underground," the spy story Vincent Sherman is directing.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Kay Harris, the "Tillie the Toiler" Cinderella, seeing Hollywood with Jack Clark, manager of the Hollywood Plaza Hotel; Lillian Roth, the broken-jaw gal, and Howard Burke, night-clubbing at Charlie Foy's Supper Club; Maureen O'Sullivan has gone to Dallas for the British Relief show which is a complete sell-out, according to my newspaper friends there.

Grace Moore's Hollywood friends will be happy to learn that her husband, Valentin Parera is recuperating at Saranac where he has been desperately ill. Val is very well liked here and was an enormous help to Grace in her operatic career; was that Richard Hayden, radio actor, with Rosemary Lane? The Ralph Blums (Carmel Myers) are celebrating Michele Morgan's twenty-first birthday on Saturday with a party; Dorothy Di Frasso's house guest, Mrs. Barclay Douglas, entertaining for Dorothy the same night and there is the Diamond Horseshoe ball at the Mocambo, so all in all, social Hollywood will be very busy.

I am hieing mystelf to the country Saturday to sleep until Monday morning.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

HOPPER

Well, it's all over but the shouting, and there'll be plenty of that. I mean our Academy Award dinner. Having the President of the United States speak for actors was something the old troubadors who used to follow the donkey carts never would have believed. Hollywood's grown up.

I'll admit it's taken a long time, but we're young in democracy—swift in achievement . . . Producer Kenneth MacGowan has achieved fame by producing such hits as "Little Women," "Young Mr. Lincoln," "Lloyds of London," "Stanley and Livingstone," and he was preparing "The Girl From the Amazon" for Carmen Miranda, when he decided working in pictures wasn't enough. He had to do something for his country so he gave up a weekly salary of $2,500 to take a job for the Government.

He'll work with Jock Whitney to bring about better relations through entertainment between the Americas. Kenneth, who knows so well what's amusing, has set a standard which will be a shining light for Hollywood to follow.

The Greek benefit the songwriters of America put on at our Shrine auditorium before a packed house of 7,000 people will live as long as memory lasts. It made me realize how much music has contributed to this industry. In the silent days it set the mood. We had love music and hissing symphonies for the villain. Since talkies began, popular songs have taken on a new importance, and as Gene Buck, president of ASCAP said—a composer puts his dreams on paper and then our bright stars, through their personality and interpretation, put wings on those melodies and they fly around the world.

I'd almost forgotten that Arthur Freed, now a big producer at Metro, wrote "Singing in the Rain." There were the actual composers themselves at the piano—Jerry Kern, Romberg, Cadman, Brooks, and dozens more. There were Judy Garland, Frances Langford, Mary Martin, accompanied by Cole Porter; Bob Hope, singing a specially written chorus of "Thank for the Memory," which has made him famous; Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin substituting for George M. Cohan who couldn't get here from New York, and singing "God Bless America." Jack Benny, introduced as "Mischa Benny," actually played the violin very well. Jack was never funnier—all in pantomime. (Don't worry! You'll see him do it in a future picture.)

One who came and wouldn't wait for his spot was Bing Crosby, who only owes his fortune to songwriters. My hat's off to Director Al Newman and his magnificent orchestra. They were on the stage three solid hours, and performed miraculously after one rehearsal. That was an evening, and to Sam Goldwyn give a cheer for bringing it about.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 5.

ORSON WELLES' production of "Native Son" is scheduled to open at the St. James Theater—a non-Shubert house. For when Orson had returned to America, after his triumph with the Abbey Players in Dublin, his first stop was the Shubert office, where he expected to be swamped with offers for leading roles. Instead, he was told: "No casting today," and even after he had sent in his name, he was addressed as "Mac" . . . Welles, then 18, decided to retire from the theater and devoted his time to writing. He went to Chicago, where Carl Sandburg took him to a cocktail party. There, Thornton Wilder told him that Katharine Cornell was seeking him. Wilder had asked Orson: "What do you do?" and was told: "I'm a writer" . . . Pulitzer Prize winner Wilder seemed skeptical and Welles proved it—by showing his passport, which read: "Occupation—Writer."

LYONS

THE RICHEST jobseeker in America now is the Ranee of Sarawak. Her fortune is a fabulous one, but it's all in Borneo and England, beyond reach now. Her husband, the White Rajah, doesn't want her to join him in London, lest they both be killed and Sarawak left without a ruler. And so now she's looking for a job in N. Y. . . . Slowly, but surely, the President's Cabinet—after its changes—will take over the duties of the OPM . . . The Alex King-Clare Boothe play, "The Yohimbe Tree," will be sold to the movies. Broadway production has been abandoned, because of casting difficulties . . . Kay Chaqueneau, wife of the socialite agent, was screen-tested by Lewis Milestone for a role in the new Ronald Colman picture, and won the assignment.

IN THE COURT of General Sessions, last week, before Judge James G. Wallace, a witness testified that he could not have participated in the crime charged, "because I was in the can at that time" . . . "You mean," interrupted the erudite Judge Wallace, "that, during the aforementioned period you were languishing in durance vile—incarcerated in a detention place for transgressors. Is that what you mean?" . . . "No, judge," replied the witness. "That's what you mean. What I mean is that I was in the can."

AL JOLSON, who is being sued by his coproducer for having closed the show in N. Y., will reopen it in New Haven, on August 12. His tour is set—from there to Philadelphia, then Boston . . . The "Torch Club" on West Fifty-second Street will change its name to "The Bowery" on Thursday, and will install an old N. Y. revue . . . Al "Bummy" Davis, the welterweight who enlisted in the Army, has clashed with the M. P.'s . . . The Havana newspapers made a literal translation of Jimmy Walker's name, during his visit to Cuba. They referred to him as Jaime Pedestriano . . . Irene Dunne, who will be costarred with Robert Montgomery in "Unfinished Business," the new La Cava film, also will write the incidental music for that movie.

FERENC MOLNAR, who spends all his time at the Hotel Plaza, confesses that he first learned to like this way of life while he lived in Budapest. He resided in an apartment house there. And one day he tired of the smell of cooking. He thought how ideal it would be if all the other tenants in that house would install a joint kitchen downstairs, and some tables at which they could eat their food—instead of cooking and eating in their apartments. "It will save kitchen space for all of us," he told the others in that house. "We can eat when we want to—downstairs—and bring our friends in. It will be wonderful" . . . He gave up the idea when he discovered that such a thing had been in operation for a long time—and was called "a hotel."

BEN COHEN, who flew to Lisbon last week, had only Tommy Corcoran at the airport to see him off. That was because he had told his friends "I'm sailing to Lisbon," and they thought he had booked passage on a ship. "But ships no longer sail," Cohen assured them. "They're propelled by engines through the water. Planes sail, through the skies" . . . Clare Boothe is having difficulties obtaining a visa for Berlin . . . The Stork Club has introduced an "Overture Dinner," from 6:30 to 8:30, with 10 minutes service guaranteed—in time for the opening curtain.

LOUIS BROMFIELD, the novelist-director-scenarist, flew to New York from his thousand-acre farm in Mansfield, Ohio. He went to Fefe's Monte Carlo and El Morocco, on an unusual mission. Bromfield, who worked in Hollywood all year, at a fabulous salary, came to town to borrow money on which to live during the next ten months . . . His total earnings for 1940 were staggering—but so is the income tax he now must pay. Bromfield can go to Hollywood tomorrow, if he wants to, and earn enough to pay that tax—but if he does earn additional sums, his upper brackets taxes would be even larger. And so he is solving his problem by borrowing all the money he'll need for his support in 1941.

Hayes-Evans 'Twelfth Night' National's Next

"TWELFTH NIGHT," under the joint auspices of the Theater Guild and Gilbert Miller, will be presented in the National Theater for a week's engagement, beginning next Monday night, with Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans cast, respectively, in the roles of Viola and Malvolio. The revival has enjoyed a record-breaking success in New York and will be enacted here by the same cast that added so much to its luster on Broadway. The play was directed by Margaret Webster and is offered in 15 scenes designed, along with costumes, by Stewart Chaney. It will be the fifth subscription play of the Theater Guild-American Society season, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Palace

"WESTERN UNION," visualizing the story of the first telegraph line ever strung across the continent, is a technicolor production in which the principal roles are played by Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger and Virginia Gilmore. The period of the play is back in the era of the War Between the States. Special short subjects, including "Third Dimensional Murder," will augment the new bill opening on the screen this morning at Loew's Palace Theater.

Earle

"ADAM HAD FOUR SONS," adapted from Charles Benner's novel, "Legacy," boasts a cast that should insure its merit, Warner Baxter, Ingrid Bergman, Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Helen Westley, Johnny Downs, Richard Denning, Robert Shaw and June Lockhart are among the foremost players. The new stage bill at the Earle is called "New Stars of 1941" and numbers among its personnel The Vikings and Mary Dooley, Ferdinand the Bull, Ralph Olsen and Lynn Shirley, Jeanne Brideson and the Roxyettes. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY," latest release in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Hardy Family" series, not only brings back all of the old favorites of Judge Hardy's household, but introduces two figures new to the public. The first is the new singing "find," Kathryn Grayson; the second, Todd Karns, son of the famous comedian, Roscoe. The Capitol's new stage revue, opening this morning, will be headlined by that virtuoso of the harmonica, Larry Adler, and also will include the Watson Sisters, the Alexander and Santos Dance Revue, the Thompson Brothers and Norma and the Rhythm Rockets.

RKO-Keith's

"MR. AND MRS. SMITH," in the delightfully goofy persons of Robert Montgomery and Carole Lombard, continue their domestic battle into a second week at RKO-Keith's. They are egged on in their virulent animosities by a splendid cast of which the principal member is Gene Raymond, who now emerges as a brunette instead of a platinum blonde.

Columbia

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." This superb picturization of the Philip Barry stage play, adapted to the screen by Donald Ogden Stewart, with Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, James Stewart, John Payne, Mary Nash, Virginia Weidler, Roland Young and John Halliday in the pivotal roles resumes its downtown run—its fourth week on F Street—this morning at Loew's Columbia. It is one for the book.

Trans Lux

"INTERNATIONAL FORUM." Dorothy Thompson, Post columnist; Wythe Williams, Linton Wells and William L. Shirer are the famous commentators who make this new Trans-Lux feature an item of genuine note. The bill still will contain 35 minutes of news flashes, a short subject, "Snow Fun," fimed at Lake Placid, and a Donald Duck cartoon, "Timber." Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"ARIZONA." This imposing Columbia "Western," celebrating the founding of Tucson and a great State, will be the next attraction on the screen at the Metropolitan. Jean Arthur is the star, supported by such admirable mimes as William Holden, Warren William, Porter Hall and a long list of others who portray the "types" of the period with unfailing effectiveness. Reopens its downtown run tomorrow.

Little

"NIGHT TRAIN." There seems to be no flagging this "sleeper special." Costarring Margaret Lockwood and Rex Harrison and written by the authors of "The Lady Vanishes," this thrilling story of Europe, war and the Gestapo, has captured the fascinated interest of audiences wherever it has been shown. It now goes into its fourth consecutive capacity week at the Little Theater.

Wardman Park

"THE APPLE CART," the George Bernard Shaw play never before presented in Washington, will open a week's engagement in Wardman Park Theater on Sunday night, with one of the Civic Theater's most illustrious casts appearing under the able direction of Leon Askin. The personnel of the cast already has been printed in these columns.

Roosevelt Auditorium

ONE-ACT PLAY TOURNAMENT. With the preliminary contests among 12 of Washington's foremost acting groups coming to a close tonight, the finals in the 1941 amateur competition for prize acting honors will be held in Roosevelt Auditorium on Saturday night, March 8. The local drama desks will serve as judges of the finals—and may the best team win.

More than 400 members of Washington Real Estate Board and guests attended the eighth annual dinner dance last night of that organization at Mayflower Hotel. Held in the main ballroom decorated with flags of the States, the banquet was interpersed with entertainment and followed by dancing to music of Sydney's Orchestra under direction of Moe Baer.

The entertainment program included Galli Galli, magician; "Ha-Cha" Gardner, vocalist; a comedy sketch entitled "That Dream House," written by Ralph Hohenstein and in which Miss Hilda Heird, Thomas Zuckert and the author participated. Choral numbers were given by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. Glee Club of Baltimore.

Seating list for the table of Waverly Taylor, board president, included the following: Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana, chairman, subcommittee on District appropriations; Col. David McCoach, jr., District Engineer Commissioner; Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards; William N. Payne, jr., president, District Building & Loan League; James E. Colliflower, president, and William H. Press, executive secretary, Washington Board of Trade; Francis Healy, District surveyor; Maj. J. B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer; Maj. Beverly C. Snow and Capt. John L. Person, District assistant Engineer Commissioners.

Others included Edward A. Dent, District assessor; Richmond B. Keech, District corporation counsel; Robert H. Davis, District building inspector; Harold E. Doyle, District real estate commissioner; Fred A. Smith, F. Eliot Middleton, past presidents; Charles C. Koones, second vice president; Roger J. Whiteford, counsel; Thomas D. Lewis, director; Charles H. Hillegeist, program chairman, and Harvey L. Jones, reception chairman, Washington Real Estate Board.

The event was arranged by the board's program committee headed by Charles H. Hillegeist and composed of Frank M. Doyle, Albert E. Landvoigt, George H. O'Connor, Homer Phillips, William E. Shannon, Joseph F. Swain, Oliver M. Walker, L. S. Beaupre and Edwin C. Steffe.

Other committees assisting were: Entertainment, Ralph Hohenstein, chairman; Nathan Poole, Everett G. Phelps, and tickets, Richard D. Stimson, chairman; F. Latimer Barkley, Walter A. Brown, L. S. Beaupre, J. Merrill Conner, Henry C. Cryer, S. Dolan Donohoe, William B. Dortch, Frank M. Doyle, Fred A. Genau, L. T. Gravatte, jr., William S. Green, Joseph G. Herbert, H. F. Humphries, Robert E. Lammond, Adelbert W. Lee, William H. Linkins, jr., F. E. Middleton, jr., Thomas K. Miller, A. Jasper Moore, Henry M. Morgan, jr., John R. Neale, Frank Paroni, Everett G. Phelps, Nathan Poole, William R. Russell, Thomas H. Schaffert, Fred W. Smith, Horace W. Talley, E. D. Thompson, Carleton U. Trexler, and John H. Zirwes.

Warrenton Residents Share in Big Estate

Salem, Mass., March 5 (AP).—With the bulk of the estate going to relatives, the $9,000,000 will of Mrs. Francis E. Leland, Manchester and Boston widow, was allowed in Essex Probate Court yesterday by Judge John A. Costello.

Bequests of $150,000 went to friends, $120,000 to servants and other employes and $350,000 to charities.

Sharing in the $6,380,000 residue and $2,000,000 trust fund were Mary Dorothy and Elizabeth Cutting of Warrenton, Va., grandnieces; and John P., and George W. Cutting, jr., of Warrenton, grandnephews.

Colonials' Post-Season Hopes Fall

Fire Marshall Turns Away 1,000; G. W.'s Chances for National Invitation Play Lost

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

George Washington's dreams of postseason basketball honors were shattered by a better basketball team last night at Riverside as Georgetown scored an amazingly easy 41 to 34 victory over the Colonials before a record turnout of 6,500 fans.

The fire marshal closed the doors of the stadium several minutes before game time to an estimated 1,000 persons who were denied admittance, as the plant was filled beyond its capacity and standing room was at a premium.

The pro-G. W. crowd must have been vastly disappointed, however, as the team that was seeking its nineteenth victory in 22 starts was never in the running. Jim Kiernan slipped under the basket for a snowbird just seconds after the opening whistle and Georgetown was ahead to stay.

Kills G. W. Chances

The victory clinched the city championship for the Hoyas who scored a 50-42 victory over the Colonials in January. It was the sixteenth victory in 20 starts for Coach Elmer Ripley's men and G. W.'s fourth defeat in two more starts.

Only G. W. was supposed to be in the running for post-season play, however, after Georgetown's disappointing loss to Fordham last week. The G. U. triumph definitely killed any G. W. chances of invitations to either the National Collegiate Invitation Tournament in New York or the Midwestern N. C. A. A. play.

The first half was 17 minutes old before the Hoyas pulled comfortably ahead. G. W. stuck within four points in the early going but never threatened to overhaul their conquerors. Charley Schmidli caged a pair of foul shots and Buddy O'Grady potted one from way out and Georgetown was never threatened from that point.

The halftime advantage was 22-13, and before the second half was 10 minutes old the Gergetown lead was 14 points, 34-20. G. W. was trailing by 11 points with 5 minutes to play and they outscored the Hoyas, 5 to 1, in the remaining minutes to bring the score to respectable proportions.

O'Grady Stars

Georgetown's honors were split four ways. Washington's own Jim Giebel was high scorer with 11 points in one of his finest offensive and defensive performances while Bill Bornheimer continually robbed the G. W. backboard and accounted for ten points himself. A great majority of the baskets scored by the boys were pot-shots from the corner that swished the Hoyas home.

Irving Rizzi, captain and floor leader of the victors, bowed out of a Georgetown basket ball uniform in splendid style and was given a big hand after 38 full minutes of play. Buddy O'Grady, the ball handling wizard, whose trickery caught the fancy of the crowd, was probably the individual star of the

G. W.'s cheering section went wild in the first few minutes when the Colonials stayed within striking distance. The varsity club's yell section let go with a paper shower (right). But Cheer Leader Cherrie Frost's face shows how G. W. felt about it when the Hoyas pulled away. It was G. W.'s home game and they monopolized the student section but lost the game, 41-34

Ben Hogan, Sarazen Win Golf Tourney

By the United Press

Coral Gables, Fla., March 5.—Ben Hogan, golf's leading money winner last year, and the veteran Gene Sarazen today won the $2,000 first prize in the eighteenth Annual International Four-Ball Championship.

Slender, 133-pound Hogan, from White Plains, N. Y., and stocky, 39-year-old Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., defeated slamming Sammy Snead, Hot Springs, Va., and tall Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole finals.

Snead and Guldahl won $500 each.

Hogan carried the burden for most of the match, but when he weakened Sarazen kept the team ahead with accurate putting.

The Connecticut squire did it on the fourteenth with a 20-foot putt on the morning round and again on the 550-yard fifteenth during the afternoon, where he chipped in for a birdie four to end the match.

Snead Low Scorer

Sarazen kept his team in the running two days ago when he dropped a 20-foot putt for an eagle on the thirty-seventh hole, to defeat Willie Coggin and Leonard Dodson.

Snead did the low scoring for his twosome on the morning round today, when Guldahl was erratic with his drives and couldn't find the cup. Snead birdied the second hole to square the match, and birdied the ninth to cut Sarazen and Hogan's lead to one hole.

Guldahl finally got on to his game late in the morning round and helped his partner with a birdie on the sixteenth. Guldahl halved the twentieth on the afternoon round, and his birdie on the thirty-first, kept the match alive for another hole.

When Sarazen rammed home the winning putt, the gallery of 3,000 gave the stocky little Italian a rousing cheer.

The match was played in ideal weather, under fleecy clouds. Sunshine bathed the palm-lined course to bring out a shirt-sleeved throng of spectators.

Hogan and Sarazen took a 1-up lead on the first hole. Snead and Guldahl pulled even on the next with Snead's 3.

Hogan Puts Team in Front

Even to the sixth, Hogan's birdie put his team in front again, and they stayed there. Hogan birdied the eighth. Snead trimmed the lead to a single hole with a birdie on the ninth.

Hogan had 33 going out, to Snead's 34. Sarazen took 35 and Guldahl 36.

Sarazen's 20-foot putt on the fourteenth put his team 2-up again. On the next hole Guldahl came up with a birdie 4 and followed with a birdie 3 on the sixteenth, and the match was square again.

Sarazen chipped in from 18 feet away on the seventeenth, and his team led 1-up going to lunch.

Hogan, shooting for the flag on every hole, carried the load and put his team 4-up at the end of 27 holes. He birdied the twenty-first and twenty-third. Snead missed a 5-foot putt on the twenty-sixth for a birdie and fattened the lead to 4.

Bradley May 'Tell All' About Tribe Mutiny

Ft. Myers, Fla., March 5 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians' Prexy Alva Bradley promised today to "tell the true story of last summer's trouble" between the players and discharged Manager Oscar Vitt if the Indians again this season were made the target for such appellations as "cry babies."

"I kept quiet at the time because the idea of hurting anyone was distasteful to me," Bradley said. "Already I see signs that some of Oscar Vitt's friends among the non-Cleveland newspaper men aren't willing to forget.

"I hope their number is limited, and for that reason I won't go into details at this time, but the minute it becomes evident that the players will be subjected to any such abuse as they took last season, I'll tell the whole story and let the public decide for itself whether the boys were right or wrong."

Bradley's remarks were prompted by an open letter to him in the Cleveland News, calling on the Tribe president to "go to the bat for his ball players," who rebelled against the reign of Vitt.

After the Indians finished only a game behind the champion Detroit Tigers, Vitt was replaced last fall by Roger Peckinpaugh, now starting his second term as Cleveland pilot. Vitt is managing the Portland (Oreg.) club.

Coolidge Beats Woodward

Using every man on the squad, Coolidge High School took a 24-18 decision over Woodward Prep yesterday on the new Coolidge gymnasium court.

The Coolidge five came from behind a 10-9 half-time score for the victory, led by Jewel and Kleinknecht, who shot 7 points each.

Nats to Retain Mellendeck, Sanford for Their Hitting

Harris Believes Pair Will Provide Needed Punch Now Lacking

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 5.—In their lust for power, the Nats' bosses are looking with increased favor on two underpolished but hefty-swinging young men in the Washington training camp. They are Outfielder Joe Mellendeck and First Baseman Jack Sanford.

When the Washington club breaks camp here on April 7, neither Mellendeck nor Sanford will be among the rookies dispatched to the Nats' farms. They will be retained with the club because they represent the potential power the Nats so sadly lack.

Mellendeck and Sanford are running second to Outfielder Ben Chapman and First Baseman George Archie, respectively, in the battles for jobs on the Washington club. Their utimate with the Nats hinges on the manner in which Chapman and Archie conduct themselves in the Washington batting order.

If, as suspected, the Nats fail to show power at the plate after the season opens and begin losing ball games with too great frequency, then Harris will be strongly tempted to inject both Mellendeck and Sanford into the lineup.

Need Batting Punch

"Those two fellows can murder that ball when they do hit it, and I'll keep them around," said Harris. "I'm not kidding myself about the way we figure to hit. We need any long-distance punch we can crowd into the lineup."

In Mellendeck's favor is the fact that he is already acceptable as an outfielder defensively. He roams far and wide and has the strongest throwing arm among outfielders on the squad. The man he must beat out for the job is Chapman, who batted only .286 last year. Mellendeck hits a ball harder than Chapman. He may not need to bat .300 to make himself the more valuable player.

"Mellendeck would have a better average if he'd shorten his long stroke," said Harris, "but I don't want to trifle with his batting style yet. If he can hit big league pitching with the swing he's now taking, he'll make us a real slugger, the kind we need. I'm going to let him try to keep that power swing."

Sanford's task will be to beat out Archie, the fancy-fielding first baseman from Seattle, who may have a lock on the job. Archie during the past two seasons in the Coast League has mustered batting averages of .331 and .324 and appears to be an adequate enough hitter. But still he does not bring to the Nats the long clouting that would round out the club.

Sanford Hitting Goal

In batting practice here, big Sanford has been driving the ball farther than any man on the club despite the fact that he is a line-drive hitter. He has a classic sort of stroke, and Harris is in open admiration of it. At Charlotte last season Sanford batted .360 to one

Bethesda Plays Roosevelt Five In Tourney

A tenacious Bethesda-Chevy Chase High team which took credit for one of its few losses this year will be Roosevelt's opponent tonight as the Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament goes through the semifinals in boys play at Tech gym.

The game will be the windup of a double bill, Gonzaga and Eastern coming to grips in the first engagement at 7:30.

Boasting one of the most effective zone defenses in town, Bethesda will be a prime threat to the Riders as they seek their second city title in a row. The Barons are without a single outstanding star but have 7 or 8 of the most consistent performers hereabouts. Besides their early season victory over the Riders, they also claim one of the best won-and-lost records in Washington.

Favorites in tonight's hostilities probably will be Roosevelt, by a slim margin, and Eastern. The latter, winner over the Purple earlier in the season, should be able to repeat, though an upset in that game would be considerably less astounding than in the finale.

Tonight's winners will clash Saturday night at Tech with the city title at stake. If favorites come through, the final affair may be a repetition of last year's championship game, in which the Riders were fairly easy victors. The girls' championship game will precede boys action at 7:30.

U. of Kentucky Coeds Offered Billiard Course

Lexington, Ky., March 5 (AP).—Advanced education notes:

Coeds of the University of Kentucky were offered today a five-week course in billiards, starting this month.

Student fishermen of either sex also were offered a course in "fly-casting and baiting."

Neither course carries academic credit.

Golfer Oliver, Playwright Kingsley—in the Army Now

Ed Oliver (right), called from pro golf's winter tour and Sidney Kingsley, Broadway playwright, meet for the first time as fellow privates at Fort Dix, N. Y.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Mar. 5.—The man who is best qualified to speak about the Washington pitching staff is neither Clark Griffith, who owns the team, nor yet Bucky Harris who manages it. He is Rick Ferrell, who as the human bumper for the Washington pitching gets a plate-eye view of the pitch, and would you like to know how Ferrell appraises the current situation in the Nats' camp?

POVICH

"We'd better stop looking for 'another Sid Hudson' and try to make winning pitchers out of the only two rookies on the squad that we know can pitch a little bit. I mean Walter Masterson and Arnold Anderson. They give us something to go on. We're kidding ourselves if we think we can come up with another Hudson this year, next year or in the next five years. That kind comes under the heading of miracles.

"I don't know much about Anderson, except that he chucked one swell game for us last fall when he beat the Browns with six hits. That gives him a chance, of course. But we ought to pray that Masterson will make good for us, because if he develops he'll be a good one. And he has showed us that he has enough stuff to be a winner, if he can control it.

"Masterson should have spent these past three years in the minors where he belonged instead of trying to pitch over his head in the American League, but that's split milk. If he's half smart he should have learned something by this time. He should have learned that that slow, roundhouse curve he was throwing last year is no good in this league, and junk it. They got many a hit off him last year by taking an extra hitch in their stroke and then murdering that slow curve.

"We're working to give Masterson a fast curve from the same delivery of his fast ball, and if he learns how to throw it, he ought to get by pretty good. His fast ball is a beaut. That's bunk about Ken Chase having the fastest ball on our club. Masterson's is it. It's harder and it's more alive. His fast one does more tricks coming in there than any man's I've ever caught.

"Masterson has showed us that when he can get his fast ball over the plate he can win. The only thing that has been beating him is wildness and that grammar-school curve he tried to throw. You can show him how to help his control, but after that it's in his own lap. Some pitchers simply can't or won't adapt themselves to a slight change in their delivery. Even when they try it, they fail, because they've got some kind of a complex.

"There was only one big reason why Sid Hudson came through for us, aside from the fact that he is normally a sensible young fellow. When we saw he couldn't win with what he was throwing, we asked him to try to come up with a side-arm pitch. Those hitters were murdering his overhand fast ball, particularly the right handers, and we didn't have to remind Hudson of that.

"You've got to give him full credit. He never said he couldn't throw a side-arm pitch, although we knew he never had tried. When he did come up with his side-arm ball it was a beaut. The same hitters who were laying in wait for his overhead ball were his meat. By the time he had mixed 'em up a few times, it didn't make much difference what he pitched. He had the batter in the hole the minute he stepped to the plate.

"You don't mind working with young pitchers in a training camp when they give you a little bit to work on. But most of 'em don't even know how to stand on the rubber, and have no idea where their pitch is going. I'd like to weld a few of their strong arms on a fellow like Danny MacFayden, who knows how to pitch. Training a pitcher will never be easy unless you can get around to the point where they can be bred, like fruit trees.

"But with all our troubles, we've got a pitching staff that is on the verge of being a beaut. If just one young fellow would make good for us, say win 15 games, we might have the best pitching staff in the league. No team with Leonard, Chase and Hudson can have bad pitching, but we need that fourth man. If we don't get him from Anderson or Masterson, Lord knows where he's coming from. There's apt to be days in the week when we'll need a dozen runs to stay in a ball game."

A Modern (250-Lb.) Marco Polo at Home:

Haight Goes Local

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

Here's the killer-diller! But, Boss, I can't hit you with this until you get your guard up. Before you read another line I want you to (1) call in all the reporters (2) borrow the printers, pressmen and stereotypers (3) rub your hair with cement glue (4) take out sterm insurance. Your going to need all those precautions and probably more to hold your hat, cause HERE WE GO AGAIN!

HAIGHT

I wobbled up to the city room mail box as cool and collected as a cold storage egg and twice as sweet, if I must say it myself. Then what happens? I find a letter and break out into a sweat. All set, Boss! Here's the all-American eyeful:

Washington, D. C.,
March 4, '41.

Walter (Hog) Haight,
Washington Post.

Haight:

I may as well break this over your head all at once instead of building you up to it. I'm starting a Walter Haight Club right here and now by inclosing one dollar—buck, to you—as my initiation fee. This buck is to buy yourself a drink. Wait, Haight, don't jump for the door! Take it easy, Haight. The war jitters haven't got me so crazy with my money that I pour a zombie down a funnel and call myself an organized member of a drinking society.

Haight, you're a "natural." I like you, see? And when I like a guy I want to buy him a drink. But I figure it this way. A lot of guys like you like I like you. They want to buy you a drink. Okay, you can't go running around having a drink on every guy that appreciates the stuff that you slung back from Miami. That's like counting the stars on a clear night. So what happens? A Walter Haight Club.

Now, Haight you give me the nod as a member of the W. H. Club by autographing a small card and putting a number up in the right-hand corner. My number will be 2. You are 1, as president. The next guy that buys you a drink by mail will be No. 3; the next will be 4, and so on and on. There'll be millions of 'em, so set yourself up a staff of secretaries and get set for business. Just send the cards back to the boys who buy you a drink, and inclose a dollar to buy each lad a drink who bought you a drink. I said, inclose a buck with each card returned so th rounds will be even up. Is THAT part clear? Why, that's the very, very principle we go ate on. I buy you a drink, and you buy me a drink?

A real drinking pardner never lets the rounds get ahead of him. He likes to keep things even up. You know that, Haight. Don't start an argument.

So go ahead, Haight, have a drink on my money. Enjoy it, fellow. I like you, Haight, and I like your stuff. Keep it coming. I don't ever want to miss you. As one Haight Club member to another, I am,

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) RAY BENTON.

P. S. Stamp and addressed envelope inclosed.

Well, Boss, I guess I should feel as bloated as an observation balloon about the whole thing, as I usually do. But somehow, Brother Benton's letter has me down tighter than a boarding house carpet.

Conn Heavy Choice Over Hassett in Tonight's Clash at Uline

15-Rounder Is First Fight In New Arena

Excellent Supporting Card Listed; Alvis Predicts 8,000 Crowd for Bout

By Al Hailey

Mike Jacobs & Co. will invade Washington tonight as the fight business in the District goes "big time" on a half-way basis at Uline's new $700,000 ice house.

Billy Conn, the handsome, 23-year-old contender for Joe Louis' heavyweight championship, is the attraction, and Danny Hassett, an obscure heavyweight from Philadelphia, is the lad Jacobs & Co. has nominated for a 15-round battle with Billy.

Tonight's business, inaugurating boxing at Uline, gets underway at 8:30 o'clock and has for its redemption the best supporting card on paper, ever lined up in the Capital's haphazard boxing history.

Chalky Wright, the New York colored featherweight generally acclaimed as the "uncrowned champion," fights Texas Lee Harper, a lightweight, in a 10-round special match. Wright, who fights welterweights, is the leading contender for the 127-pound championship.

Promoter Ray Alvis, with Jacob's backing, going "all out" in an attempt to glorify the local fight game by bringing in the talent which Jacobs rules over in his Twentieth Century Sporting Club lair in New York.

Capacity Crowd Predicted

The show will have all the glitter of a first night and Alvis yesterday happily predicted a capacity crowd of 8,000 will jam the new arena at Third and M Streets Northeast—a prediction which immediately branded him as 1941's No. 1 optimist.

Jacobs will arrive this afternoon bringing along with him a collection of New York fight figures, and Art Rooney, now part owner of the Philadelphia football Eagles, will escort Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion, into the Capital from Pittsburgh at 4 p. m. Rooney is Conn's chief backer in his campaign for Louis' crown.

Louis, now training for his title fight with gigantic Abe Simon in Detroit late this month, probably will be a ringside spectator. Louis fights Conn, nominated as the man to relieve Joe of his crown, June and local friends of the heavyweight king said he had informed them he will be on hand.

No Straight Wagering

The betting gentry is adopting an almost complete hands-off policy tonight. What wagering is being done is on how long the Philadelphia detective will be able to stand up under Conn's scientific workmanship, which has won the acclaim of the fistic world as the most artistic in the business.

Conn has no reputation as a knockout artist, but should slice up Hassett so badly the referee will have to stop the fight.

Hassett, a fairly dangerous puncher, is an experienced veteran who has selected his spots, so he says, fighting only when he was offered sufficient financial inducement.

In race track lore, Hassett has a lot of early speed and will give Conn a busy time in the early rounds. If he tags the former light heavyweight champion with one of those roundhouse rights, anything can happen, his manager, Pete Moran, believes. Billy is known to go slightly off key when hit hard on the chin and often makes the mistake of trying to slug with his opponent instead of boxing him.

Conn will weigh close to 180 pounds for the fight—just enough poundage to make him a heavyweight. Hassett will weigh a blubbery 190 pounds.

"The fight may go the distance," Conn said yesterday, "but I'm going to keep stabbing him and I'll have to wait and see what happens."

Hassett hasn't fought since he was technically knocked out in the closing minutes of the tenth round by Bill Boyd in Griffith Stadium last summer. Hassett had a big lead on points until midway of the seventh round when he began to fade and Boyd began to find him an easy target.

Adding appeal to tonight's program will be the presence of a dozen red-haired girl ushers, a Uline innovation that went over with such success during the Ice-Capades.

The big Northeast arena was closed all day yesterday to permit the ice to melt. The boxing ring, acquired from the old New York Hippodrome, and ringside chairs will be set up on the concrete floor today.

Royal Welcome for Jacobs

Jacobs' invasion of Washington comes as a direct challenge to National Boxing Association power. The Capital, long the seat of the N. B. A. under Heinie Miller, is considered hostile territory to anything smacking of New York fight interests. Yet Jacobs and his entourage will get a royal welcome tonight at Uline. District Commissioners and members of the District Boxing Commission will be on hand.

Conn and Hassett will step into the ring at 10 p. m., and last night Alvis was negotiating with a radio station for a broadcast of the scheduled 15-rounder.

The preliminaries offer Willie Pavlovich, Russian stablemate of Conn, in an eight-round battle with Johnny Kaplovich, Baltimore light-heavyweight, and Billy Banks, Washington colored featherweight, in a six-round battle with Philadelphia's Golden Gloves graduate, Johnny Forte. A four-rounder will open the card.

Virginia Colored Tourney Postponed

Petersburg, Va., March 5 (AP).—Dr. James A. Moore, director of athletics at Virginia State College for Negroes, today announced postponement of the State high school basketball tournament which had been scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week.

The postponement was suggested by the State health department because of an outbreak of measles on the college campus. New dates for the tournament will be selected later.

Study of Louis' Public Worry No. 1—Billy Conn

Sportsmanship TourneyToday At Rockville

Twelve teams today launch the thirteenth annual Sportsmanship Basketball Tournament of Richard Montgomery High, of Rockville, the big prize of which will be the L. Fletcher Schott Sportsmanship Cup for the winners of senior boys play. Games will be held at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High gym.

Starting at 4:30, junior high quintets of Leland and Kensington, and Stuart and Rockville, see the first action. The girls' division opens at 6:30 with Sherwood meeting Bethesda, followed by a Rockville-Poolesville tangle. St. John's High, of Washington, and Hyattsville start hostilities in the senior boys section at 8:30, and Rockville and Sherwood close out the day's program.

The 1940 champion, Frederick, will not play for the cup in this year's renewal of this vicinity's most unique tournament. Neither will Montgomery Blair, which has captured four titles in the meet's 13-year history. The favorite, therefore, as far as precedent is concerned, will be the host club's four-time winner.

Actually St. John's, which has suffered a horrible season in town, will probably be the strongest club in competition. That doesn't indicate it will walk off after the two-day event with honors, however, considering the method of deciding the Sportsmanship Cup victor.

Ten points will be given each team in the senior boys class for a victory, but from that will be subtracted 1 point for each foul committed. The team with the most points after the last game will be declared champion.

In addition to the main prize, smaller cups will go to girls and junior winners, and pins to players from the winning teams.

Conn Donates To Campaign For M. P. B. C.

Billy Conn, world's lightweight boxing champion who fights in Washington tonight, yesterday gave a generous donation to the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club in the campaign to raise $100,000 for 16,500 underprivileged boy members. Conn, who hopes to wear the heavyweight crown after his fight this summer with Joe Louis, turned over his contribution to Inspector Arthur E. Miller at the champion's suite in the Ambassador Hotel.

Inspector Miller, new traffic head, represented Inspector Edward J. Kelly, leader of the Police campaign division. Inspector Kelly's Bluecoats have raised $24,909. Thus far a total of $64,177 has been subscribed—two-thirds of the goal.

Johnny Ray, Conn's manager, said that Billy was proud to be able to donate to such a worthy cause since the champion came from a poor family, and was born in one of the toughest sections of Pittsburgh, where a Police Boys' Club, he said, could have fitted into the picture very well.

Conn said he was born on Shakespeaker Street in Pittsburgh, where he had to fight his way "in and out of trouble."

The 65-piece Police Boys' Club band, under Leon Brusiloff's direction, will play at tonight's Conn fight with Danny Hassett at Uline's.

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., campaign chairman, announced that he was anticipating a heavy report at tomorrow's sixth luncheon report meeting of the campaign workers in the National Press Club Auditorium at 12:30. Representative Clifford Davis, of Tennessee, has accepted Chairman Dulcan's invitation to address the workers. He is a former major of Memphis, and at one time was police commissioner of that city.

Eagles Play River Vale Tomorrow

The Washington Eagles will point for their ninth consecutive undefeated Eastern Hockey League game at Riverdale Stadium tomorrow night when they meet the Jersey Skeeters, of River Vale, N. J., at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles may advance in their pennant drive tomorrow night inasmuch as they will be favored over the Skeeters, whereas the challenging Baltimore Orioles will be no better than an even bet to defeat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls in Atlantic City.

Statistics released by the Eastern Hockey League's news bureau yesterday revealed that Norm Burns, Washington's popular center, has passed Atlantic City's Heck Pozzo and is approaching the 81-point total of Sammy Fasano.

Burns has 77 points and Pozzo 76. Fasano, who has suffered a fractured hip, is thought to be out for the remainder of the season, in which event the scoring race will narrow down to a duel involving Burns and Pozzo.

Briarley Again Defeats Sherwood

Led by Charley Hodgkin, Briarley Military Academy yesterday took its second basketball victory over Sherwood High in as many days on the losers' court. The score was 33 to 14, and Hodgkin's total for the day was 16.

It was Briarley's third straight victory. The cadets defeated Sherwood Tuesday, 31-21.

The Angel, Steinborn Meet Tonight

Wrestledom's No. 1 freak, The Angel, otherwise Maurice Tillet, of France, will be on display tonight at Turner's Arena. The Angel will meet Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man, in the headline match, a 90-minute time limit brawl.

The Angel's manager-discoverer, Karl Pojello, informed Promoter Joe Turner last night that his wrestler was in rare form, ready to meet one and all. He said The Angel was "plenty sore" against the Massachusetts legislator who challenged him to a match in Boston, and then took what Maurice described as a real "run-out."

He's a Throwback

Brought to this country in the fall of 1939, The Angel has been a smash box office hit from coast to coast. His face is virtually twice the size of the average person's and his body and feet are so freakish as to make him a regular throwback to the prehistoric man. In fact, Harvard anthropologists, who examined him shortly after he came to this country, called him the nearest to the Neanderthal man they had ever seen.

In the semiwindup Joe Cox, of Kansas, always a headliner, will meet Warren Bockwinkle, the St. Louis flash. A special 30-minute bout finds Pierre DeGlane, former European champion, tackling Lou Plummer. Fred Grobmier, the scissors king, tangles with Paul Boesch, and Rudy Dusek will meet Eddie Newman.

The first match goes on at 8:30. Promoter Turner has asked fans who made their reservations to pick them up early to avoid the last-minute window rush.

Eagles Tie Orioles, 4-4, In Overtime

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., March 5.—The Eastern Amateur Hockey League leading Washington Eagles and the second place Baltimore Orioles fought to a 4-4 tie in an overtime exhibition match on player appreciation night here at Carlin's Iceland.

The spectacular play of little Gordie Hemming, in the net for the Eagles, featured the unusually tame game between the intercity rivals.

Germann Scores

Mike Germann flashed the red light first in the opening period on an assist from Frank Mailley at 13:50. Bill Moe tied the game up for the Orioles three minutes later on transfers from Spike Wychenka and Carl Ripley.

Thompson and Rosy Rossignol slipped the puck past Baltimore's Goalie Frank Ceryance in the second stanza to send the Eagles into a 3-2 lead. Sandwiched in between the two was Roach's first tally.

Baltimore Rallies

Baltimore piled two goals into the Baltimore cords in the final session to take the lead for the first and only time. Roach and Carl Ripley flashed the red lights on the scores.

The Smith Falls brakeman, Hal Dewey, evened the match for the last time by scoring the tying marker at 15:18 with Norm Burns and Frank Mailley set up the goal. Neither team scored in the special five-minute overtime session.

Abrams Fights On Soose Card

By the United Press

New York, March 5.—Billy Soose, of Farrell, Pa., and Ernie Vigh, of New York, completed training today for their middleweight contenders' battle at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Soose is favored at 11-5 to win this 12-round scrap, repeating the victory he registered over Vigh in 10 rounds on February 7.

They will scale about the same as for last month's brawl in which Soose weighed 161 pounds and Vigh 160½.

Georgie Abrams, of Washington, D. C., is favored at 3-1 to beat Coley Welch, of Portland, Me., in the 8-round semifinal. In another 8-rounder, Antonio Fernandez, of Chile, is favored at 7-5 over Jose Basora, of Puerto Rico. All are middleweights.

Tessier Named Line Coach at Manhattan

CONSIDINE

In serene defiance of the Sherman antitrust law, which is almost as important here as the Declaration of Independence, Mike Jacobs, the maul monopolist, invades Washington tonight. He is presenting Billy Conn, Joe Louis' June opponent, in an epic struggle which will long be disremembered. Conn's opponent, picked as the result of an elimination tournament wherein every fighter who had the slightest chance of smearing Billy's classic profile was eliminated from consideration, is doughty Dan Hassett, a Philadelphia detective.

The scene is Washington's first big-time indoor sports arena, Uline Arena. This horrific prize fight, which is expected to reach such sadistic heights that Conn's elegant coiffeur may be partly disarranged, is the first fight held in this stunted Madison Square Garden of the Nation's Capital. The ostensible promoter is Ray Alvis, that personable, gabby soul who once had the welterweight division tied up like a kidnaped contortionist. But Jacobs, of course, is the real man. Alvis was up in New York some time ago, humbly fingering his hatband in Mike's outer office, and this Conn-Hassett contest is the result of his expedition. If he is a very good boy, and if the citizens down here flock to tonight's fight in big enough flocks, the Uline Arena also may get the Tony Galento-Buddy Baer fight—though just what Mike has against Washington isn't clear at this moment.

The Uline Arena is as handsome as Stanford White's Union Station. It has red-headed girl ushers—which is something the Garden ought to think about—and red leather seats to match. About 8,100 can squat comfortably at a fight therein, and 8,100 is about 6,000 more than usually attend fights here. Seems that Washington will go only for big league events—to wit, the Washington Redskins and the Washington Nationals, though in view of the 73-0 defeat of the Redskins at the hands of the Chicago Bears, and the general humility of the Nationals, their classification as big league institutions may be questioned. The city just won't support "club fights.

So that is why Billy Conn, who is certainly a big leaguer, has been chosen to break open the new joint as a fistic center. The prices are cheap—there is a $3.80 top—but so is Conn's opposition, which makes everything even.

A little about Hassett, the man I have been assured by my good friend, Press Agent Joe Holman, will shake the world to its gizzard tomorrow night by flattening Conn, thus breaking up the $300,000 June fight between Louis and handsome Billy. He always has had a good job. Fights for exercise, or, rather, as a kind of interesting sideline. Before he turned detective he was a refrigerator salesman and a clerk. He boxed with Conn a few times when Billy was training for one of those many Lesnevich fights which didn't come off. Says he made a study of Billy's style. He says he is looking beyond Conn to a June fight with Louis, and, fellows, it certainly will be interesting to watch him fight the Bomber next June at the Yankee Stadium.

Of course, it's Hassett tonight because Mike wants to take no chances with Conn. We have a hunch that Billy is good enough to slap out a decision over any heavyweight in the country except Louis. But there's no sense taking a chance, Mike figures. After all, there are precious few suitable opponents for Joe left in the land. Washingtonians know this. The patronage tomorrow night, therefore, is likely to be largely curiosity trade. They've read a lot about Conn down here, and want to see him. They'd be saps not to want to see him. For if ever there was a throwback to the dancing masters of old, and to Currier and Ives picture fighters, Billy is it. It is too bad he is not in there with somebody tougher, but the fact that he is in there at all—in a city which is accustomed to big time sports in everything except boxing—makes the occasion memorable here.

An even more important thing from the Washington standpoint is this Uline Arena. Washington, which hasn't got a vote, has never been able to mooch anything in the way of a good indoor sports place. All the money for those stadia, arenas, etc., being put up around the country by PWA and other alphabetical spigots pours out of here. But Washington never got a look-in until this man Migiel J. Uline came along. He is a Dutchman in his mid-sixties and is an iceman down here. Can still tote one of those massive cakes of ice around on his shoulders. He listened for years to the fly-by-night arena builders, who were going to give Washington a miniature Garden, then got restless and put up one himself.

It cost him $700,000, which is a lot of scratch for a fellow to be gambling with these days. It has a bigger ice surface than Madison Square Garden for hockey, ice shows, public skating, etc. And, as we said, red-headed usherettes and seats. Uline is out after a franchise in the National Hockey League (whose "nut" he estimates will be $100,000 a year), and has scheduled the rodeo, ice carnivals and all the other regular attractions for indoor palaces. He never saw a hockey game until this year, when he saw the Bruins play the Black Hawks, and has seen very few other sports. But he's putting up all that jack, nontheless. If he loses he'll invent another kind of freezing apparatus. He has 66 patents for such gadgets now.

Conn should supply him with the sixty-seventh by chilling Hassett in about seven rounds.

Yanks' Loss Was Browns' Gain

Walter Judnich Sold By New York Club To St. Louis Browns

Star Once Played With Yankee Farms; Is Potent Hitter

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., March 5.—Once upon a time the New York Yankees made a mistake.

He is Walter Franklin Judnich—and the St. Louis Browns might, if pressed, consider trading him for a first lien mortgage on the Fort Knox gold hideout, but the Brownies would expect you to throw in a couple of sentries who could pitch.

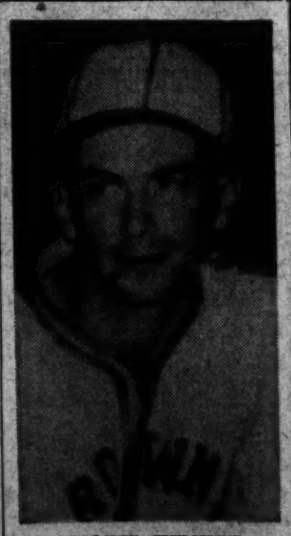
The highly valued Mr. Judnich is a left-hand outfielder who came rippling along as a rookie last season and:

1. Batted .303.
2. Belted 24 home runs.
3. Led all American League outfielders, defensively, with a .989 percentage.
4. Led the Brownies in runs batted in with 89.

"Greatest young outfielder in baseball," mused Managed Fred Haney at Judnich's musket shot out of the batting cage beat against the rightfield wall. "Just a natural. He'll make one of the great outfielders in baseball. Solid hitter, fancy fielder and cool."

Just a couple of seasons ago Judnich was a Yankee chattel. He played on the Newark, Kansas City and Oakland farms. He drove in better than 100 runs each season as a Yankee farm boy.

Nice boy, the Yanks agreed, but he would crowd the Yankee Stadium outfield with such talent as DiMaggio, Keller, Henrich, Selkirk and Powell around.



WALTER JUDNICH

So the Yanks sold Judnich to the Browns.

If Judnich was good in the minors he was colossal in the majors. Patiently, Haney worked on his one batting weakness—an inclination to wave at high, hard ones.

"Now he is boy who can win ball games with just one swing," says Haney. "The Yankees went along for years with that kind of punch—winning games with a single blow. Now if we could get another Judnich going on the Browns."

Judnich proved this point last season where it hurt—against the Yankees. In the first game of a series with the Yanks he pounded Steve Sundra for a home run and three other hits to drive in five runs and win the game.

Next day with the score knotted at 12-12 and the Brownies up for the last of the ninth, Sundra sauntered in as a Yankee relief twirler. Judnich slammed Sundra's Sunday sinker over the wall again with a man on base to give the Browns at 14-12 verdict.

Or there was the day against Cleveland. Mel Harder was pitching. The Clevelands led 3-1 and the Browns were at the plate in the ninth. A Brownie got on base. Judnich got him off with a home run that tied the score. The Browns pushed across another and won.

Simply speaking, and quoting the veteran Brown scout Ray Cahill: "The kid's got all the tools."

Kelly's Float Away Captures Dania Purse at Tropical Park

Longest Shot In Field Wins To Pay $21

Jockey Paul Ryan Rides Victor, Scoring Double; Second Goes To Speed to Spare

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 5.—Five speed marvels started in the 5½ furlongs of the Dania Handicap here today, and it was P. L. Kelley's Float Away, the longest shot in the field, that reported on top to return $21.20 for $2. The Whiskaway gelding was timed in 1:04 3-5, a scant three-fifths of a second slower than the track mark.

Almost everyone considered it a three-horse issue, with such fleet-footed sprinter as Aerial Bomb, Speed to Spare and Calory commanding virtually all the respect. Speed to Spare was headed right on the wire while beating Aerial Bomb by a half-length for the place. Calory, which broke slowly, could only top Big Chance.

Johnny Gilbert, who appears to have regained his top form, sent Speed to Spare right to the front. Aerial Bomb was the pursuer. The mare trailed the leader by two lengths along the back stretch, then cut down a length of the gap around the bend. It still looked like a two-horse race a furlong from home. Then Ryan brought Float Away along on the outside from third place. The long shot picked up the two faster beginners in a thrilling finish as Calory failed to become a menace.

†Allan T. Simmons entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENERAL JEAN (entry), $3.90, $2.50, $2.90; BOLD QUESTION (entry), $2.50, $2.90; IRISH IVY, $3.50.

GENERAL JEAN got going rapidly, crossed before the field going to the turn and drew clear. He bore out entering the stretch, carried his stablemate wide, but continued with determination to gain the decision. BOLD QUESTION, crowded back at the start, recovered quickly and went into contention with a rush. He was forced out turning for home, but came on and just failed to last. IRISH IVY, a forward factor from the start, easily held the others safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:31. Winner, Grant Thorn's br. g. (9), by Son of Battle—Little Birka. Trained by H. Scharman. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:11⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE B., $7.20, $4.10, $2.70; PARI-ERNEST, $6.40, $3.30; GREENY, $2.60.

DOUBBLE B. held his opposition safe for speed and, rated in front, had something in reserve when placed to pressure to hold PARI-ERNEST safe. The latter rated off the early pace, moved up stoutly on the outside entering the stretch, but could not overtake the winner. GREENY, clinched back in the opening furlongs, showed with good courage when placed to punishment.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 3:59½. Winner, P. L. Kelley's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOAT AWAY, $21.20, $6.10, $3.70; SPEED TO SPARE, $3.00, $2.50; AERIAL BOMB, $2.90.

FLOATAWAY, going forwardly on the outside in the early stages, closed courageously through the stretch and wore SPEED TO SPARE down in the last strides. SPEED TO SPARE set a fast pace while saving ground. He appeared the winner until the final 50 yards and then faltered suddenly. AERIAL BOMB, in close pursuit of the pace from the start, bung when the real test came.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:29. Off at 4:29½. Winner, T. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIRPOST, $12.20, $6.80, $5.70; ONE TIP, $9.30, $7.30; SPOT PASS, $5.20.

AIRPOST, away stoutly, moved up rapidly on the outside approaching the half-mile pole, disposed of ONE TIP rounding the turn and held away to the end. ONE TIP broke alertly, opened up a good lead in the early stages, but was no match for the winner. SPOT PASS, a forward factor throughout, had no excuses in the running.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 4:58½. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOSE TO, $24.30, $10.40, $6.00; DRUDGERY, $4.80, $3.30; PRINCE DEREK, $3.80.

CLOSE TO, displaying startling improvement, forced a swift pace and raced DRUDGERY into defeat. He opened up through the stretch, but was doing his best at the end. DRUDGERY held his opposition safe for speed and was raced in front, but was no match for the winner and outlasted PRINCE DEREK in the final drive. The latter steadily bettered his position and finished steadily.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:27. Winner, E. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAY JUDGE, $4.20, $3.30, $2.60; REBUTTAL, $7.20, $4.20; PLUSHING, $3.70.

SAY JUDGE, much the best, was buffeted about in the early stages, got through between the leaders entering the stretch and drew out easily. REBUTTAL, moved up stoutly rounding the lower turn, but lost ground. He held on tenaciously when straightened out to outstay PLUSHING. The latter took command midway around the last turn, but faltered when it came to a drive.

At The Post

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

We may get more action from the Vanderbilt Stable this year than last. The big barn sent few horses postward in Maryland last season but he has a small army of both youngsters and veterans getting ready for the races. Vanderbilt has, in New World, a colt which possibly could win both the Kentucky Derby and the Pimlico Preakness of 1941, but there is some doubt whether he will send this son of Discovery—Sunny Sal to the post for either classic.

New World was not too rugged as a yearling. He did not make his 2-year-old racing debut until July of last year when he was a 7-to-10 favorite at Empire City, and won without difficulty.

At Saratoga, in his next start, he finished second to Whirlaway. Next out he defeated Whirlaway, turning 6 furlongs at Saratoga in the sizzling time of 1:11.

On to Belmont. Our Boots whipped him in a tuneup for the Futurity. In the Futurity itself, he was out in front until about a furlong from home. Then Our Boots, King Cole and Whirlaway caught and passed him and New World finished fourth.

His final race of the year was run at Laurel. He won easily, then was shipped back to Sagamore Farm for wintering, with a record of three victories, one second, and one third in six starts—earnings $17,165.

New World does not appear to be a colt which responds quickly to early spring training, and for that reason, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt may skip the Derby and the Preakness with him—and maybe he won't. It all depends upon how this big son of Discovery, resembling his sire greatly, goes about his training in late March and into April. BILL.

First race—I'm going to take SAM HOUSTON in the day's opener for juveniles. That No. 1 post position will be right up his alley. EASY CHAIR comes from a good barn and will have Arcaro to do the booting. WALLINGFORD for the show end.

Second race—COUNT ELEVEN could be the right one in this rather open sprint. Must show a best effort but I'm going to string along. MIXWELL has speed and should be a threat. MORSTEP has a high figure and belong with this brand of company.

Third race—SILVER VOICE may take down the major portion of this purse. I expect a lot of price and a lot of running. Jockey Berg has the mount. OKABBIT has been racing well and will be a keen factor. OLD FRIEND to take care of the others.

Fourth race—SYL'S BETTY seems to have found the right spot in this field, and will have the saddle help of Conn McCreary. CUCKOO MAN and WANNA HYGRO are likely to offer contention.

Fifth race—BALLOTER should go well in company of this caliber. Likes the route and the weight is about right. SIRASIA has speed and may be helped by the post position. NO SIR loves the track.

Sixth race—DINGMANS meets a field of cheap ones in this distance affair and could be the right one. MERITORIUS gets in 1 light and probably will be along in time

Evelyn Alexander Stars; Betty Ott Tallies 5 Goals At Ritchie Gym

Hyattsville and Mount Rainier girls swept into the finals of the Metropolitan Interscholastic Basketball Tournament last night by virtue of victories over Montgomery Blair girls and George Washington High of Alexandria, respectively, at Ritchie Coliseum.

Evelyn Alexander provided the winning margin for Hyattsville when she tallied 4 points in the waning minutes of the game to give her team a 23-19 advantage over Blair.

In the other encounter Mount Rainier's Betty Ott scored 5 field goals which aided in the defeat of George Washington girls, 16 to 14.

The winners, who met in the championship round of the Hyattsville Gold Cup Tourney last week, will play in the finals Saturday at Tech High School gym. In the Gold Cup play Hyattsville upset Mount Rainier, 19-12, and by so doing snapped a 19-game winning streak of the Mounts.

Mount Rainier has a season record of 21 won and 1 lost, while Hyattsville has won 19 and lost 4.

point late in the season and then suffered a protracted slump that brought his average down to .318.

Sanford did not hit well during a month's trial with the Nats last fall, but Harris is not holding that failure against him. "He came up to us weared and tired from the Piedmont League night ball, and I know he is a better hitter than what he showed us. He has to be with that kind of a stroke. He breathes power, and he's got a pretty good batting eye."

In Washington last season, Sanford's defensive play was adequate enough, but it is easily obvious that he does not compare with the clever Archie on defense. However if the Nats' feel a sore need of more power, then big Sanford undoubtedly will find his way into the line-up.

Buddy Lewis is playing third base daily in the Nats' drills, but he admits, confidentially, that he has no great liking for the job . . . Kid Elberfeld, an elderly little bantam who was Clark Griffith's third baseman at New York thirty-five years ago, was a visitor to the Nats' camp today . . . recalling that it was he who sent both Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis to the Washington club out of baseball schools he operated . . . Elberfeld lifts his trousers and proudly displays an ugly swastika-shaped spike wound dealt him by Ty Cobb in 1907 . . . "He went 6 feet out of his way to give me this," says Elberfeld . . . "First Baseman Mickey Vernon, who was not called to camp following hold out gestures, will be optioned to some Double A club this year in exchange for a pitcher the Nats hope to acquire.

The Ol' Haig Shows 'Em How With a New Kind of Club

pet. Boss, I'm overwhelmed and you know it takes considerable to overwhelm my 250-pound carcass. I feel like a guy who, after yelling "Kill the umpire" all afternoon, sees the arbitrator helping a blindman across the street. But I'm trying to make this too clever, Boss. What I mean is that I'm as unworthy of all this as Adolf Hitler is of the Nobel Peace Award.

I guess we will have to tell Brother Benton that we can't pass the buck. It is a clever idea but, naturally, I couldn't get very deep into the thing. In the first place, at a buck a throw that's higher than the Hialeah clubhouse. It might be a lot more chummy for Brother Benton and me to buy a quart and use two straws.

Then, again, the thing has other possibilities. Suppose we did exchange drinks and we each get a hangover. Then I would have to send him 10 cents for aspirin and he would send me back 10 cents for aspirin. What if he got the D.T.'s? Wouldn't I have to pay his cab fare to Gallinger Hospital and if I got the D.T.'s wouldn't he have to pay my way to Gallinger?

Then, for instance, suppose our wives (if he has one) couldn't see the great spirit of brotherly love involved and went to Reno and got divorces. Wouldn't it be ducky for me to pay his alimony while he was paying my alimony?

Someday a hearse would go by and only one us would be watching and he would say, "There goes a rumhead." It would be unfair to the other guy to be unable to say "There stands a rumhead."

No, Boss, we'll have to pass up that buck passing. Suppose 20 or 30 guys like Brother Benton started trading drinks with me. Imagine me becoming a bottle neck!

But regarding that Walter Haight Club. I'm going to sleep on the idea tonight and iron the whole thing out. I have a plan and I'll let you know about it tomorrow.

Always your duece,
POUNDS HAIGHT.

Harry Danning to Attempt Outfield for New York Giants

By International News Service

Miami, Fla., March 5.—A slight earth tremor was felt here today when Harry Danning, all-star catcher of the big leagues in 1940, trotted out on the grounds with a finger glove, as the new left-fielder of the Giants.

The shift, most important in baseball since Hank Greenberg was transplanted from first base to left field last season, was made by Manager Bill Terry after the 29-year-old Californian had signed his contract.

Danning had been holding out for $18,000 and his ready agreement this morning to turn over his mask and pad indicates that he got what he wanted.

This startling maneuver brings Ken O'Dea, 27-year-old upstate New Yorker to the forefront as first-string catcher with Gabby Hartnett as spot backstop. Gabby will catch Cliff Melton and Harry Gumbert. Morrie Arnovich, Joe Moore, Frank Demaree and Buster Maynard, left-field candidates are now substitutes.

"This will make us a better club," explained the manager. "Now we can have Harry in the line-up every day and the club has more power. The move is agreeable with Danning and I have told O'Dea that he will catch regularly from now on. I like his work and, when he is catching steadily, his hitting figures to pick up.

Buc Yannigans Win

San Bernardino, Calif., March 5 (AP).—A 390-foot double by Rookie Floyd Yount, of Newton, N. C., that bounced off the leftfield fence drove in Catcher Ed Fernandes today and gave the Pittsburgh Yannigans a 4-3 victory over the Regulars.

Pitcher Bill Clemensen, of Santa Cruz, who was only 21 last June and got his draft questionnaire earlier today in the mail, was the victim of the hefty punch.

New Yank Infield Works

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP).—The New York Yankees' new infield with Joe Gordon at first base and Rookies Gerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto shielding second got its first nine-inning tryout today in a camp game.

It wasn't as smooth as the machine-like setup of old, but it brought an expression of complete satisfaction from Manager Joe McCarthy.

Dodgers in Brief Game

Havana, March 5 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers warmed up with a four-inning camp game today for their forthcoming series with the Cleveland Indians which Cuban newspapers are heralding as a preview of the next World Series.

The Dodgers varsity, overwhelming victors against the New York Giants in three games last weekend, couldn't kid their teammates, however, and were whipped 3 to 2 when the "irregulars" splurged all their runs in the first inning.

A's Win, 7 to 6

Anaheim, Calif., March 5 (AP).—Sam Chapman's double scoring "Crash" Davis and Hal Wagner with one out in the ninth gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 7 to 6 triumph over Portland's Pacific Coast League team in the opening of the spring exhibition season for the American Leaguers.

The Athletics were forced to come from behind after the Beavers pounded Porter Vaughn for seven hits and four runs in the last three innings. Previously Chubby Dean and Rookie Rankin Johnson had scattered six Beaver hits.

Chapman had two other hits, to lead the winners at the plate.

Red Sox Hurlers in Shape

Sarasota, Fla., March 5 (AP).—The Red Sox pitchers indicated they were much more advanced than the batters today when the first intra-club practice game wound up in a six-inning scoreless deadlock.

Both teams, led by Coaches Frank Shellenbach and Hughie Duffy, were limited to two hits. Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney connected safely against the offerings of the Duffy hurlers—Norm Brown and Cecil Hughson, while Paul Campbell and "Skeeter" Newsome did the same against Frank Dasso and Bill Fleming, who shared the mound for the Shellenbach line-up.

Tribe Leaves for Cuba

Chisox in Bat Drill

Pasadena, Calif., March 5 (AP).—Chicago's White Sox celebrated the sun's reappearance today with a long round of batting practice. Venturing forth for a turn against the hitters were Pitchers Lefty Smith, out several days with a cold, and Johnny Rigney, who offered no complaint of an aching shoulder that marked an earlier effort.

Reds Hold Game Today

Tampa, Fla., March 5 (AP).—It will be "batter up" and "play ball" tomorrow in the first game of the Cincinnati Reds' training season, a regular and yannigan tune-up for the initial interclub meeting with Boston's Red Sox Friday.

Carl Williams, McGeary Pace Bank Pinmen

Earl McGeary, Hibbs, and Carl Williams, City Bank No. 1, were the leaders of the Bankers League at Arcadia, the first with top game of 150 while the latter captured the set with a 403 count. Hamilton took top team game with 608 while Riggs was best for the set with a pinfall of 1,751.

SOLDIERS HOME

The Soldiers Home League at Petworth discovered that "Izzy" Isbell's 140 top game and 375 set were the reasons his Anderson team took all three contests from Stanley Hall. The LaGarde boys won team top totals with 560 and 1,558. LaGarde leads, followed by Scott and Anderson.

The Southeast League's meet at Queen Pin was led by Dave Singer, Bantam Press, who had top game of 167, and Moe Mead, Brinkley's, whose 398 set led. Singer's 167 game and 389 set sparked an odd-game win over the Redmen despite Reed's 136-359. The Rosson Motor boys took team highs of 634 and 1,770 with Hopkins' 156-375 showing the way.

TEMPLE MINOR

Danny Palmer, Kavakos Grill, was the hotshot of the Temple Minor meet at Northeast Temple for his 151-401 made it possible for his quintet to take team highs of 604-1,725 and score a sweep over Camden Tavern as well. McKee Pontiac and Wolf's Market won all three from New Deal Men's Shop and I. C. E., respectively.

CIVIC LEAGUE

Leeth, Civitans, was high game and set roller in the Civic League at New Recreation, getting 147 and 368, respectively. The Silver Spring Lions won all three from Kiwanis No. 2—their twelfth win in the last 15 starts—and took team highs as well with 564 and 1,626.

RRB LEAGUE

The women of the Railroad Retirement Board at Arcadia were led by Ann Shannon, whose 123 game and 315 set sparked her Dixie Flyers team to top counts of 482 and 1,283.

ICE PALACE

The Ice Palace Industrial boys were paced by White, Better Tires, and Scott, Combustioneers, who had high game and set of 148 and 391, respectively, withthe latter's count helping his team to top game of 614, although they dropped the odd game to Irving's.

Georgetown Five Defeats G. W.

game. His most spectacular play was a backward pass he whipped to Jim Giebel who dropped the ball home for a snowbird.

George Washington's senior captain, Joe Comer, bothered by an ankle injury suffered in the St. John's game Monday, did not get into the game and to his dismay ended his campaign on the bench. Eddie Amendola scored 5 points in his farewell G. W. performance.

Bobby Gilham paced the Colonial point column with 10 points, while Matt Zunic started his scoring late, but managed to flip in three field goals to pass the all-time G. W. scoring record by a single point, with a 243 total.

The G. W. team on Monday, which routed St. John's with ridiculous ease, could not be recognized as the same club last night. When they went to shoot they were well guarded. They were blocked by the Hoya defense and when on the defense they could not keep up with the accurate side-court shooting or expert ball-handling of the victors. Roy McNeil, who played a grand game in Joe Comer's 30-minute absence against St. John's, was just another sub last night and Joe Gallagher came through with the best reserve performance for the losers.

Rizzi counted eight points in his swan song, scoring one of those side-court pot shots that beat G. W. and two more when he went in under the basket for snowbirds that he made look easy.

The Hoyas were more accurate from the foul strips, dropping nine out of 13 while G. W. made only six out of 14, losing several precious points. G. U. made 16 of 68 shots and G. W. 14 of 57, a slight difference that does not tell the story of the game that was Georgetown's all the way.

The victory concluded a fine season for the winning dribblers, whose road defeats to three strong teams and Fordham could be attributed to not-too-good schedule making. G. W. chalked up the best record in the school's history but any time it loses two to its intra-city rival the season falls far short of a success.

George Washington University Freshmen gained undisputed possession of the city's frosh title by routing the Georgetown Cubs, 44-27, in a preliminary. The Colonials took a 30-17 lead at half time and coasted home to an unbeaten season in competition with other District first-year clubs. Jim Rausch scored 16 points for the winners.

Picco Receives Grid Trophy at Game

John Picco, junior end on the G. W. football squad from La Salle, Ill., received the Omicron Delta Kappa Trophy for the most valuable player on the team at half time. DeWitt Bennett, professor of public speaking at G. W. U., made the presentation.

The varsity squad selected Picco, who was one of the outstanding ends in this section last year, for the award.

Jimmy Bivins Beats Yarosz

Bivins weighed 174 and Yarosz 168.

The Cleveland Negro, victor in 20 of 21 professional fights, landed the harder blows, although he was consistently outboxed by the former world middleweight champion.

Bivins picked up his biggest margin in the third and eighth rounds, when he staggered Yarosz with left hooks. In the eighth Yarosz slipped to one knee after taking one of the southpaw punches.

A. A. U. Fights Hit Peak Tomorrow

The District Amateur Athletic Union's boxing tournament approaches its peak at Turner's Arena tomorrow night when novices advance into the semifinal and seniors into the quarterfinal rounds with 20 bouts at Turner's Arena at 8 o'clock.

Three senior battles and 17 novice exchanges are to comprise a card that should bristle with action and produce its full quota of upsets and short order knockouts.

Neighborhood rivalries and individual feuds will be the magnets that are expected to attract far and away the largest crowd through the turnstiles yet to witness the tournament this season.

Pavone vs. Shreve

One of the hottest senior battles of the tournament is scheduled at 147 pounds when Lewis Pavone, of the St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, boxes Alan Shreve, of the Merrick Club.

Shreve was one of the hits of the recent Golden Gloves tournament and Pavone is conceded a good chance of taking down the welterweight crown.

A light heavyweight bout involving Bill Smith, of the District National Guard, and Taylor Miller, unattached, also should produce plenty of fireworks. This bout was postponed last week due to Smith's illness.

Adam Hats Beats Census Five, 52 to 51

Adam Hats pulled out of a nine-point half-time deficit to win, 52 to 51, over Census last night in the Recreation League feature at Tech gymnasium. Hedding scored 21 points for the winners.

O. A. S. I. scored, 32 to 23, over Postoffice Department, while Sixth Presbyterian took a low-scoring affair from Immigration, 17 to 14, as Roschlau made 13 of the winner's 17 points.

N. Y. Central Net Leaps to $11,265,084

By the Associated Press

New York Central Railroad Co., including all lines operated under lease, reported yesterday in its preliminary statement net income for 1940 of $11,265,084, or $1.78 a share, compared with $4,509,296, or 70 cents a share, in 1939.

F. E. Williamson, president of the road, reported to stockholders "During 1940 the company experienced an encouraging improvement in business. The net financial results were the best since 1930.

"Total operating revenues were $370,545,875—$29,459,167 or 8.6 per cent greater than in 1939. All transportation revenues other than passenger were better than in the preceding year.

"Freight revenues increased by $30,143,393, while passenger revenues declined $2,000,672. Commodities of all kinds, except agricultural products, moved in substantially increased volume.

"A notable increase was in manufactures and miscellaneous loadings, the revenue from which increased 15.25 per cent . . .

"The improvent in business experienced in 1940, which has been maintained thus far in 1941, encourages us to look forward to results as good or better in the current year."

Burroughs Adding Machine Co.

Burroughs Adding Machine Co., (parent company only) reported net profit for 1940 of $3,146,348, or 63 cents a share. A comparable basis for earnings in 1939 is not available, but in that year the parent company and subsidiaries reported net profit of $2,200,814, or 44 cents a share. Excluding the dividends from foreign subsidiaries, the 1940 net profit was $2,482,069 compared with $1,209,248 in 1939.

American Radiator & S. S. Corp

American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation and domestic subsidiaries reported for 1940 net profit of $7,349,011, equal to 70 cents a common share, compared with $3,712,193 or 34 cents, in 1939.

Railway Express Expands

L. O. Head, president of Railway Express Agency, announced yesterday the big delivery service was engaged in an automotive expansion program involving the outlay of more than $4,000,000 this year.

The company has ordered 2,867 new trucks, tractors and trailers added to its present fleet of more than 13,000 units. Orders have been placed with various manufacturers.

The expansion, he said, was "made necessary, in part, by increased business for national defense industries."

Gets February Record

The Lincoln Service Corporation, Washington industrial banking firm, showed a 52 per cent increase in loans during February, President Charles Delmar reported yesterday. Breaking all February records in the company's 10-year history, loans totaled $249,265, against $163,163 in the same month last year.

Rail Credit Agency Pays Off Another 2%

By the Associated Press

The Railroad Credit Corporation announced yesterday that a liquidating distribution of 2 per cent of its funds as of February 28, amounting to $1,460,219, would be made on March 31. Of this amount $1,268,209 will be paid in cash and $208,009 will be credited on carriers' indebtedness to the corporation.

This will bring the total amount distributed to $61,707,823, or 94 per cent of the original fund contributed by carriers participating in the marshalling and distributing plan of 1931. Of this total, $33,705,298 will have been returned in cash and $28,001,824 in credits.

American Rolling Mill Increases Dividend

New York, March 5 (AP).—Directors of American Rolling Mill Co. boosted dividend disbursements 10 cents a share by declaring one of 35 cents, payable April 5 to stock of record March 15. The last payment was 25 cents a share last December 15, prior to which stockholders had received nothing on the common since 1937.

Grace Issues Special Appeal To Bethlehem Steel Workers

Chief Defense Factor Is to Keep Wheels Rolling, He Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, today called on the corporation's 140,000 employes to put shoulders to the wheel and join the management in racing out over a billion dollars worth of steel, ships and other armaments for the Nation's giant defense program.

Grace, in a special message to employes accompanying the annual report to stockholders, said this year "our future way of life" depends "upon the speed with which industry carries out the armament program."

"It is to be regretted that once again world conditions make it vital for us to devote a substantial part of our production capacity to the manufacture of defense materials," he declared. "You all know how, in the years from 1906 to 1914 and again from 1918 to the present emergency, we worked to build Bethlehem as a manufacturer of the materials for peace-time industry.

"In times of national emergency, however, it is up to business institutions and organizations as well as to individuals to serve the Nation's interests in accordance with their abilities and capacities. Because of special skills, experience and equipment we have been called upon to handle a large share of the national defense work."

The "Beth Steel" chief added that "we are proud of the confidence which the United States Government has expressed in placing with us more than a billion dollars worth of national defense orders."

"Because the paramount factor in national defense is to keep production flowing, anyone who supports the philosophy of work stoppages is hampering national defense," Grace said.

"It goes without saying, therefore, that there should be no interruption in the national defense program in our plants.

"There is no cause for it. Our house is in order. Wages and working conditions are at the highest levels. As we have said before, it is our policy to pay wages at least as high and to provide as favorable working conditions as those prevailing in the same industry in the districts in which our operations are conducted. That policy will continue to apply to all employes, no matter to what organization they belong or if they belong to none at all."

Reports to stockholders and employes carried the corporation's 1940 earnings statement, previously made public. Net income for 1940 aggregated $28,677,524, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $14.04 a common share, compared with $24,638,384 or $5.75 a common share in 1939.

U. S. Foreign Trade Figures Corrected

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday that United States merchandise exports in January totaled $325,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 over December.

(Due to an error in an official Government compilation, it was incorrectly reported yesterday that the January total was $370,000,000.)

Imports totaled $229,000,000 in January, instead of $241,000,000, as previously reported. The $229,000,000 figure represented a decline of $24,000,000 as compared with December.

Average Stock Price Declines to $27.08

New York, March 5 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today reported the average price of all shares listed as of February 28 declined to $27.08 from $27.68 on January 31 and $31.96 at the end of February, 1940.

The 1,228 stock issues on February 28 had a total market value of $39,398,228,749. This compared with the same number of issues on January 31 having a total market value of $40,279,504,457. A year ago 1,236 issues had a market value of $48,068,132,499.

Chemical Firm Plans Issue Of Preferred

By the Associated Press

Monsanto Chemical Co., St. Louis, advised the Securities Commission yesterday of its intention to issue 75,000 shares of $4 cumulative preferred stock, series C, no par value.

The company said that the proceeds would be added to its cash funds but that it was not able at this time to allocate their use because the needs would be determined by changing conditions. It commented, however, that cash funds might be called upon for capital additions, developments and improvements to plants, processes and facilities and for the manufacture of new products or expansion of old products.

Smith, Barney & Co., New York, was listed as the principal underwriter.

Wheeling Steel Corporation, Wheeling, W. Va., filed with the Securities Commission a registration statement covering $30,000,000 of 3¼ per cent first mortgage sinking fund bonds, series B, due March 1, 1966.

Proceeds, together with part of $6,000,000 which the company proposes to borrow from banks, will be applied to the redemption at 105 per cent of $31,500,000 principal amount of 4½ per cent first mortgage sinking fund bonds, series A, within 60 days after delivery of the new bonds. The company said that it would add to its working capital that part of the bank loans not needed for the redemption. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York, headed a long list of underwriters.

Old Moorings Swept Away, Bankers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—Bankers were warned today that they must mold their operations to fit a changing world if they are to survive against new forms of competition.

This admonition was the recurring theme of speakers before the Eastern regional conference of the American Bankers Association.

P. D. Houston, president of the association and chairman of the board of American National Bank, Nashville, Tenn., told the delegates: "We have been caught up in a vast wave of centralization which has swept away many of our old moorings and greatly complicated our operations.

"The centralization movement will probably continue during the war emergency . . .

Dual Controls Cited

"During the last ten years, centralized national controls have been set up over various aspects of banking. These Federal controls have been superimposed on the existing State controls. New centralized agencies have been created, some to supervise and regulate and some to compete.

"With some of them we have to work; with others we have to compete. But we have to live with them all. And always we have to understand them and adjust ourselves to their existence and to their activity."

Gwilym A. Price, president of Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Co., Pittsburgh, said: "Every banker must consider the possibility that the world-wide war . . . will be followed by an equally tremendous period of reconstruction.

"In recent years, banks have lost much of the business which once was theirs. Some types of banking service have practically disappeared. New competitors have sprung up and have entered fields which we once regarded as safely ours.

Face New Problems

"Many customers who formerly depended upon us have learned to do without us. Banks face new and multiplied problems. We have moved out of a seller's market and into a buyer's market, and the transaction has not been pleasant . . .

"We must be ready to extend additional and more comprehensive services to larger and more varied groups in our communities. We must be ready to finance, not only for production, but also for distribution and consumption."

Bank delegates were present from Connecticut, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Week's Power Output 14% Ahead of 1940

New York, March 5 (AP).—Bettering the weekly figures covering February electric power output for the week ended March 1 showed a 14 per cent gain over the corresponding period last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The outturn was 2,825,510,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of .2 per cent over the previous week's 2,820,161,000 kilowatt hours.

Market Head Asks Shakeup To Meet Crisis

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—William McChesney Martin, Jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, told members of the exchange today Wall Street faced a worse crisis than when he assumed office three years ago and proposed a further centralization of the exchange management.

Making what he called a "valedictory" address, Martin suggested a reduction in the number of exchange governors from 33 to 15, elimination of committee activities to trained, paid administrative officers.

The 34-year-old head of the exchange has indicated he would resign in May to answer the call for military training.

Discussing the causes of the present low volume of trading, which he said was the smallest in exchange history in relation to the number of shares listed, Martin said the reasons went deeper than the imposition of Federal control of organized security exchanges.

He said he favored Federal regulation and considered present members of the Securities and Exchange Commission men of "good will" in their attitude.

Nevertheless, he charged the SEC acts were being administered by Government officials ignorant of basic security market procedure.

"Wall Street has moved to Washington," said the young exchange president as he talked earnestly to several hundred members gathered in the assembly hall of the exchange after the close of trading.

But, he added, Wall Street could be brought back to the financial district from Washington if the members would make an intelligent, long-term effort to preserve the free market, understand its public responsibility and seek determinedly to avoid a return to old practices which brought down public criticism on the exchange.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—After holding steady during most of the session, except for occasional fractional gains in spots, wheat prices sagged about a cent in late dealings today and closed ¼ to ¾ cent lower than yesterday's early drop initially recorded. Chicago experts forecasting that another surplus wheat harvest is in the making helped to depress prices. Reports of moisture at several points in the Southwest and of a contraction in export business also were bearish factors, but offsetting these was evidence of increased British takings of Canadian wheat.

May wheat closed at 82⅞@82⅞, and July at 78⅛@78¾, at the low point of the session. Corn was 1 off to up, May 61¼, and July 61@60¾; oats ⅛ off; barleys unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye unchanged to ⅛ off and lard ⅛ higher.

Corn prices advanced ¼ to ⅜ cent at end stage, September contracts showing most strength. Some of the buying was credited to shorts and forwarders. Although bookings to arrive totaled 183,000 bushels and receipts 134 cars, arrivals at the 12 principal terminals were sharply less than a week ago. Government efforts to encourage private construction of grain storage facilities attracted attention.

Stocks Slip Minor Fractions in Dull Dealings; Traders Hug Sidelines on Many Uncertainties

New York, March 5.—Stocks slipped irresolutely lower today in a listless, worried market. With virtually the sole strength exhibited among a few specialties and miscellaneous manufacturing issues, prices generally declined by minor fractions.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stock was off two-tenths of a point at 40.8. The volume of trading, 283,000 shares compared with 307,890 yesterday, was the smallest for any weekday since last September 13.

The chief brakes on trading operations were the uncertainties of the Balkans, the Far East and likely new taxes and the continuance of debate on the lease-lend bill. Traders said they were unable to adopt definite stands in the face of such obstacles.

On the other hand, a ray of optimism was seen in the quick subscription over the counter last night of 200,000 shares of United States steel common at 57. The opening found the stock quoted at 57½ but the session closed with the price 56⅞.

Other issues closing at reduced quotations included Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Boeing, United Aircraft, Eastman, Westinghouse, American Can, American Smelting, American Telephone, Great Northern Preferred and Texas Corp.

Among the derelictory gainers were Owens-Illinois, Allied Chemical, General Electric, Public Service of New Jersey, American Rolling Mill, Loft & Douglas Aircraft.

In the Curb, where 61,000 shares were traded compared with 83,000 yesterday, declining issues included Aluminum Co. of America, Lake Shore Mines, Pennsylvania Water & Power and Sunray Oil. On the upside were Singer Manufacturing, New England Telephone, Jones & Laughlin Steel and Humble Oil.

Rails were virtually the sole advancing issues among corporate bonds. Commodities generally moved higher, with cotton ahead 10 to 60 cents a bale at the close. At Chicago, wheat ended ⅞ to 1 cent a bushel down and corn ⅛ cent down to ⅛ cent up.

Goodyear Aircraft To Erect New Plant And Employ 5,000

Akron, Ohio, March 5 (AP).—Goodyear Aircraft Corporation announced today construction would start almost at once on a new plant to employ about 5,000 persons on building all surfaces, wings and fuselages for Martin bombers.

The corporation, a subsidiary of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., will supply body structures while Chrysler Corporation will build the motors. The planes will be assembled in the Glenn Martin Co.'s new plant at Omaha, Goodyear Aircraft said.

While Goodyear Aircraft gave no details on cost or estimated production to be achieved by the new plant, Chrysler's president K. T. Keller said recently the joint Goodyear-Chrysler-Martin effort should produce 100 B-26 bombers a month, a figure which he said was better than any known production in any German bomber plant.

Wool Production Sets New Record

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that the 1940 production of wool in the United States totaled 449,783,000 pounds with a local market value of $110,058,000.

The production was the largest on record. The income, however, was exceeded in five other years.

Of the amount produced, 387,763,000 was shorn wool and 62,020,000 pounds pulled wool. In 1939, shorn wool production was 377,397,000 pounds and pulled wool production was 54,500,000 pounds.

The department said the local market price of shorn wool averaged 28.4 cents per pound compared with 22.3 cents in 1939.

Sears Reports Sales Up 22% in Month

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—Sears Roebuck & Co. today reported gross sales of $19,991,559 for February, compared with $40,855,743 during February, 1940, an increase of 22.4 per cent.

Edison Institute Expected to Bow, Register With SEC

New York, March 5 (AP).—Electric power circles said today it was probable the Edison Electric Institute would register with the Securities & Exchange Commission under the public utilities holding company act.

The Institute is a statistical, fact-finding and service organization for the electric power and light industry. The matter of its status with regard to the holding company act arose when one of its members, Engineers Public Service Co., listed dues paid the institute under the classification of service charges. This resulted in a SEC investigation into the nature of services performed by the institute and conclusions that the organization did properly come under the act.

It was understood in utility circles the SEC had notified the institute it would issue a show cause order unless registration was effected in the immediate future.

Rails' Nets Increase $96,305,086 in Year

Class One railroads of the United States in 1940 had a net income, after payment of interest and rentals, of $191,050,215, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. The net income for 1939 was $94,745,129.

Winter Wheat Crop Seen at 3-Year High

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—Preliminary estimates of probable United States winter wheat production, which crop experts who issued the figures said were as reliable as possible at this early date, indicated today the largest harvest since 1939 was in prospect.

Forecasts of four experts, who compiled data gathered in all parts of the belt, ranged from 605,000,000 to 625,000,000 bushels. Last year's crop totaled 589,000,000 bushels while average winter wheat production for the past ten years was 571,000,000.

R. O. Cromwell, one of the experts, estimated probable acreage abandonment at 10.7 per cent compared with 24.3 per cent last year and a 10-year average of 17.8 per cent. Nat C. Murray estimated the March 1 condition of the crop at 83.1 per cent of normal while Cromwell's condition figure was 83.5 per cent. A year ago condition was only 64.7 per cent and the average for the 10 preceding years was 76 per cent.

Contract Bridge

You could have won a par on today's hand, taken from the world Bridge Olympic of last year, if you analyzed and played it logically, as there are no frustrating, hostile distributions or card placements. At least, so the Olympic experts claim, though snags have been known to appear in these "fool-proof" Olympic deals, as our gimlet-eyed contributors have pointed out.

Opening lead: K ♡.

You are South, playing a five-diamond contract, and West opens with the king of hearts. Plan your play carefully so as to take eleven tricks, then check with the solution below to see if you win par.

How Five-Odd Is Made

Declarer wins his contract by immediately establishing the club suit. After ruffing the opening lead, he cashes the ace of clubs and follows with a low club. West wins and returns a trump (his best play). Dummy ducks this lead as the trump ace must be reserved for a club ruff which will prevent East from overruffing. South wins with a high trump and plays a club for North to ruff with the ace. Declarer trumps a heart on the way back and then ruffs a fourth round of clubs in dummy East can overruff, but the club suit is now established. South fulfills his contract, losing a club and either a club ruff or a diamond, depending on whether East uses his trump trick to ruff a club.

Stratton Accepts House District Committee Post

The House District Committee got another new member yesterday and also a potential traffic investigator. He is 27-year-old Representative William G. Stratton (Republican), of Illinois.

STRATTON

Stratton said that he is bewildered by Washington's avenues, circles one-way streets that change several times during the day. But at the same time he intimated that the problems facinate him.

"One time a street is one-way north," he observed, "and another time it is one-way south. I'm constantly finding myself going the wrong way."

Stratton said he thought some attention should be given to trying to make traffic move more smoothly than in the present stop-and-start fashion.

The new member also indicated he would be opposed both to District suffrage and increase in the Federal payment to the Capital.

Beach Divorce Action Dismissed

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Court, Tuesday dismissed the divorce action of James E. Beach, 21, and ordered Beach to support his wife and the child.

Beach accused Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 19, of misconduct with an ice man and declared he was not the father of her 18-month-old baby, John W. Beach.

Blood tests ordered by the United States Court of Appeals here failed to answer the paternity question one way or the other. From other evidence, Justice O'Donoghue determined that Beach was the father.

CARD OF THANKS.

EMERSON, MRS. BETTIE C. We wish to express our thanks and appreciation to friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tribute at the death of our mother and grandmother, MRS. BETTIE C. EMERSON.
MRS. EFFIE E. WALSH.
MRS. JOHN D. STEPHENSON AND FAMILY.

Lasting Protection
A CHAMBERS
ALL STEEL VAULT
$85
Built on the principle of the diving bell with no wooden parts or glued joints to loosen. Weighs 425 pounds. Sealed for complete protection.
Chambers is the largest undertaker in Washington and one of the largest in the entire world—conducting more funerals in one month than the average undertaker does in two years! Each family that turned to Chambers last year had the finest funeral service available and saved on an average of $50. This saving occurred because Chambers shares the advantages of his quantity buying with the users of his services.
FINE FUNERALS INCLUDING CASKET AS LOW AS $95
COPPER CASKET Complete Funeral $425

Listen! with Glynn

A gentleman, name of C. J. Rice, of Baltimore, had as many callers as he could handle comfortably on a recent Thursday evening. It all started when he innocently wired CBS's Maj. Bowes in New York during the "Original Amateur Hour" that he'd buy a Chrysler car from the first salesman to come to his door.

To give you an idea of the enterprise of one Chrysler salesman—or maybe you could call it just plain luck—it was exactly three minutes after the Major read the announcement over the air that Robert G. Tyson, of Arbutus, Md., was at the Rice door, complete with order pad, Chrysler and everything.

The slightly amazed Mr. Tyson had been listening to the program on his car radio when the announcement was made and, much to his own surprise, found himself only a half dozen blocks away from the Rice address.

Fifty other salesmen called on Mr. Rice, however, within the next two hours, he estimates.

A New York friend of Frank Capka, who is a member of the theater crew at CBS's Hollywood station, KNX, wrote to Frank and, among other things, asked him if his mail was ever sent by mistake to movie director Frank Capra. He got his answer—the letter WAS sent by mistake to movie director Frank Capra.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — This Is Where He Came In — BY MILTON CANIFF

IT'S BURMA!... BUT THERE'S A MAID WITH HER! ...CAN'T BUST OUT NOW! —THE MAID MIGHT SPILL THE WORKS TO THE BIG GUY!
I'VE GOT TO TRUST YOU WHETHER I WANT TO OR NOT!... THEY WON'T ALLOW ME OUTSIDE THE BUILDING— AND I MUST GET SOME WARM CLOTHES —FOR A MAN!...HERE'S A LIST!—AND SOME MONEY!
...YOU CAN PROBABLY FIND A GUN SOMEWHERE! BRING THAT, TOO! I'LL MAKE IT WORTH YOUR WHILE! AFTER I GET THE THINGS PACKED, I WANT YOU TO DELIVER THEM TO THE PRISON CAMP....
...THIS MAY MEAN LIFE OR DEATH TO A FRIEND OF MINE— BUT THE BOSS-MAN MUSN'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT IT! UNDERSTAND?

TED!
SUE! I DIDN'T EXPECT--THAT IS-- I DIDN'T KNOW YOU WERE COMING DOWN!
OBVIOUSLY! I PLANNED TO SURPRISE YOU-- IT SEEMS I DID!
UH--THIS IS MISS MERVYN, YOU'VE HEARD ME MENTION, --I MEAN--THIS IS--PAT!

DONALD DUCK — Taken at His Word! — BY WALT DISNEY

WE'RE SORRY, UNCA DONALD, BUT WE WON'T BE ABLE TO PLAY OUR PIECE AT THE RECITAL TONIGHT! WE'RE SICK!
OH, YEAH? YOU'RE GOIN' TO THAT RECITAL IF Y' HAFTA GO IN AN AMBULANCE!
LOOK, UNCA DONALD! OUR BOWS MUST BE BUSTED!

MICKEY FINN — Taking No Chances! — BY LANK LEONARD

WHAT DID THE MAN WHO GAVE IT TO YOU LOOK LIKE, JACKIE?
I COULDN'T SEE MUCH OF HIS FACE, DADDY—HE WAS WEARING FUNNY GLASSES
I WOULDN'T OPEN IT HERE, JOHNNY!
JOHNNY! YOU DON'T THINK—

The Unready Republic

U. S. Naive on Causes of Crises

Ninth in a Series of American Defense.

If I had to pick the three ideas on which I found the most agreement from border to border of the United States during the past five months, I think I would put down these:

1. That the war is a moral issue—an old-fashioned struggle of "good vs. evil"—and that it should end in such a way as to enable civilization to get its old moral values back. Even people who believed that British imperialism represented "evil" in the drama felt this. A peace, they said, which gave Germany "justice," provided her with what she needed to live as a nation, would be the quickest means of restoring even the Nazis to "normal" moral balances.

2. That however it comes, the peace that ends this war should leave civilized peoples free to lead "normal lives" and pursue "normal progress" again, a good deal as they did before the furious international tensions of the twentieth century came upon us.

3. That in the United States certain social and economic changes are inevitable—though comparatively few people specified what changes. But that the changes chiefly should be of a sort which would restore past happy conditions in the republic or give more reality to its older traditions. People differed over which conditions they considered happiest and which traditions they preferred to see made flesh, but they agreed on the main points.

A world crisis was on, everybody admitted with more or less exhilaration or depression. But the overwhelming majority seemed to be thinking of it in essentially static terms. A world crisis, they evidently hoped, was something you got out of by salvaging what you could of what you had before the crisis.

"Scent of Old Values"

To be sure, there is nothing perniciously novel about such attitudes. More or less in this fashion the United States has faced most of its major "crises" of history. It launched its 1776 Revolution to recapture the colonists' British constitutional liberties. It fought the Civil War to "restore" the Union. We went into World War to "make the world safe for democracy," which, in most of the patriots' eyes, was a synonym for bringing 1913 back. The ideas and slogans with which Americans have characteristically aroused themselves to fight, or to make drastic changes in their ways of doing things, have generally had more of the scent of old values about them than of the challenge of brave new worlds.

Specifically, what do all these general statements mean in terms of the crisis of the 1940s? Or crises, rather since we have both international and domestic brands on our hands?

I suspect the best way to tell a necessarily somewhat subtle story is to list a few of the things which Americans in general as I met them, practically never without calculated prompting, talked about.

They never talked about world raw material supply problems, for instance. When the subject was forced on their attention, almost invariably they took a strictly orthodox stand. If Germany, Italy and Japan lacked metals, minerals, fuels and oil for their modern industries, they argued, their duty was to "do without" patiently until they could accumulate enough recognizedly "sound" currency and credit to buy them at the market prices. Any effort to hook up with supply sources by any but the conventional trade methods—barter deals, for example—stood on the moral scale somewhere between fraudulent purchase and burglary.

Even the occasional citizens who felt that the totalitarian states had a legitimate fighting issue in their exclusion from raw material sources proposed few basic solutions of the problem. Their remedy was simply for Germany and her allies to take the supply lines away from the British and make a "have not" power out of England. Practically no one I met, except an occasional professional economist or highbrow, seemed interested in the fact that access to raw materials has been an outstanding war cause between intensively industrial nations since the late nineteenth century. Or in looking forward to a post-war international rationing system in raw materials which might cut down the number of future "supply crises."

Barter a Crime

It was the same way about international currency adjustment problems. Overwhelmingly, the fellow travelers whom I lured into conversation on this topic seemed to feel that in "going on barter" in her foreign trade and in trying to base a currency on the national productive energy, Germany had committed crimes hardly less objectionable than her treatment of Czecho-Slovakia and Norway. Quite obviously, by sound American standards, a "have not" nation must stew in the juice of her fiscal troubles until she recaptures a strong international exchange position or accumulates a gold hoard.

And the same about tariff barriers. As a rule, my table and travel companions confessed that Europe's prewar multiplicity of prohibitive tariffs was senseless and dangerous. But virtually to a man they insisted that United States tariffs had to be maintained with only minor modifications "to preserve the American standard of living."

Now and then in traveling, I made talks to small groups on Latin-American relations. Whenever I mentioned the advantages the United States might expect out of improved living standards for the people below the Rio Grande, someone would get up and ask, in effect where was the money coming from and if it wouldn't really end up in our paying a lot of down-and-out peon's grocery bills. Sentiment on this point was rarely unanimous, but there was pretty general agreement that people "abroad" might more sensibly content themselves with the standards they had than struggle with each other over the supplies which might improve them. In the back of their minds there often seemed to be an instinctive rationalization that "foreigners," by choice, lived on the "wrong side of the tracks" and had no moral right to living standards above a low frugality level.

Neither did people talk about the world-wide use of mandisplacing machinery or the loss of world frontiers as factors in world crises. Sure, there was unemployment in Europe. Sure, there was no more cheap land and easily obtainable jobs for immigrants in the Western Hemisphere. But if the Germans could only be licked or "appeased"—into abandoning their dictatorships and totalitarian ways, and would go back to a sensible "free enterprise" system like our own, eventually most of these difficulties would settle themselves.

Superficial Views

There were plenty of glid suggestions about what should be done as immediate safety expedients. People argued violently that "moral duty" or the need to speed up defense production called for an immediate war declaration; or that "war short of war" and aid-to-Britain would be enough; or that we could save our bacon best by throwing our influence in favor of a negotiated peace; or that the safest policy was to turn our backs on the whole struggle and defend our own hemisphere or part of our hemisphere. But in all these arguments and discussions, there was an overall assumption that Americans didn't need to bother their heads greatly about the factors which since the beginning of the century have been rolling up world wars and world crises. If we heleped the "goodside" win and the "bad side" lose, or we merely proved our superior virtue by shunning the evil there was on both sides, we should have done what was required of us in an essentially moral struggle and all would be well.

Then, when I tried to talk to people about the domestic economic crisis in which we have been floundering since 1929, I found that they were clothing it, too, in the costumes of good old-fashioned moral drama. The sharecroppers and tenant farmers were seldom excited about better land use projects. The main cause they cited, if they said they were getting along badly, was that the landlords and bankers were "grasping and selfish." Or workers wandered away from their grievances against new labor-saving devices to tell me that corporations and employers were "grasping and selfish." Businessmen, damning the unions in hotel cars and Pullman club lounges, insisted that the economic system was not functioning because relieters were "moochers" and labor was "grasping and selfish."

In practically every social and economic group, it was as if we could get rid of the main troubles which are hag-riding modern civilization simply by making some military or social or economic or personal antagonist "behave."

Insufficient Raw Materials

As I say, I do not know how to tell this story except to report on these attitudes. For 50 years excess populations have been rolling up in Europe with insufficient raw material supplies to trade in and live by and without overseas frontiers to send surplus men and women to. For a dozen years in the United States populations have been rolling up without jobs to live by and capital savings have been accumulating without outlets in investment.

Out of the one situation have come a succession of world wars and crises and out of the other has come a domestic economic crisis which has hamstrung the country's productive energies and is depriving from a fifth to a third of the population of decent living conditions. Fairly obviously, only a drastic economic reorganization of world society to provide industrially competent people with reasonable access to raw materials can check the rising ferocity of international crises or lessen their perils. Clearly, only an enormous and lasting stimulus to consuming power in American society can prevent the United States, in spite of the wealth of its physical resources, from slipping down toward the living standards of a "have not" power.

Yet overwhelmingly, as I sampled it across 12,000 miles of our continent, American thinking is fixed in its conclusion that these complicated adjustments can be brought about by getting back to old ways of doing things and by enforcing old, essentially individual moral codes.

I do not know of any other such convincing symptom of how firmly American minds are resisting, not merely the crises themselves; or of how unready the Republic is for the hard readjustments lying ahead in a postwar world.
